Carnation rooted cuttings, now ready.

Eclipse, our 1905 introduction. A pink carnation, lighter in color than Lawson, and of a more even and bright shade of pink. No objectionable shading or bleachings. A strong, free grower, $12.00 100; $100.00 1000.

Lady Bountiful and The Belle, the two best commercial white carnations of the present day. Both have received honors over competitors at the Fall exhibitions. $6.00 100; $50.00 1000; $112.50 per 2500.

Fiancee, a most pleasing shade of medium pink. No carnation has ever equaled the number of awards received by this variety. $12.00 100; $100.00 1000.

Cardinal, brilliant scarlet. A great improvement over Estelle. $12.00 100; $100.00 1000.

F. Burki, pure white. $12.00 100; $100.00 1000.

Richmond Gem, scarlet, $10.00 100; $75.00 1000.

DISEASED BOSTON FERNS.

I have several Boston ferns standing side by side, all having the same treatment, but some are spotted like the enclosed fronds and some are all right. I picked off all the spotted fronds but the new ones show spots, too. They are kept cool. What can I do to stop it?

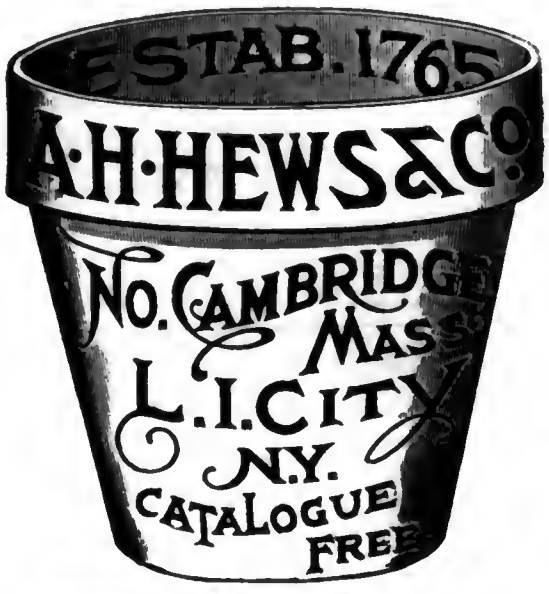
H. M. K.

These fern fronds look as though they were spotted by salty water, the specimens in question being young fronds that are scarcely half developed, but show decided spots of brown on either side of the center vein, the spots being from one-eighth to one-quarter of an inch in diameter. Ammonia from fresh manure might also cause such an injury though this is more likely to attack the tips of the fronds than the pinnæ.

But without further particulars regarding temperature and treatment it is rather difficult to form a definite conclusion for with a very low temperature and too much water when freshly potted, there is a possibility of injury to these ferns. A night temperature of 60 degrees and full sunlight at this season will grow sturdy Boston ferns, provided that they are potted in good rich soil, and given sufficient water.

W. H. Taplin.

FUMIGATING SWEET PEAS.



Will fumigating with tobacco stems injure sweet peas? M. E. G.

No, we never noticed that fumigating hurt the sweet peas, either leaf or flower. It may do damage if overdone and if you smoke with stems in the old-fashioned way the flowers will have anything but their delicious odor on the following day. Use the tin pie dishes and tobacco dust and you will escape that stale tobacco flavor. W. S.

PIERSON Water Steam BOILERS

Will reduce your coal bill. They did it for others last winter.

The Reason of this is found in the construction of the boilers. They have a larger amount of direct fire surface than other horticultural boilers. The flue areas are large and all parts are easily accessible for cleaning. They are adapted for the use of any kind of fuel.

We Manufacture Every Type of Greenhouse and Everything for Heating.

DREER SEASONABLE SPECIALS!

DAHLIA KRIEMHILDE

Dahlia Kriemhilde The most beautiful Dahlia among the Cactus varieties in cultivation today. Its delicate combination of colors is well reproduced in the colored plate on the cover of our this season's Retail Catalogue; its delicate shell pink petals, passing to white in the center, make it the ideal flower for cutting, an early and continuous bloomer, with strong, long stems. Field-grown roots, $1.50 per dozen; $12.00 per 100.

Dahlia Twentieth Century The most popular single variety for cutting. Roots, $2.00 per dozen; $15.00 per 100.

We make a specialty of Dahlias, and list 175 varieties in our current Wholesale List, the cream of all the various types, and the most up-to-date collection in the country.

The New Marguerite, or Daisy Queen Alexandra

We are now booking orders for delivery during the latter part of February for this charming new form of Chrysanthemum frutescens, or Paris Daisy; the flowers are from 2½ to 3 inches in diameter, of a pure white color, the greater percentage of these coming full double, not unlike an Anemone-flowered Chrysanthemum, though single and semi-double flowers appear on the same plant, all of which, however, are handsome. A plant that is certain to prove valuable, both as a pot plant as well as for cut flowers; 20 cents each; $2.00 per dozen; $15.00 per 100.

Phlox F. G. von Lassburg The Finest White Phlox to date; the individual flowers are double the size of any white variety now in cultivation, a strong grower and a free continuous bloomer; 25 cents each; $2.50 per dozen; $18.00 per 100. Phloxes are one of our specialties. If you require standard varieties we are in position to supply the leading sorts by the thousands.

DREER'S QUARTERLY WHOLESALE PRICE-LIST of SEEDS, PLANTS, BULBS, etc. is mailed to all Florists. If you do not have it at hand, please advise us and a copy will be sent at once.

HENRY A. DREER, — 714 — CHESTNUT ST. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

September Propagated Roses

Bride, Bridesmaid, Ivory.

This stock has been wintered in a temperature of 30 degrees. It could not be in finer condition. Better than winter propagated stuff. The above $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000. Get it now and pot into 3-inch and change your stock.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

BASKET STUDIES.

It will be easily observed that the more graceful forms will be found among the round or modified round shapes in baskets, and of these the high-arched handles fill to the best advantage. This follows the principle that long, easily curved lines most nearly approach the beautiful. This is why Nephrolepis Bostoniensis is far more admired than Nephrolepis exaltata. The lines formed by the leaf stalks of the former are longer and more easily curved than the latter.

Another good point in basket construction is the close resemblance in form of the basket outline and the form which the handle takes. In the basket used for the lily of the valley in the accompanying illustration the handle takes a modified circular form, which description also applies to the basket form. In the basket used for the violets the handle becomes a part of the basket proper, which is even better than the first.

One of the most graceful baskets ever manufactured and put on the market was shallow, round-bottomed, with a handle also round, which formed the lower framework of the body of the basket as it encircled the same.

A high-handled basket is most daintily and appropriately filled when there is ample unfilled space between the basket proper and the top of the handle. In other words, do not try to fill in long-stemmed flowers from the basket to the handle. Trim the handle itself, elaborately if desired. Fill the basket full below, but leave the space under the arch of the handle unoccupied, as is shown in the two illustrations herewith. On the contrary, when a low handled basket is used, fairly bury the handle in long-stemmed clusters of flowers or foliage.

The first basket is simply designed, both in color and trimming. The basket itself is crimson. The lower part is filled with valley with its own foliage and the handle is nearly covered with a garland of smilax on which are fastened Golden Gate roses. It is suitable for a reception table centerpiece, for display purposes, or for presentation. For the first two purposes no stemming or sphagnum is necessary. Place the valley in a flaring dish which will fit inside of the basket and let the flowers be in water. Do not use a rose bowl or any receptacle the mouth of which is confining or inclined to throw the flower stalks in towards the center rather than to allow them the outward tendency.

After filling in the body of the basket with the lilies and the valley, take a string of smilax of medium weight and fasten the heavy end near the lower part of the handle on the left side. A little twist of fine wire will be sufficient to do this without allowing it to be seen. Then carry the smilax up to some point on the top edge of the basket about one-third of the way around toward the right and fasten again lightly to the rough surface of the basket. From this point drop a drape in the smilax down to the base of the outside of the basket and up to the point where the handle touches the top edge of the basket on the right. Secure the smilax here in the same manner as before and follow the handle upwards around the top to a point slightly more than half-way down the handle on the left side. This will be about the tip end of the string. Let it drop where it will of its own accord, leaving a portion of the handle bare. Part of the way around the handle let the smilax drop a wee bit from the handle and in other places let it come over the handle. Secure here and there with tiny wrappings of wire. You often have at hand Golden Gate roses which you cannot coax to hold up on account of weak stems. Here is the place for them. Here and there on this smilax garland fasten these limp roses and let them have their way, as is shown in the first picture. Next place a rosette of four or five wood ferns against the left side of the handle, with their stems inside of the dish which contains the valley.

If the above is wanted for presentation the valley or other flowers which fill the basket proper will need to be stemmed and planted in sphagnum, after the manner of design work. Wired picks can be used, the foliage on about half of the sprays being stemmed in with the flowers. The entire valley stalk as it is cut makes too thick a stem to be wired to a pick. The outside sheath should be removed, leaving only the inside stalk. Wire this carefully, as the tender stem breaks easily if wrapped too tightly. Both sides of the handle, front and back, should be treated the same, or the garland brought round and round the handle, the latter being the less desirable of the two.

In the second illustration the same simple design is followed in conformity with the shape of the basket. The basket is oval in form with birch bark cover. The violets are placed in a small vase of water in the basket. In this case, also, circumstances may require the flowers to be stemmed and inserted in sphagnum. Only the natural violet foliage is used here for green. The small bunch of violets tied on the left side with light violet cord completes the basket. The stems in this bunch are their whole length and they thereby add to the decoration of the handle. The color scheme of the dark violet of the flowers, the light violet of the cord and the grey of the birch bark basket is particularly soft and pleasant. The style of basket and its size make a good centerpiece for a small luncheon table or for gift purposes. Gertrude Blair.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Care for the Lilies.

There will be no excuse for any belated Japan lilies this Easter. As we had no trouble in getting the great majority into bloom three weeks earlier last year, there should be little need of strong forcing this season. I don't care how many years you have been forcing lilies, there is always a little anxiety whether you are too early or too late. And it is this anxiety that makes the successful man. The weather has considerable to do with it, also how forward they are now. If eight to twelve inches high now a night temperature of 55 degrees should do very well for another month.

Last year we advised our friends about this time to select 300 or 400 plants that were so backward that it would be impossible to get them into flower by Easter and put them away in a very cool house and let them come along for Decoration day. They did a few, but not half enough. These lilies in quantity fall pretty flat a week or two after Easter, while at Decoration day there is a good class of customers who will pay Easter prices for a fine bunch of lilies.

It is too early yet for these plants to be much troubled with greenfly, or rather fumigating with tobacco dust will keep them down, but soon the time will be here when the fly will be deep down in the rosette of leaves, looking for those small, tender buds that are not yet visible and there is, I think, no doubt that the twisting and splitting of the petals in the mature flower are caused by the puncture of the aphis when the bud is very small. Nicotine extract sprayed into the crown will fix them. We have used this nicotine at a strength of 300 of water to one of the nicotine, but for the lilies would rather use it weaker, say 500 of water.

Start "Green Goods" Now.

It is a good time now to sow seeds of three most useful plants, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri and the old, every-day smilax. Don't buy the asparagus because you see it advertised cheap. Old seed is very dear as a gift and there are many complaints about its not germinating. Asparagus plumosus is in constant demand as a decorative vine in short sprays for finishing off a cluster of flowers. For fern dishes there is nothing surpasses it as a small, bushy plant, either alone or mixed with ferns. Of Sprengeri we never have too much. With large bunches of flowers it is indispensable and it can be grown along the edges of paths and in situations that would otherwise be vacant. But you must give it an abundance of root room and liquid manure. It may pay you to buy 100 strings of smilax when you need it, but it is very awkward to be without any on your place, and for a paying crop you want good strong 3-inch stock to plant about July 1.

Cinerarias.

You may be growing some cinerarias for Easter. We think we can remember it's introduction to the gardens of England, a wee small flower by the side of the present beautiful blossom. Free growing, cold blooded plant as this is, it is easily made a failure. Neglect water and you will lose its best foliage. Overwatered and it will go right off dead like grandfather's clock, "never to go again." And the greenfly is ever ready to feast on it. In a commercial place there is no excuse for this, as plunging the pots in tobacco stems and renewing them every few weeks will effectually keep the greenfly away. There is at present a very fine lot of cinerarias in bloom at our North park and John Cameron, the foreman, tells me they were never fumigated. About 45 degrees at night is plenty warm enough for cinerarias. William Scott.

A BLACK FLY.

We have a black fly in our greenhouses similar to the housefly but much smaller. Fumigating with tobacco stems or nicotine extracts seems to have no effect on it. It seems to speck the lily blooms badly. How can we get rid of it? D. A. L.

We know of no fly at all comparable to the common housefly that infests a greenhouse and if they do not trouble the plants they do not belong to the aphis family. It may be worth mentioning that the writer many years ago brought the greenhouse fumigating pot into a kitchen, thinking to destroy the lives of 10,000 houseflies. We filled the old kitchen so full you could not see the end of your nose, yet the flies only enjoyed it.

The hydrocyanic acid gas must destroy these flies, big or little, as it does everything that has lungs. Do not be afraid to use it. The formula has been given in these pages many times, but once more here it is: One pint of water, one pint of sulphuric acid. Mix in a gallon butter jar. Add to the above two and one-half ounces of cyanide of potassium. These quantities are for 2,000 cubic feet of air space in the house, so the number of jars you need will depend on the size of the house. It should be done after dark and keep the ventilators closed all night. There is not the slightest danger, but do not tarry. Just drop the little parcel of cyanide into the jars and walk along towards the door; neither will it injure any plant. W. S.

CARNATIONS

A GOOD WHITE.

Can you suggest a good, free-flowering, medium sized white carnation to grow? I find Norway and Queen Louise too slow in blooming after the bud forms. I want a kind that blossoms quickly and freely, like Scott or Lord in pink, one with good stem and not liable to burst. C. L. W.

There are several good varieties on the market now, especially among last year's new ones. The best of the old ones are, perhaps, Her Majesty and Boston Market. Much better than these however are Lady Bountiful, Vesper and Moonlight, all of which are as free, besides being much larger.

Regarding varieties developing slowly or rapidly, it might be of interest to relate our experience in a few tests we made last fall and it was a surprise to us how little difference there was in the time it took some fifteen varieties to develop their buds. On September 6 we selected and labeled one bud on each variety, choosing shoots that showed buds in as near the same stage of development as possible and just as young as possible. The buds were just plainly visible. Here is how they developed and were ready to cut: Her Majesty, October 7; Moonlight, October 9; New Daybreak, October 14; Lawson, October 8; Beatrice, October 8; Queen Louise, October 6; F. Hill, October 5; Lady Bountiful, October 8; Lorna, October 13; Indiana Market, October 9; G. H. Crane, October 13; Crusader, October 8; Innocence, October 8; Enchantress, October 7; The Belle, October 6; Adonis, October 14; Harlowarden, October 14; Floriana, October 10.

By this you will see that it took on an average or about five weeks to develop the blooms from the time the buds made their appearance. The difference might be even less than is shown here if it were possible to select the buds to a day, but that is impossible. Nor do the fullest blooms always take the longest to develop, as is shown by Enchantress against Adonis and Harlowarden. Of course this does not show any variety's capacity for producing a crop rapidly, as such a test must begin much earlier, but I was merely curious to know just how long it does take a bud to develop from the time it appears and the difference in time required by the different varieties. C. L. W. will notice that Queen Louise, of which he complains, was one of the first to bloom. Only Flora Hill was ahead of it.

A. F. J. BAUR.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Treatment of New Arrivals.

Cuttings of any variety you may buy of another grower need somewhat different treatment than those rooted on your own place, and this is especially true in the case of new introductions. The necessary handling in packing for shipment and delay in getting into soil, damages the tender roots to some extent and consequently these are apt to be slower in starting than if potted at once on being taken from the sand.

With a new variety for which the demand for cuttings is large, it is reasonable to suppose that the introducer is obliged to carry the temperature of his cutting bench a trifle high to keep pace with the orders, so perhaps the stock will be a little soft, but no harm will result if treated accordingly, giving extra close attention to shading, watering and spraying.

Some may call a rooted cutting any part of the plant, large or small, which has been inserted in sand and taken root, but it is questionable whether all could be called cuttings that are so inserted. I have always obtained the best results by purchasing unrooted cuttings and would advise all who have good facilities for propagating to follow this plan; we would hear less about its taking two years to get a new variety on a paying basis.

Be sure your soil is prepared well in advance, thoroughly warmed up and free from bone meal, wood ashes or chemical fertilizers. The best results may be looked for if pure rotted sod alone is used. Use clean pots and give the stock a bench worthy of its record. Cuttings of new varieties are of necessity higher in price than those of older sorts and every one is entitled to strong, healthy stock, but do not think because you pay $10 or more for a hundred cuttings that you can abuse them by potting in rich soil and rush along in a high temperature, with a view of obtaining more cuttings from the tops.

If you were present at the convention and were influenced by their appearance there, to invest in any new varieties, get all the information you can regarding their requirements, but remember you were viewing exhibition blooms, every one selected and grown with extreme care. If you succeed in growing blooms to score ten or fifteen points less, you should be satisfied.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

SHEEP MANURE FOR MULCH.

On page 465 of the REVIEW for January 19, H. B. G. asks about sheep manure as a mulch and Mr. Baur says to use a 4-inch pot of bone meal with a bushel of sheep manure and spread it on a half inch thick. At the same time Mr. Baur says to feed lightly. What would he call heavy feeding? We certainly should not venture to put on a half inch of sheep manure at one time. A good handful for every three plants will be sufficient. For a feed this season we have used the following mixture and are sure it is all right: One bushel well rotted cow manure, two quarts lime, two quarts wood ashes, four quarts bone. But don't make a mulch of it or it will show how strong it is. A. LAUB & SON.

A Birch-Bark Basket of Violets.

When I wrote my answer to H. B. G. I meant just what I said. A half inch of sheep manure will not harm your carnations if they are in good condition and need feeding. If they are not in good condition, then you had better not feed them at all. Perhaps I should have said a scant half inch, and no doubt it would be safer to use less rather than more than a half inch.

Many growers are needlessly afraid of sheep manure. While it is a much stronger manure than cow manure, yet it is not so strong as many imagine. Two years ago some of our men were mulching a bed of mums with cow manure. The material ran short when there were a few feet more to cover and instead of asking for advice, they finished it up with sheep manure applied one inch thick. When I discovered it I expected those plants to turn yellow and die, but instead they took on a fine dark green color and grew as well as any of the others.

Of course carnations will not stand as much as chrysanthemums will and I have never used over a half inch on them, but I have used that much without harm. A half inch of loose material is not much. You will find that most of it will wash into the soil in a very short time. Now, I also know that sheep manure will vary greatly in strength and it is always safest to experiment a little before putting a lot on the benches to see how much is right to use. We have used a good inch of sheep manure in the bottom of a 6-inch pot when potting calla lilies and visitors wondered what caused the plants to grow so strong after the pots were apparently full of roots.

I fear Laub & Son are like many others, laboring under the mistaken idea that sheep manure is a dangerous article to handle. I would advise them to experiment a little, just to find out for themselves how much sheep manure a carnation plant will stand, when the plants are in good shape—and they should be fed only when they are in good shape.

The composition Laub & Son describe is several times as strong as the sheep manure and bone as I recommended it and I certainly would not advise anyone to use more than a good heavy sprinkling of it. We prefer to use bone and manure without lime. The lime makes it act quicker and therefore makes it stronger at the beginning. A. F. J. BAUR.

TEMPERATURE FOR WATER.

Is water taken direct from the city mains at 40 degrees too cold at this time for use in watering carnations? What is a practical way of warming it?

J. W. M.

I do not think water at 40 degrees is too cold to water your plants with. In fact, a few years ago I noticed an account of some experiments made with water at various degrees and, if I remember right, the plants watered with water at about 38 degrees made the best growth of all, although the difference in any of them was slight. If you want to heat the water have a sort of a drum made of 5-inch or 6-inch pipe and about six to eight feet long. Attach this drum to your steam pipes and keep it full of steam when watering. Run the water pipe through this steam drum and you will find it tempered considerably after going through it. There may be better ways, but I have seen this method in successful operation.

A. F. J. Baur.

OUTDOOR CARNATIONS.

Please name the best summer blooming carnations for outdoors, say one white, one pink, and one red. L. M.

If I had to confine myself to three old varieties for summer blooming carnations I would choose Flora Hill for white, Crocker for pink, and Crane for red. However, we also grow Indiana Market and Moonlight for white and Beatrice for light pink. A. F. J. Baur.

A GOOD SOIL.

Please tell me what constitutes a good soil for carnations. K. H. B.

A soil suitable for carnations should be of a rather light sandy character, with plenty of fibre in it. This should be taken from the top spit of pasture land and should be put into a neat pile, with about one-fifth of decomposed horse manure added. This should be chopped up and turned over several times previous to placing it on the bench. R.

LEAF-MOLD FOR SOIL.

Last August I went to the timber, found some sandy land and scraped away the dry leaves and took about an inch of soil from the top of the ground and mixed it with black loam and manure two years old, one quarter manure, one-quarter black soil, and filled my benches five inches deep with the mixture. I set my plants in it the last week in August and I have had an abundance of flowers since Thanksgiving. I have carnations now three inches in diameter and stems twenty-eight to thirty-four inches long. The stems are stiff and erect, carrying the flowers upright. I tell you, they are nice! I am going to put them in next fall the same way again and I believe if anyone wants to try my experiment he won't lose anything by doing so. Alfred Runnion.

WHERE QUALITY IS WANTED.

I am growing carnations in a house 18x40 and want quality rather than quantity. I have Enchantress, Prosperity and Mrs. Lawson, which are doing fine. Other varieties, such as Patten, Manley and Golden Eagle, are fair. Would like a good white, as Wolcott bursts badly. I saw some blooms of The Belle which were fine but have never seen it growing. I must grow them all in one house. What varieties would you recommend? W. H.

You can hardly improve upon Mrs. Lawson, Prosperity and Enchantress in their respective colors where quality is the main object. You will find Lady Bountiful more satisfactory as a white than The Belle. Flamingo will give you a fine quality scarlet. You can tell better than I how they should be planted in the house, as you know which bed is the warmest. Lawson, of course, wants the most heat, while Enchantress wants to be grown cool, the others medium.

A. F. J. Baur.

SOIL FOR CARNATIONS.

I would like to ask if there is anything that could be done with the soil in the field that would be of any benefit in growing carnations? The soil is of a very hard nature, although I have put on a little manure every season. Would there be any danger of getting on too much for the carnations? Would sand spread on the land be of any benefit?

W. S. H.

Perhaps the best way to get your soil into a lighter, more mellow condition would be to manure it heavily and sow clover on it for a year or two. However, if you are obliged to use it this summer you must find some other way. Too much manure is not good, as it is apt to start stem-rot, but you need not be afraid to put on a good coat if it is mostly straw. It should have been put on and plowed under late in the fall, so it would be pretty well rotted before planting time. To spread on a lot of sand and plow it in might help some, but I think a good dressing of wood ashes will do more to loosen up the soil than the sand would. Also be sure it is well drained. All the manuring and doctoring will do but little good if the water stands on it much of the time.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Department of Registration.

M. Winandy, Chicago, registers Lizzie McKey, color scarlet red, size three inches in diameter, length of stem eighteen to twenty inches, strong and erect.

The Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co., Indianapolis, registers Coral, color peach blossom, very bright and showy, size three and one-half inches, slightly, fringed, very full and good strong calyx, vigorous growth and continuous bloomer. Allspice, color white, heavily striped with red, and petals edged with red. Size three and one-half inches, very full heavily built and unusually fragrant; very prolific, strong, quick, continuous growth. Candace, color pink, shade lighter than Lawson, size three and one-quarter inches, very round, well formed flower; an early and extremely heavy producer throughout the season, quick grower. Albert M. Herr, Sec'y.

CARE OF CUTTINGS.

The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., supplies the following directions, printed in its catalogue, for the care of young stock:

As soon as received from the distributer, they should be potted in 2-inch pots by experienced men, who must use great care and judgment. Too many young carnations are potted too deeply; that is, the root crown is buried from three-quarters of an inch to one inch below the surface of the soil. This is wrong. The root crown should not be more than a quarter of an inch below the surface of the soil; still they should be so firm that when watered they will not topple over. Use a soil that has never been in a greenhouse before. If your soil is heavy or on the clayey order, add clean, sharp sand in proportions that will permit of good drainage and easy action of the young, tender roots. As soon as potted, place in a house with a temperature of 50 degrees at night and not over 60 degrees in the daytime. Give them a thorough watering at first, after which great care must be exercised that they do not become too wet or too dry. Strong draughts of air should never be allowed to strike them, nor should they be exposed to the direct rays of the sun until they show signs of taking new root action and signs of growing or straightening up of the leaves. It is a good plan to use strips of burlap for shade during the lightest hours of the day, taking same away entirely as the sun disappears, leaving them exposed to all the light possible, except sunlight, until they have hardened up, when all shade should be taken away.

If these instructions are followed, it will be only a short time until you can turn the plant with the ball of earth out of the pot and examine the roots. If the bottom of the ball is well covered, it is a sign they are ready for larger pots or the field, as the case may be, according to the season.

A BELATED LETTER.

When William Scott, of Buffalo, found that his health would not permit him to attend the Chicago convention of the American Carnation Society, he acted on the suggestion of a member, and wrote a letter which was intended to have been read at the meeting. The letter went with some other unopened mail into the overcoat pocket of President Hartshorne, and overcoats not being in demand where meeting and lodging were all under one roof, did not come to light until after adjournment. Here it is:

Dear Mr. Hartshorne: Your telegram received. It always touches a soft spot when you have proor that distant friends have you in mind and hope for your health and prosperity.

You can hardly realize the keen disappointment it is to me not to meet you all in the marvelous city of Chicago. Of all interesting, instructive and socially enjoyable meetings that the year evolves, there is to me none so heartily enjoyed as the Carnation Convention. An aggregation of scientific, practical and earnest men intent on the development and improvement in culture of the glorious carnation! If the wonderful development of all desirable qualities in the divine flower during the past fifteen years cannot be attributed to the influence of our society, much of it can. It has stimulated men to make wise selections in crossing flowers. It has imparted to thousands the most up-to-date culture. Its annual display of blooms is an honest tribunal and if a flower does not come up to the standard required of the day it quickly passes into oblivion. Finally, it has impressed on a number of good men to concentrate their talent, skill and perseverance on the culture of the carnation, and when that occurs improvement and evolution must follow.

There are no foolish sports injected into the meetings to disturb the business of the convention and attract the light-brained brigade away from what they came to see and hear. Perhaps (I say guardedly, pernaps) some of the staid ones may retire to a secluded room and have a little game with a moderate limit, but that is no business of the convention, as it is usually after business hours, that pleasant time between business and bed time which Phil Hauswirth calls the "Go as you please period."

Had I the good fortune to be with you, I might have had the honor to say a few words. I had prepared a Magnificent (?) address; I regret for your sakes that you will miss it.

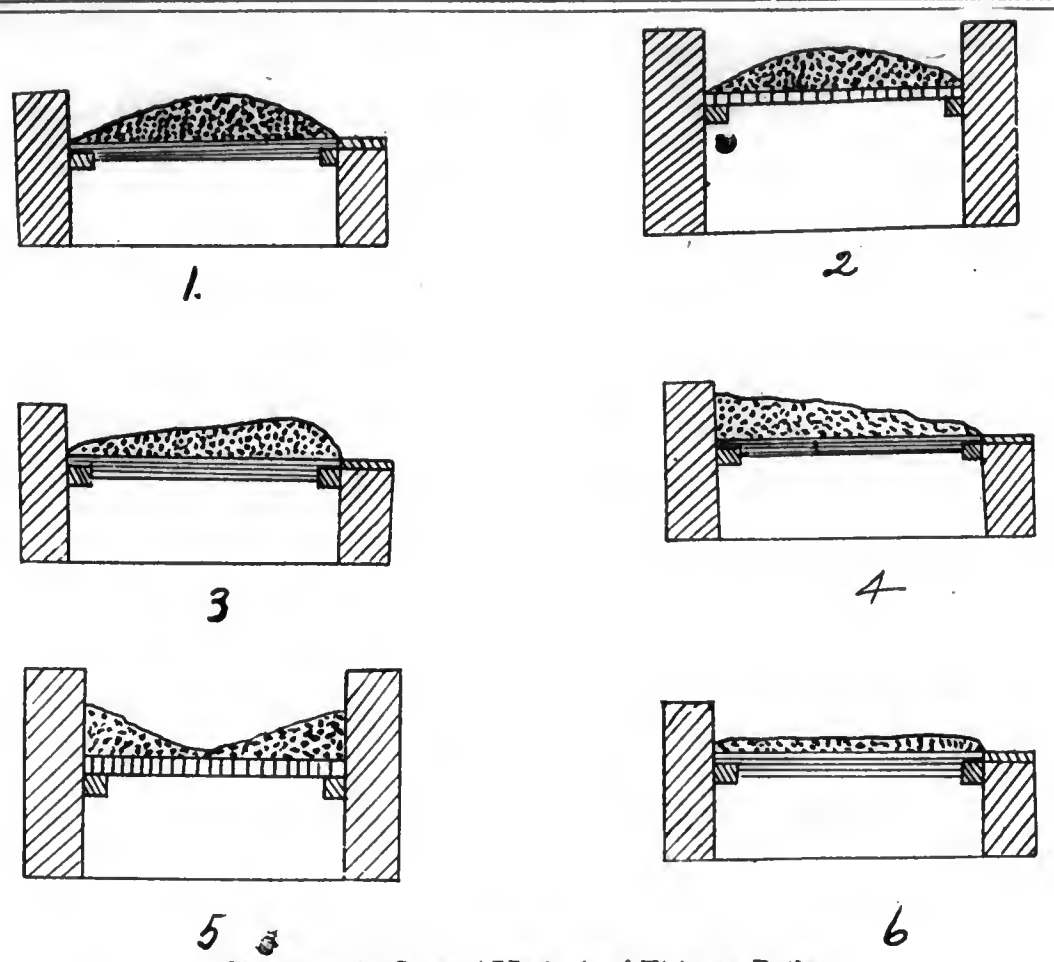
In a very neat review of the Detroit convention, Mr. Baur, of Indianapolis, referred to the splendid entertainment and banquet given by the Detroit men. He said some men could tell a most humorous story and then change with true eloquence to the beauties and influence of our moral calling. Of course he had in mind E. G. Hill. Continuing, he said other men could only stand up and string together a lot of alleged jokes and stories. That shot was undoubtedly meant for W. S., so I was going to surprise Mr. Baur by being serious. I was going to review the improvement in the carnation since the time we grew a few hundred each of La Purite, Edwardsii and President De Graw, which was the winter of 1872 and 1873, and I say that in the opinion of the writer you could count on the fingers of one hand all the varieties that have marked an epoch in carnation culture.

From the date quoted there were long, dreary years with little attempt to improve. True, there were many varieties a slight improvement on preceding kinds, but not enough to be startling or that could be grown successfully by the great majority of gardeners. I shall skip over many varieties that were widely grown. If I have not grown most aspirants to favor I know the career and reputation of the very great majority. From that day to this hundreds of varieties have arisen like the morning sun, passed quickly over the zenith of their fame and dropped into darkness. Numbers of others ended their career almost at their birth.

The first really great carnation to break the dark ages was Daybreak, which was sold by the raisers for the exorbitant price of $300. The next really great carnation was my namesake, a compliment by Messrs. Dorner that I shall always remember. Another six or seven years elapsed and then the greatest advance of all was sent out by Peter Fisher—the immortal Mrs. Lawson. Again in three years it fell to the skill of Mr. Fisher to give us the last carnation that I can say marked an epoch—the easily grown, grand Enchantress.

I think among the chosen few should be included the gorgeous Prosperity. Although not grown profitably by all, it has size and beautiful markings decidedly its own.

I am not unmindful that there have been several notable breaks in color: The well known Buttercup, but few could grow it. C. W. Ward's fine crimsons and Mr. Hartshorne's splendid and easily grown Harlowarden, but if I included those as milestones, then dozens of others would have to come in.



As for those not yet disseminated, proof of their being classed among the immortals is not yet given.

In conclusion, I sincerely hope that Fiancee, Robert Craig, Cardinal, Fred Burki and others may prove all that they appear at present, for there is in their respective colors great demand and need of them.

Hoping that the convention will be an unqualified success in every respect, and that the Chicago boys will not bankrupt themselves in their royal hospitality, I remain, Very truly yours,

WILLIAM SCOTT.

RUTHERFORD, N. J.—The business of Julius Roehrs has been put into a stock company to be known as the Julius Roehrs Company.

Showing the Several Methods of Firing a Boiler.

ECONOMY IN THE USE OF FUEL.

Practical florists and experimenters have given much attention to the construction of greenhouses. They have increased the size of the glass, thus materially lessening the number of sash bars necessary for a given area of roof. The old, cumbersome wooden frame has been replaced by pipe and steel supports. All this has contributed to improve the conditions of light for the plants. The relation of radiating surface to glass area to maintain certain temperatures is now being appreciated and carefully considered by commercial growers. The one problem which has been neglected, except during periods of extreme prices, such as during coal famines, is that of the economical use of fuel. This is one of the factors which must always be reckoned with and it is the one in which, through improperly constructed or poorly set boilers or by improper firing, more loss will occur than through any other single factor. The kind of fuel to be used in any case will be determined by the type of the boiler and the method of firing to be practiced.

In small plants, where hot water is used and where a special night fireman is not employed, it is almost an absolute necessity to use some grade of anthracite (hard) coal. Anthracite coal is the only grade that can be used in magazine heaters or in small fire box, cast-iron heaters to advantage. As a rule, however, it is not the most economical form of fuel. The price per ton is usually much higher for the larger sizes of anthracite than for bituminous or even for small sizes of anthracite. In steam generating plants where constant pressure is required and where a fireman is continually in attendance soft coal or No. 1 or No. 2 buckwheat anthracite is most used. Boilers which will properly use the buckwheat anthracite will also burn soft coal.

The comparative value of these coals is somewhat as follows in a steam generating plant: Semi-bituminous (soft coal) at 100 is equivalent to No. 1 buckwheat at 80 and No. 2 buckwheat at 68. The larger sizes of anthracite are not generally used to generate steam and relative values for comparison are not at hand. It is safe to say, however, that in generating plants its value would not be much in excess of the soft coal, ton per ton. It is evident, therefore, that everyone contemplating the installation of a heating plant should give close attention to the kind and cost of fuel used.

The next important point is the type and setting of the boiler. All things considered, the return tubular steel boiler is the most economical type for either steam or hot water heating in connection with greenhouse work. The economy of a boiler is measured by the transmitting power of the heating surface and the area of the heating surface. The more easily and quickly the heat reaches the water and the greater the area brought in contact with the heated gases, the greater the efficiency derived from the fuel used.

Following this is the proper construction of the walls used in setting the boiler and in the proper covering of the flow pipes not directly concerned in heating. About twenty-two per cent of the heat in coal escapes by the chimney in the best boilers, one per cent is lost through the grates in unburned coal with the best of firing and with careless firing the waste may be increased many times. About five per cent is lost as direct radiation from the boiler itself and two to three per cent more in the flow and returns not used in heating the plant, making in all about thirty per cent of the total value of the coal. The best of boilers working under good conditions are capable of delivering for heating purposes only about seventy per cent of the heat in the coal. The greatest care and economy should therefore characterize the choice and management of a heating plant.

Even different methods of maintaining a fire determine to large degree the efficiency derived from the coal burned. The accompanying sketches show the different forms which coal in a furnace may assume.

Figs. 1 and 2 show cross sections in both directions of a furnace with the coal heaped high in the center. It is easy to see that the air flow through a heap of this form will be uneven. It will be greatest at the edges. A great amount of cold air will be allowed to pass through the thin edges. This will act to cool the gases thrown off by the smouldering fire of the deep portion and the best use of the coal will not be attained.

Figs. 3 and 4 show the two types of wedge firing which are practiced by many firemen. This method has the same objection as the conical style just spoken of.

No. 5 illustrates what is known as the scoop method. This method is not considered as good as No. 3 or No. 4, but is an improvement over Nos. 1 and 2, provided the center is not too thin.

No. 6 shows the lever or "pancake" method in which the fire is maintained at a uniform depth over the entire grate. Here the passage of air is nearly equal; the cooling effect is the same in all parts of the furnace. The heated gases are more uniform in temperature and a higher efficiency is possible than with any of the other types. The depth of the fire that can be carried in any case must be governed by the draught and by the efficiency of the dampers. When it is possible a damper control should be employed so as to maintain as constant heat as possible.

In firing it is well to coal one side of the furnace at a time. Allow the bright side of the fire to burn down to almost a gray color before coaling. Open only one door at a time if the furnace is provided with double doors. Take a small amount of coal on the scoop and spread it evenly over the area to be coaled. When the opposite half has burned down it should be coaled in like manner.

Two methods of banking fires are often used. In one the bank is made just inside the furnace doors and in the other it is made against the bridge wall. The latter has the advantage that the front part of the grate can be cleaned and clinkers removed before the fire is spread. After the fire is spread the back part can be cleaned by raking the ashes through and jumping the clinkers over the fire.

In conclusion I would say, look out for the waste at the boiler room. Get the best type of boiler; use good but the most economical full measured in results both in temperature and cost of firing, and then fire intelligently. Make the fuel return you seventy per cent of its fuel value in the houses. In order to obtain this, however, the houses must be correctly piped. L. C. C.

RETURNING CONDENSATION.

We read with interest the inquiry, and more particularly the answer by L. C. C. on the above important subject, on page 537 of the Review for January 26, and are rather surprised that a high pressure and an automatic steam-pump is not recommended, because we believe that setting the boiler on a floor the same level as the greenhouse floor, carrying from thirty to fifty pounds pressure on the boiler, using a regulator on the main steam-pipe near the boiler, reducing the pressure on your heating system to one, two or five pounds, according to the weather, and using an automatic steam pump to return condensation is the most economical on fuel, most convenient to manage, labor saving and affording the best control of temperature in the houses. We know of one very large establishment where three acres of glass were heated on the gravity system. A few years ago they erected another three acres and put their battery of three or four large boilers on the same level as the houses and since that the superintendent has done little but cuss the boiler pit of the old gravity system and its extravagance of fuel.

The high pressure system with the reducing valve and automatic pump may be installed in a thousand establishments for all we know, yet we are inclined to think this most satisfactory system is not as generally known and adopted as it deserves. An illustration of how smoothly it works can be seen at the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., at Peter Crowe's, Utica, N. Y., and at the very large Lakeview Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N.Y.

Briefly, your boiler should be tested to seventy-five pounds cold water pressure; that's enough. Then set your safety valve to blow off at fifty pounds and you are more than safe.

Get a good regulator valve (we have the Mason, manufactured in Boston, cost $45; another good one is made by the Foster Engineering Co., Newark, N. J.), that will reduce the pressure on your system to one pound or what you need. We use two pounds in mild weather and never over five in the severest weather.

The automatic steam-pump will cost, for a place of the size described, about $100. The top of the drum or cylinder into which the condensation falls must be a few inches below the level of the condensation pipe where it leaves the level of the greenhouse floor. It works smoothly, noiselessly, no wear and tear, and is a joy and comfort.

Don't think for a moment that keeping thirty, forty or fifty pounds on your boiler will use more fuel. Those who have an opportunity to compare quantities say the high pressure is a saving of at least twenty-five per cent. We cannot judge of that because we have no other system and would never think of having any other. Steam at a pressure of forty pounds will be hotter and dryer than steam at three or four pounds, and once you have got forty pounds on the boiler it does not take as much fuel to keep it there as sending all you make out through a pipe at low pressure. There is so much to be said in favor of this system that I will "shut off steam" and close by saying that we feel sure that in future there will be few holes dug in the ground for boiler pits to break your necks in descending and labor hard throwing up the ashes. Go and inspect some place where the high pressure, regulator and automatic pump are in use and you will be convinced of its many advantages.

William Scott.

THE OLD-FASHIONED FLUE.

Not many of the younger generation of florists have had experience with the brick flue, because few have been built within the last fifty years, yet many were the beautiful exotic flowers and fruits produced with this primitive method of heating. On page 568 of the Review of January 26, T. F. complains of a flue that does not draw satisfactorily in a house fifty feet, although it has a rise of thirty inches. As your able correspondent, L. C. C., replies, a chimney 120 feet long (this means flue and chimney) would naturally be slow. We suspect that in building this flue the all-important point has been entirely neglected. Within a short distance, say about a foot from the end of the fire bars, the flue should have a quick rise, two feet in three feet, or, better still, three feet in four feet rise. After that the flue can run around to the chimney almost on a dead level, although perhaps a grade of six inches in 100 feet is better than a dead level. Your rise of thirty inches in the 100 feet is of no use, unless you have that quick rise from the fire to the level of the horizontal flue in the house. W. S.

CARE OF YOUNG STOCK.

The care of young stock should now be one of the most important duties and should not in any wise be neglected, as neglect at this season will be reflected in the plant in its whole existence. Repotting should be strictly attended to so that no check may occur by which the young wood may get unduly hardened.

Young Beauties are especially sensitive to checks of this nature and should be potted just as soon as they require it, as if they once get a check of this kind they rarely get entirely over it. To keep them growing and also prevent that rank, soft growth it is safest to use half-inch shifts and pack the soil firmly. As soon as the young roots begin to turn brown it is time to repot, as this is the stage where if they are allowed to stand pot-bound, and especially during hot weather, the foliage soon begins to suffer, the wood to harden and the roots to lose their freshness and, if they ever do recover, much valuable time is lost in building up the plant.

Tea roses also should be repotted after each successive growth and should never be allowed to make two growths in the one size of pot. If the first growth is strong and healthy the second growth in that shift will be certain to be of a weaker nature and should consequently be avoided.

During potting operations keep the potting shed free from draughts and do not allow the plants to stand around longer than is absolutely necessary, as the tender foliage and wood are very impatient of sudden fluctuations of temperature and draughts. After repotting make certain that the freshly added soil is thoroughly moistened throughout. This is best done by going over the pots with the sprinkler, lightly and frequently instead of giving them a soaking, which is apt to make the soil muddy, a condition which should always be avoided.

It is also important that the material on which the pots are to be placed should be clean, fresh and porous, in order to have good drainage, and for this purpose there is nothing better than screened ashes, which can always be had, and so long as they are fresh few worms will trouble the young plants.

Green fly and spider should never be allowed to get a foothold among young stock, as it is difficult to oust them and the effect of their presence is very weakening.

A temperature of 56 degrees at night, with a day temperature of 65 to 70 degrees with free ventilation, will keep the young stock healthy and stocky and, while the growth may not be very rank, they will be in good condition for May or June planting. RIBES.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The American Rose Society has issued the schedule of premiums offered for the annual meeting to be held at Boston in connection with the spring exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The show opens at noon on Thursday, March 23, and holds over Sunday. The exhibits from a distance are to be sent to J. K. M. L. Farquhar.

The scale of points to be used in judging is as follows:

Points.	Competitive.	Novelties.
Size	15	10
Form	15	15
Substance	15	10
Foliage	15	15
Fragrance	—	5
Distinctiveness	—	10
Totals	100	100

There are thirty-one classes in Division A, each for twenty-five blooms of one variety, in which the first premium is $10 and the second $5, except on Beauties and Queen of Edgely, where the second is $7.

Division B provides the same classes for twelve cut blooms, competition being open to growers having not more than 40,000 feet of glass. Premiums are $5 and $3. Division C provides the same classes, open only to private gardeners and amateurs, with premiums of $5 and $3. Division D provides twenty-three classes for hybrid perpetuals, twelve cut blooms, with premiums of $10 and $5, competition open to all. Division E provides the same classes open only to private gardeners.

Benjamin Dorrance offers a silver cup valued at $100 for the best display of cut blooms of roses, competition open only to growers outside a radius of 150 miles from Boston.

John B. Nugent, Jr., offers premiums for the best undisseminated red rose and the best undisseminated pink rose.

Schizophragma Hydrangeoides.

Alexander Montgomery offers a premium for the best American seedling introduced in or since 1901.

Siebrecht & Sons offer a premium for fifty blooms of Killarney grown within 250 miles of Boston.

John Breitmeyer's Sons offer $100 in three premiums for fifty blooms of La Detroit.

John N. May offers $50 for the best display of roses in a space of fifty square feet.

The executive committee offers a cash prize in addition to the Lord & Burnham trophy for the best fifty blooms of American Beauties, and provides a second premium of $25.

Premiums of $20 and $15 are provided for any variety not mentioned in the schedule.

There are premiums for six blooms of any variety introduced in or since 1901 and a silver cup valued at $25 for the best rose of American origin not yet in commerce.

E. A. Clark offers a silver cup to private gardeners for twenty-five blooms H. P. roses.

There are a silver cup and several liberal cash premiums for displays of roses in pots.

The American Rose Society's gold medal will be awarded to the best new rose not yet disseminated, providing it scores ninety-five points or more. The silver medal will be awarded under the same conditions for a novelty scoring not less than eighty-five points.

Th Massachusetts Horticultural Society and the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' club will co-operate in making this the best exhibition ever held by the American Rose Society. All growers should arrange to participate. Copies of the schedule may be obtained by addressing Wm. J. Stewart, Sec'y, 11 Hamilton Place, Boston.

SCHIZOPHRAGMA HYDRANGEOIDES.

The illustration represents a very fine specimen of this beautiful hardy climber in the grounds of the A. W. Blake estate, Brookline, Mass. Probably this plant is better known as the climbing hydrangea and is frequently called Hydrangea scandens. While supposedly only hardy as far north as New York city, quite a number of excellent specimens are to be met with in Massachusetts.

It is difficult of propagation, although it can be raised from seeds, layers or well ripened cuttings in August. When first planted it usually makes very slow growth, but once it gets established in a suitable exposure it makes surprising headway. For covering walls or trunks of living trees nothing better can be found. Its flowering period is in late June or early July, but even without flowers its bright green foliage makes it very attractive.

Henry Wild, head gardener on the A. W. Blake estate furnishes the following notes in regard to the specimen figured:

"The schizophragma is, as near as I can learn, some twenty-five years old, or at least it has been planted about that time here. It was for some years growing on an oak, but has done much better since it was planted under an American walnut with a south exposure. It is thirty-four feet in height and flowers freely each year without any special treatment. The soil is a good yellow loam, manured the same as the rest of our lawn, except for an additional top dressing of bone and wood ashes during showery weather in May. It has never had any protection whatever during my stay here, eight years. A few years ago I cut back the leaders in July to get a more bushy growth, and it has flowered more freely since that time. I attribute the free flowering to the fact that the nut tree with us is one of the first to shed its leaves, which gives the summer growth of the hydrangea a much better chance to become well ripened and has, no doubt, a beneficial result in hardening the wood to stand the winter. Our lowest temperature here was 13 degrees below zero in 1904."

Here in North Easton we have a large plant also growing on a nut tree with a cold northern exposure. It had always bloomed freely until last summer, when it produced very few flowers, some of the shoots being also killed back. It, however, made excellent growth during the summer. Last winter was abnormally cold here, on forty occasions the thermometer falling to zero or below, our lowest being 30 degrees below zero. Any plant which will withstand such a winter may fairly be described as reliably hardy.

W. N. Craig.

THE BEST SWEET PEAS.

The majority of the seed lists contain so many varieties of these most popular of all flowering annuals, that to the uninitiated it is a little bewildering to know what to order. We notice that Henry Eckford, the well known English specialist, gives notice in his present season's catalogue that he intends to discard quite a number of sorts next year and that he only lists certain kinds now because some people still ask for them. We hope Mr. Eckford's lead will be generally followed and that lists will be severely pruned another season.

While a large collection is interesting to some private growers, the average trade producer needs one or two sorts only of a few decided colors. For early forcing purposes there are only two reliable sorts, Mont Blanc and Burpee's Earliest of All. For sowing after December almost any sort will succeed. The varieties we will mention are more particularly for outdoor culture and are the results of careful trials each year.

In whites, Mont Blanc is still worthy of being retained as an early bloomer. If restricted to one variety, we would, however, grow Dorothy Eckford, which is a distinct advance on Blanche Burpee. We consider this the finest white yet produced. Burpee's White Wonder is a fine variety. The flowers are considerably smaller than those of Dorothy Eckford, but are carried four to seven on a stem. In primrose or pale yellow shades, Hon. Mrs. E. Kenyon, of a lovely primrose color, is decidedly the best, being larger and better all around than Mrs. Eckford.

In light shades of pink, Countess of Lathom, of a cream tint, shaded with soft flesh pink in the center, is the best, Lovely being its nearest competitor. In deeper shades of pink there is nothing equal to Prima Donna. It will give three and four flowers per stalk, while Katherine Tracy gives but two, and much stronger stalks, too. In the popular orange or salmon pink shades, Miss Wilmott is superior to both Gorgeous and Lady Mary Currie, having larger flowers borne on stronger stems. This color is very popular in all the markets. Under artificial light on a dining table it is superb.

In rose shades, Lord Roseberry and Prince of Wales are both good, the former being rather the better. It has flowers of a rosy carmine color. In scarlets, King Edward VII is easily the leader. It is unfortunate that Scarlet Gem burns so badly, for it comes nearer to a true scarlet than any sort yet introduced. We hope a sun-proof selection from it may be obtained. While King Edward VII is a trifle paler than Salopian, it has larger flowers and much longer and stronger stems.

Lavender blue shades are very popular. Here Lady Grisel Hamilton stands at the top of its color, although many growers still handle Countess of Radnor. Deep blues are not in much request. Navy Blue and Captain of the Blues are the best. In maroon shades, Duke of Sutherland is good. Among the variegated varieties, Blanche Ferry is still far the most popular and seems to be everybody's sweet pea. Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain and Ramona are also desirable.

If restricted to one variety of each decided color we would select: White, Dorothy Eckford; primrose, Hon. Mrs. E. Kenyon; light pink, Countess of Lathom; deep pink, Prima Donna; salmon pink, Miss Wilmott; rose, Lord Roseberry; scarlet, King Edward VII; lavender blue, Lady Grisel Hamilton: deep blue, Navy Blue; maroon, Duke of Sutherland.

Some very promising novelties are being introduced this season. Of these Countess Spencer, with some of its selected seedlings, and Gladys Unwin promise to be desirable acquisitions.

MASSACHUSETTS GARDENERS.

E. A. Clark, Jamaica Plain.

William A. Riggs, on the E. A. Clark estate, Jamaica Plain, is a well known exhibitor at the Boston shows. His chrysanthemums have been especially good. Of these he grows all the newest and best exhibition sorts. A batch of bushy little plants in 5-inch pots on a shelf will develop into exhibition specimens later. Cuttings are already in the sand or potted off, of many to be grown as single stems next season. In carnations Enchantress easily takes the lead. Flamingo will be dropped, proving too shy. Queen as a white will be displaced by White Lawson or Lady Bountiful. Lawson as a dark pink is producing better than Nelson Fisher.

A division of Bride and Maid roses looks very well. One of Beauties was off crop at the time of our visit but had been yielding well. Some extra fine specimens of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and cyclamens were noted, also extra good plants of Erica melanthera and acacias in variety. Cyclamens were seriously affected by the mite, but a batch of Primula stellata was fine. The grapery had not yet been started. One division is devoted to orchids, mostly cattleyas.

Larz Anderson, Jamaica Plain.

One of the finest of the new places near Boston is that of Larz Anderson, Jamaica Plain, where Duncan Finlayson presides. There has been no stint of money in laying out this seventy-five-acre estate. The Italian garden is probably the finest in America and from spring to fall contains a succession of beautiful floral effects. The greenhouses are quite numerous and were built by the Lord & Burnham Co. three years ago. The rose divisions are devoted to Brides and Maids, with some Morgan and Mrs. Oliver Ames on the front benches.

In carnations, Fair Maid is found the most prolific of all. Queen will be dropped for White Lawson, which is well liked. Lawson still does well, although a fair percentage of burst flowers are seen. Flamingo is not free enough to be worth retaining.

A fine lot of Gardenia florida free from the "yellows" were flowering freely when I saw them. Azaleas, Primula obconica, cyclamens and other plants are grown in quantity. Lilium candidum is well liked and largely grown.

A nice collection of orchids is already secured. Some fine Dendrobium Wardianum were in bloom and some extra good Dendrobium nobile would soon succeed them. Cœlogynes and Cattleya Trianæ were also in season. Three divisions are devoted to grapes and one to nectarines. A large and finely built pit is used for storing bay trees, Irish yews and other evergreens used in the Italian garden. Another pit is used for azaleas and bulbous stock. Numerous cold frames are filled with violets, daisies and other spring flowering stock for the Italian garden. Mr. Finlayson is a first-class practitioner and has everything in fine shape.

Joseph H. White, Brookline.

Brookline, the wealthiest town in America and a suburb of Boston, is thickly dotted with fine private estates. One of the most interesting is that of Joseph H. White, where James Wheeler has charge. The principal range of houses here is a little over 300 feet in length, there being other smaller houses. A fine, roomy palm house contains a collection of clean and well-grown specimens. In roses, Bride, Maid and Wootton are handled. These were clean and vigorous. Enchantress loomed over all others in the carnation house. Flamingo and Nelson Fisher are not free enough. Mrs. Patten looked well and showed several distinct sports. In the violet house a small batch of a distinct new variety was noted. It is more free flowering than Princess of Wales, with stronger stems and rounder flowers. The foliage is more prostrate and hairy than in Princess. This variety will be grown in quantity next season. Divisions devoted to peaches and grapes were still dormant.

As long as I remain in the business I must have the Review; it is the best paper for the trade.—S. B. Ritter, Port Royal, S. C.

PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY.

(Copyright 1904, by Florists' Publishing Co.)

Frequent inquiry as to the correct pronunciation of plant names has led us to compile the following list of names, selecting those in most common use in the trade, and including botanical terms most frequently met with in articles upon plant culture.

In our list we have used the following

KEY TO PRONUNCIATION.

a as in fat	e as in met	ō as in note
ā as in fate	ē as in mete	ö as in move
ä as in far	ė as in her	ô as in nor
â as in fall	i as in pin	u as in tub

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business is very brisk, with sufficient demand for nearly all the good flowers coming into town. Shipping orders are an important feature, certain lines of choice stock being very scarce at times. Spring flowers are increasing in quantity and variety. Double daffodils and fancy freesias are plentiful. The Leo Niessen Co. has a novelty in acacias sold in bunches of a certain size irrespective of the number of flowers.

Great preparations are being made for St. Valentine's day. Both Pennock and Niessen will have blue forget-me-nots and the latter pansies, while violets bid fair to be very fine and plentiful at all the wholesale houses.

Wyndmoor.

There have been many changes during the past two years at John Burton's, marking progress in the developing of the business. The number of roses planted in ground beds is steadily increasing and will continue to increase, Alfred Burton says, till only enough bench room is left for propagating and growing the young stock.

It is worthy of note that the propagating plans are so extensive as to preclude the probability of carrying over many old plants. The new Lord & Burnham range, three old houses turned into one covering 56x130, with iron gutters between the ridges is planted entirely with Beauties in solid beds. They have done good work. The planting of Liberty has been largely increased. Among the other roses noticed were Bride, Maid, Gate, Bon Silene and Safrano. The two latter are rarely seen now. The east ends of the houses are now protected by a covered way stretching nearly from one shed to the other and a new office has been added. Mr. Burton no longer believes in setting the sash bars twenty-four inches apart, the weight of recent snows having broken some of the glass set in this way, while the glass set the 16-inch way held.

The plans for rebuilding the Lonsdale place include running the houses a little south of east and north of west with the idea of securing an hour more of sunshine in the winter months. This will bring the western end of the houses seventy-five feet farther from Willowgrove avenue than the eastern end. John Burton is a man who has the reputation of doing everything well and it is always a pleasure to visit him and his place.

Various Notes.

Wm. J. Muth states that the Philadelphia Cut Flower Company's business has shown a most gratifying increase over last season, both in December and in January. Mr. Muth has been getting some very fine Brides and Maids, also Enchantress and Vesper carnations with which he is most pleased. He is experimenting with individual tags wired on the pot labels by which each consignor's stock is kept separate and checked as sold. This is in opposition to the grading system, where all consignors share and share alike on the sales of each grade in proportion to their contribution to that grade. A very useful, natural cold storage plant holds the galax leaves, hardy ferns, etc., until spring.

Appleton & Burrell, builders, have taken out a permit and begun work on M. Rice & Co.'s new fire-proof building at 1220 Race street. The architects are Frank Miles Day & Bro., who designed Horticultural Hall. The work is to be completed by May 15.

S. E. Lukens, of Burlington, N. J., is sending 500 of his long-stemmed pure white freesia to the Leo Niessen Co. daily.

Charles E. Meehan, whose clever manipulation of the holiday Beauty market won the admiration of bears and bulls alike, naively states that he prefers selling gardenias to Beauties because they don't stick your fingers and you can get more in a box!

Edward Reid is again in the lead with sweet peas, no less an authority than A. B. Cartledge declaring the stock sent him this week was the finest he had ever seen.

Mr. Hunter, buyer for J. H. Small & Sons, Washington, D. C., was a visitor in this city recently.

Joseph Black's Sons & Co., Hightstown, N. J., sent a very fine white seedling carnation to the Flower Market this week. It is a cross between Enchantress and Hill, large, full double and fragrant, with long, stiff stem.

Edward A. Stroud, of Overbrook, is sending double scarlet tulips, which appear to be Lamatador to S. S. Pennock.

Carl Jurgens, of Newport, R. I., continues to send great quantities of bulbous stock to the Leo Niessen Co. Golden Spur daffodils are a specialty now.

M. Rice & Co. are offering unique lanterns in all shades, for use over electric lights, giving the appearance of ye old time street lamps for store, hall or house decorations and in connection with folding screens making a beautiful effect.

Edward Reid spent two or three days in the south last week.

In answer to Question No. 27, published last week, G. C. W. writes: "G. C. W. started the discussion on fakirs because he is chairman of the committee whose duty it is to start discussions and, furthermore, he was requested to do so by John Jones. Isn't that understandable! Phil is perverse, I think." It is unusual to propose doing what one does not wish done. I believe this has ceased to be a live issue in this city.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The weather of the past week, which was very cold, had a bad effect on the retail trade throughout the city and there is very little doing except funeral work. Transient trade during the cold days was out of the question with the down-town establishments. Among the up-town florists a few small decorations were reported. Thursday of last week was ground hog day and, as the sun shone brightly, the growers will have to content themselves while shoveling coal for six weeks longer. The wholesaler also had to suffer during the cold weather. Some shipments came in frozen and a total loss to the consignor.

In roses fancy stock is scarce, especially in Brides and Maids. The second and third grades are more plentiful. Carnations, too, are not over-plentiful and all kinds of stock is selling fairly well. Lawson, Enchantress, Wolcott and Estelle are among the fancies that sell best. Good scarlets seem very scarce of late. All whites sell well. Violets have been quite plentiful, with the demand only fair. Best Californias sold as low as $2.50 per thousand. Southern stock is looked for soon, which will cut into the value of home-grown stock. Romans, Paper Whites and lily of the valley are in over-supply. Von Sions, freesias, tulips and Dutch hyacinths are coming in, but are not as yet too many. Harrisii and callas make up the collection in this stock. The cut of smilax has been quite heavy of late, with some demand. In other greens everything is plentiful.

Various Notes.

All of the St. Louis Florists' Club's delegation who attended the meeting of the American Carnation Society at Chicago last week are home and loud in their praise of the show and the treatment they received in the hands of the Chicago boys.

The committee on revising the constitution and by-laws of the St. Louis Florists' Club met Thursday afternoon at the Missouri Athletic Club rooms. The committee is composed of Otto Koenig, Emil Schray and Fred H. Meinhardt. Their report will be read for this week's meeting of the club.

Edward Buechel, manager of the Riessen Floral Co., who broke his leg in two places just before the holidays, is progressing nicely but it will be March 15 before he will be able to resume his place.

C. Young & Sons Co. are making preparations for a busy spring business. James Young, who is in charge of the down-town store, reports the trade has been good with them in seeds and bulbs, also in the cut flower department.

William Borche, the landscape gardener, is busy making plans for laying out two large tracts of land for the Park View Realty Co. and Richmond Heights Realty Co., which are just north of the World's Fair grounds.

C. DeWever, who has charge of the conservatory of the Lewis Publishing Co. in the extreme western part of the city, has all his plants in fine shape. It is reported that the company will make a few new additions to Mr. DeWever's department this spring.

It was reported that the Growers' Club, which is about to organize, would exclude wholesalers and retailers. This may have been incorrect, as we hear of one wholesaler and a number of retailers, also ex-members of the local Florists' Club, who were present at its informal meeting last month. The second meeting will be held Thursday night, February 9, at 8 o'clock.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Zero weather is never conducive to good business in the wholesale cut flower market and during the past week we have had temperatures ranging to 14 degrees below; Tuesday was the only mild day. The result has been that local trade has been practically paralyzed. Those retailers who depend upon transient business have been doing nothing at all for a week and the demand has been solely from those who do a telephone trade, and even they have not been active. Shipping business continues fair, but also influenced by the severe weather. Very heavy packing has been necessary to make stock travel safely.

The Beauty crops are passing off and prices have stiffened materially. On the other hand, the tea roses are at length coming into crop after a period of suspended growth due largely to the cold, dark weather. If we were to have a week of good bright weather we should have an inundation of Brides, Maids and Chatenay which would tax the resources of the market. Practically everyone's houses went off crop about holiday time and have been slowly gathering headway for a big production as soon as the weather turns favorable. Prices have weakened a trifle with the slack demand this week.

The receipts of carnations have increased in the last few days and this, coupled with the decrease in demand, has had the result of making prices very weak on colored stock; whites are doing better and, indeed, are sometimes not to be had because the call is largely for funeral flowers. The receipts of violets are not so heavy but returns show little improvement. Harrisii lilies are not abundant but there are callas for all requirements. Paper Whites and Romans are not now conspicuous but there are plenty of jonquils and daffodils. Tulips are beginning to assume something like good quality. The best seller is La Reine but good reds do nicely. A good many of the retail stores are handling tulips in pans and find them good sellers as dinner table centerpieces and the prices at which the cut stock can be had is detracting from the value of other flowers.

Reinberg's Season's Building.

Peter Reinberg has within the last few days acquired five acres of land on Foster avenue from Mrs. A. M. Schafer. The property is vacant at present but it won't be long. Mr. Reinberg has not yet decided whether he will cover it all this season or leave a part for next year. He had planned to build five 500-foot houses at "the farm," a piece of land a couple of miles away that he acquired a year or two ago, but this is now given up.

In addition to building a good-sized range Mr. Reinberg proposes to rebuild about a dozen houses which are not old but which have wooden gutters, which waste space.

Use More Papers.

The E. F. Winterson Co. voices a very general report in the following words: "Numerous eastern shipments of violets and other stock have arrived in Chicago during the past few days in a badly frozen condition. This was largely owing to the fact that packages were insufficiently wrapped and, if we may suggest it, it might be a good thing for you to publish this fact, with a caution to shippers to take more pains with regard to wrapping packages better for western shipment during the balance of the winter season."

Various Notes.

George Theilman, whose place on Division street is one of the oldest stands in the city, died on Saturday at the home of his mother in California, where he had been for several months. He had been in poor health for a long time, though very robust in appearance and when he left home was suffering from a disease of the throat which rendered him speechless and finally caused his death. He was about 42 years of age and leaves a widow and five children. Mrs. Theilman has been active in the store for years and will continue the business. There are also two brothers in the trade in Brooklyn.

Fire destroyed the greenhouses of Philip and Charles Schmitt, in Rogers Park, on February 4. The fire occurred before daylight and two employes sleeping above the boiler room had narrow escapes. The loss was from $5,000 to $8,000.

The Kennicott Bros. Co. report having received their second carlot of wild smilax, with the third car on the way. This is the first season they have handled this specialty in quantity and are well pleased with the volume of business.

The George Wittbold Co. has a Bundy steam-trap which they say gives very good satisfaction in returning the condensation. Most florists use the Morehead and Wittbold's also have this trap giving excellent service. The Bundy is made by the Griffing Iron Co., Jersey City, N. J.

Wietor Bros. have several houses of Beauties which have been dried off and have just been started up from which they expect to get the stock which will enable them to repeat their successes of the past two summers.

The last of the carnation conventionists to depart was C. W. Ward, who remained in this vicinity till Saturday. He will be here again at the time the American Peony Society meets, in June.

There are good reports of the condition of stock at Fritz Bahr's at Highland Park, especially Lawson carnations and plants of cyclamen and primula.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. has sent out seed of its new aster on orders received from England, so far has its fame and its advertising extended.

Word has reached this market that the Lutey Floral Co., Houghton, Mich., is in financial difficulties with liabilities of $13,000. They were large buyers here at one time.

There was a meeting Monday at which an effort was made to reconcile the objecting creditors to the proposed plan for continuing the business of M. Winandy.

Adam Zender is planning to build in the spring four more rose houses which will average 25x200.

Fred Sperry, of Vaughan & Sperry, has been on the sick list again this week.

C. M. Dickinson, at Hunt's, is more than busy with the annual catalogue.

Fire did some damage in John Mangel's store February 1. The principal loss was on stock frozen.

Ground hog day was bright and fair with the temperature 20 degrees below zero at Bassett & Washburn's.

V. Siegel, manager of the Columbia Gardens, Butte, Mont., is in town buying stock.

The club will hold an important meeting to-night.

Cards have been received announcing the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Grant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Grant, and Mr. James E. Olive, January 29, at the home of the bride's parents, Overlook, Soquel, Calif.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.—James Hockey has been in poor health lately, but is getting into good shape again. He reports business good.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Weather conditions have been against a good market for some days past. While we are not having such abnormally low temperatures as a year ago, zero temperatures have been common and readings much lower in many nearby towns. The ground hog came out of his hole on February 2, shivered in the hard frozen snow for a short time and, seeing his shadow, sneaked back into his hole again. This means six weeks additional winter, so coal piles are likely to be materially reduced ere the gladsome springtime comes.

The severe weather has frozen out the fakirs nearly altogether and much reduced purchases from storekeepers. As a consequence flowers have not sold so well as could be wished. Roses continue in short supply and prices remain about the same. Select carnations have averaged $3 per hundred, more selling below than above this figure. Violets are somewhat lower. Best stock has gone for 50 cents to 60 cents, poorer grades selling at 300 for $1. Double and single yellow narcissi are quite abundant and a good many Narcissus poeticus ornatus are coming in. Lily of the valley has only sold moderately well, although of fine quality. Callas and Lilium Harrisii are rather scarce. Green stuff remains about the same.

Horticultural Society.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on February 4 ten new members were elected. It was voted to hold a public demonstration of methods for fighting the brown tail moth in April within the Boston limits.

Prof. John Craig, of Ithaca, N. Y., gave a splendid lecture before the society on February 4 on "Findings of an Orchard Survey in Western New York." There was a large audience who thoroughly appreciated the lecture and enjoyed the numerous stereopticon views.

Alexander Ogg, gardener to Mrs. J. M. Sears, showed flowers of some very fine seedling amaryllis on February 4. A plant of one of Veitch's new varieties was unfortunately frozen in transit. Mr. Ogg also showed a nice lot of Gardenia florida.

The main exhibition hall will be used for the exhibition on February 11. Carnations will be shown in large quantities and quite a number of the novelties will be seen.

The garden committee held a meeting February 4 and laid plans for the work during the present year. Prizes are this year offered for best estate of not less than three acres, of between one and three acres (latter must be in Massachusetts) house of chrysanthemums in pots, house of chrysanthemums for specimen blooms, herbaceous garden, peony garden, house of cucumbers, house of lettuce and vegetable garden. Entries for visits should be made to W. P. Rich, the secretary of the society. Schedules of all prizes offered for 1905 may be had on application to the secretary. They include also the prizes offered by the American Rose Society.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will occur on February 21. The lecturer will probably be W. W. Rawson, of Arlington, and his subject "Vegetable Culture Under Glass for Market."

William Nicholson and Allen Peirce, who returned from their peregrinations following the carnation convention the past week, are enthusiastic over the Chicago meeting, which they pronounce the greatest ever. They visited Joliet, Richmond, LaFayette, Cincinnati and other points on their way home. Witterstaetter's seedlings quite took their fancy and they could hardly find adjectives strong enough to express their admiration for the Richmond rose.

G. R. Comley, the Bedford florist, had the misfortune to lose his dwelling by fire on January 29, it being totally destroyed. His greenhouses happily escaped injury.

Newtonville greenhouses are shipping some grand Bride and Bridesmaid roses to the Park street market.

Recent victims of the prevailing epidemic include William Thatcher and William Anderson, of Anderson & Williams.

Donald Carmichael's new cerise colored carnation seedling continues to attract much favorable comment at the new market.

A delegation from the new market made a tour of the Framingham carnation establishments the past week. The party included Messrs. Carmichael, Ayer, Foote, Barr, R. Montgomery and Roper.

Peirce & Sons are forwarding extra fine Prosperity and Enchantress carnations to Park street market.

Hoffman had an effective window at his Massachusetts avenue store the past week. A large bank of Enchantress carnations filled the center, with well grown lilacs and azaleas at the sides.

Axel Bjorn, who has been operating a flower store on Tremont street for some time, left Boston on February 6 to take charge of the orchid collection of Dr. J. F. Shaffer, Pittsburg, Pa.

Oakes Ames leaves on February 10 for a botanical trip to Cuba, where he will remain some weeks.

Many of our nearby towns and cities continue to take energetic measures for the suppression of the brown tail moth plague. The city of Salem paid a bounty on 375,000 nests destroyed last year, containing some 12,000,000 caterpillars.

Henry W. Iolenberger, for the past six years orchid grower on the estate of Mrs. J. L. Gardner, in Brookline, leaves March 1 to take charge of the new estate of N. W. Harris, the well known banker, at Lake Geneva, Wis.

John McFarland, of North Easton, is shipping 4,000 extra fine valley each week to the new market. N. F. Comley has a fine assortment of tulips at the same stand.

A. A. Eaton is in Florida collecting native orchids for Oakes Ames, of North Easton. He may go to Colombia a little later.

Several fine new private estates in this vicinity will be added to the existing number at an early date. One of the finest will be in North Easton, where F. L. Ames has just purchased a block of

Which we introduced last season has given great satisfaction, and has proved to be

THE FINEST WHITE CARNATION EVER SENT OUT

Remember that we are headquarters for it. The demand will undoubtedly exceed the supply this season, and in order to secure early delivery, no time should be lost in placing order. We are now booking orders for early January delivery. Orders will be filled strictly in rotation, as received, so the earlier orders are booked, the earlier deliveries can be made. We can supply over 500 acres. Landscape work will start as soon as frost permits.

S. J. Goddard finds Lady Bountiful and White Lawson excellent carnations. Speaking of the complaints from some sources of the latter not being pure white in winter, he says it will come so if left to develop sufficiently long.

It is with much regret we hear of the commitment to the State Insane Asylum of A. F. Belcher, the well known florist of Foxboro, who has done a flourishing business in that town for many years. During the past year Mr. Belcher was anxious to dispose of his business in order to be free from its cares. It was at his own request that he was removed to the asylum for treatment. We sincerely trust he may soon be restored to his former health. His place, which is an old established one, is for sale.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

We had a taste of Chicago weather all through the week, the thermometer hugging zero until Sunday night, then came more of "the beautiful," ending Monday morning with a downpour of rain and streets the slushiest you ever saw in the heart of winter. Tomorrow it will be on its way to zero again. The vagaries of the New York climate cannot be expressed in English.

Saturday saw a change in prices for the better, especially in Beauties. The finest of these touched the dollar mark and the few of this grade arriving were well worth the figure. The supply is far below the demand. Everything else except roses seems to be abundant and concessions have to be made often to make room for the abnormal shipments of carnations and violets. The latter seem to have lost prestige sadly this year and there seems little hope of a revival. The very finest specials seldom go above 75 cents and ordinary stock goes slowly at times at 25 cents per hundred. Not much enjoyment in this for those enterprising Rhinebeckers who have the building craze again developing. Carnations and valley are very abundant. The stock is of the finest, but the prices are on the dumps and some of the stock gets there, too. There is no let-up to the avalanche of tulips and narcissi. Perhaps the street merchants will lift the shadows. They will if the warm spell continues. Once upon a time these gentry were a menace. Now they are a relief system for congested markets and an acknowledged necessity.

The big balls are still to come. The intervening days before Lent are crowded with enjoyments. Dinners, receptions and decorations come now with creditable rapidity and with better weather there ought to be good picking for everybody until March 8. Then lentils and sackcloth and sadness. But Easter is already in the air. Six or seven weeks soon fly past and the consummation of the season's patient endurance comes with reward for all. This ought to be the greatest Easter the trade has ever seen.

The Club Dinner.

The annual dinner of the New York Florists' Club at the St. Denis Hotel on Saturday evening was a great success. Nearly seventy were present and everybody had a delightful evening. The table decorations included the finest orchids, roses and carnations and the generous donors deserve the sincerest thanks of the club. The proceedings were entirely informal, Tommy Baker and his vaudevillians providing a constant entertainment in song, music and story telling that kept things moving every moment until midnight. President Traendly was handicapped by a bad cold, which made his voice almost inaudible at the close of his address. Toast-master Walter Sheridan read a telegram from the west that demonstrated a movement there in behalf of Mr. Traendly for the office of president of the S. A. F., which created a demonstration like President Roosevelt's in volume and enthusiasm.

The other officers of the club spoke briefly and Messers. Esler, Burns, Stewart, Wallace, Totty and O'Mara in speech, song and story "seen their duty and done it well." The popular songs introduced by Tommy Baker were used for chorus effect by the diners with telling gusto. The menu was voted the real thing and did credit to the dinner committee, Messrs. Sheridan, Haffner and Weathered.

With the Growers.

A brief call at Guttman's rose growing plant at Summit, N. J., last week revealed many improvements, a fine growth of Maids and Brides and every indication of a prosperous and advancing business. Mr. Weber, of Whitestone, was a visitor and afterwards attended the Orange dinner, as did Robert Berry, the old time gardener, now on the staff of Fred Kelsey, the nurseryman.

A call at John N. May's found that gentleman slowly convalescing from a severe illness. By the courtesy of Harry May I enjoyed a hurried trip through the immense establishment, where 125,000 square feet are devoted almost entirely to roses and carnations. Everything under his management is in perfect order and betokens practical skill and experience. The Bride carnation here reigns queen in its own home and a large space is devoted to it. It is a pure white of remarkable bearing quality and exquisite perfume. The MacArthur rose is at its best and great quantities are being propagated. A house is devoted to La Detroit. Bon Silene is cultivated here and there is never enough of it for the New York demands. The whole plant gives evidence of competent management.

A brief visit to Ferd. Boulon, of Sea Cliff, L. I., this week was most interesting. Mr. Boulon has been for over fifty years, in France and this country, in the nursery and florist business. He has fourteen acres in the heart of the town and has lived here during the past twenty years. His growing of single violets is far the largest on Long Island. About 20,000 square feet of glass make up the floral section. He has a pink sport from Lawson which has all the best characteristics of its parent and will be exhibited at the next club meeting. Like all French horticulturists, he is an enthusiast and in love with his business. He bears his sixty-five years well. So much for living close to nature's heart. He has lately added to his home and office facilities, installing electric lighting and otherwise modernizing his property.

FANCY WHITE LILAC, $1.50 per doz.

The crop which is now ready we think is large enough to supply all orders and the quality is the best of the season.

With a zero temperature without, a visit to the warm tropical orchid establishment of Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J., was especially enjoyable on Friday last and a study of the unique stock of orchids in numberless varieties of great interest. The firm has now three houses 25x150 feet, one house 25x200 feet and one house 20x100 feet and plans are out for another large house 27x150 feet to accommodate large quantities of imported orchids expected this spring. No waste room here, and as much is grown suspended from the roof as on benches. The imported orchids now on hand include a lot of Cattleya Mendelii, lælias and oncidiums. The flowering season of Cattleya Trianæ and C. Percivaliana is nearly over and there will be a shortage of cattleyas in the immediate future and for about six weeks. The next variety to come in bloom will be the chaste Cattleya Schrœderæ, others following, such as C. Gaskelliana, C. Mossiæ and C. gigas. A few of the gorgeous C. Dowiana are still in bloom. Of white orchids there are quite a few, notably Phalænopsis amabilis, Dendrobium formosum and some Lælia anceps alba. Large quantities of mixed orchids are grown for cut flowers, some of which are dendrobiums in many varieties, Cattleya Skinneri, oncidiums in variety, fancy cypripediums and many more. Of the list mentioned there are now in flower the following: Cypripedium Mastersii, C. Sallieri pictum, C. Barbato-Mastersii, C. Curtisii purpuratum, C. Bragaianum, C. calypso Oakwood variety, C. Vernixium, etc.

Various Notes.

The carnation night of the Florists' Club next Monday will bring out a great attendance of visitors and ladies and the exhibits already assured are of rare interest. Some of the greatest novelties of the carnation family will be on hand. Mr. Nugent has a fine surprise up his sleeve in the appetizer line and the entertainment in speech and dance and Scottish melodies will make the evening long to be remembered. The Bowling Club will hold a special meeting and bowl at the club's alleys at 3 o'clock. Dates will be set for the matches with Hoboken and Madison.

Arthur Herrington, of Madison, was prevented from bowling with his club and from attending the Orange and New York club dinners by a severe congestion of the lungs. He is out of danger and will soon be himself again.

J. Seligman and G. Trippel have formed a partnership in the wholesale line, with headquarters at 56 West Twenty-sixth street.

John A. Foley, with N. LeCakes & Co., and manager of the cut flower department, was married January 22 to Miss Butternail, of Newark, N. J. Mr. Foley is a favorite on Twenty-eighth street and the boys have been busy for a week congratulating him.

The New Jersey Floricultural Society held its tenth annual dinner last Friday evening at Orange. Many visitors from New York and other towns were present.

A delegation from the club's outing committee visited Glenwood on the sound last Sunday and its members were unanimous in their admiration of the resort as an ideal place for the annual holiday in June.

Cedar Court, illustrated in the REVIEW a few weeks ago, was damaged by fire to a serious extent last week, half a million dollars being lost and the magnificent mansion, with its priceless contents, badly damaged. James Fraser is the superintendent on the estate.

W. Elliott & Sons will move May 1 to a new location, 201 Fulton street, where they will occupy the whole building. This is their first move in a generation. The second and third floors will be devoted to the auction business. The stand is a good one and the lease long.

In our last week's notes the name Mrs. Fenrich was erroneously used for Mrs. Leikens. There is no Mrs. Fenrich yet and when it happens "the reliable house" will take good care of her.

Albert W. Wadley, son of Albert Wadley, of Wadley & Smythe, has bought seventy-five acres of fine land at Broad Brook, N. J., on the Raritan river, which he will use for nursery purposes, moving his family there in March and making it his permanent home. The section is one of the best for his projected enterprise in Jersey. Mr. Wadley has been in the florists' business with Wadley & Smythe for many years.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

I have a tubular boiler ten feet long and forty-two inches in diameter, containing thirty-four 3-inch flues. How many horse-power is it? What size of fire box ought it to have?

M. E. G.

Your boiler would be rated as twenty-five horse-power. To successfully fire it with hard coal it should have a grate area of nine square feet; for soft coal the area of the grate can be reduced about one-third. I would advise making the fire box at least three and one-half feet in length and build it flaring from the grate upward, so as to accommodate the boiler. This will then make a fire box about two feet eight inches by three feet six inches, which will be a good size for small anthracite, such as pea or buckwheat, and if it gives too much draught with soft coal a grate bar can be removed at each side and the space temporarily filled with brick, or a line of bricks may be placed along the side walls of the fire box on top of the grate bars and in this way reduce the grate area.

BREEDERS' CONVENTION.

The American Breeders' Association held a very enthusiastic meeting at Champaign, Ill., on February 1 and 2. All the large live stock interests were represented and many agricultural organizations, the corn breeders being particularly well in evidence. The florists' industry was represented by C. W. Ward, of Queens, L. I., who delivered his illustrated address on the hybridization of the carnation. Luther Burbank sent a paper, and so did H. H. Groff, of Simcoe, Ont.

CORRUGATED GLASS.

I would like to know what the brothers think of corrugated glass for greenhouses. I want the practical part, not the theoretical; I can theorize myself. I was in one house where it was used and it was decidedly the lightest house in a cloudy day. But is this diffused light as beneficial as the direct light for cut flowers and other stuff. Will some one give his experience? S. C. T.

LONDON WHOLESALE SEEDSMEN.

Watkins & Simpson.

This firm was founded in 1876, by Alfred Watkins and James Simpson, both of whom had considerable experience of the seed trade. They were content to start in a modest way in the Savoy. The business soon began to increase, and a removal became necessary to the premises in 13 Exeter street, Strand, at present occupied by the firm, and where its growth continued. Mr. Simpson died in 1893, having retired from the business about three months previously. Mr. McKay, who had been with the firm for a considerable time as traveler and manager, was then taken into partnership. The premises now occupied by the firm are extensive. The offices and vegetable department are situated at 12 Tavistock street, and they communicate with the flower seed department in Exeter street. There are also spacious warehouses in Long-

Stuart & Co.

This firm originated rather more than half a century ago, with a Mr. Stuart, who resided at Nice, and grew in that favored locality many subjects for seed purposes which could not be so successfully grown in this country. In order to have an outlet for his productions, a wholesale depot was opened in London, and after a few changes of locality is now at 25 Henrietta street, Covent Garden. Mr. Stuart, who was one of the first to improve the double zinnia and other choice flowers, died some years ago, says Richard Dean in the Horticultural Trade Journal.

VARIETIES OF LETTUCE.

The United States Department of Agriculture has published, as Bulletin No. 69, Bureau of Plant Industry, a monograph by W. W. Tracy, Jr., entitled "American Varieties of Lettuce," which will be of interest and value to every seedsman. The purpose and scope of the work is fully explained in its preface, which is in part as follows:

There is such looseness of nomenclatorial practice, and such inadequacy of description regarding the varieties of vegetables, that growers have much difficulty in getting the varieties best suited to their purposes. The lettuce variety known as Tennis Ball Black-Seeded is advertised by seedsmen under thirty-seven different names.

In Bulletin No. 21 of the Bureau of Plant Industry, entitled "List of American Varieties of Vegetables for the Years 1901 and 1902," were given about 5,000 names of varieties of vegetables offered for sale in those years in American seed catalogues. No attempt was made to say which of these varieties were identical and which were in reality distinct, except where synonyms were given in the catalogues themselves. It had already been determined, however, to take up the various kinds of vegetables one by one and, after a careful series of trials, to publish the results, with descriptions and synonyms. Lettuce is the first vegetable to which this critical study has been given. It will be of interest, therefore, to record a statement regarding those features of the method pursued in the investigation which are novel as applied to this class of objects.

The main idea was to apply to a horticultural subject the methods of systematic botany. The particular features of this application may be itemized as follows:

1. The descriptive terms used have been defined with precision. Where a verbal description is insufficient to convey an exact idea of form, such as the degree of curliness of leaves, reference is made to an illustration. When it is desired to designate a particular kind of green color, reference is made to a well-known variety of lettuce which exhibits that color.

2. In addition to an outline of classification intended to show the relationship of the varieties, an artificial key has been given, arranged on the convenient dichotomous system and making use of the most conspicuous characters, by which the identification of varieties is very greatly facilitated.

3. The varieties sufficiently different to be distinguishable by their form have been illustrated from photographs. A picture of the differences thus brought out could be conveyed by no amount of verbal description alone.

The groundwork upon which these botanical methods were applied was that of long experience and modern training in horticultural procedure, and intimate familiarity with the plants themselves.

Tentative trials were made in the years 1897, 1898, and 1899, and extensive trials were conducted in each of the four years from 1900 to 1903. Altogether 2,934 samples of lettuce seeds were secured, chiefly by purchase from seedsmen, and grown in the trials. These samples represented 444 variety names recognized by American seedsmen. The trials were conducted under Mr. Tracy's immediate direction from 1897 to 1899, at Kensington, Md., and in the succeeding years on the Potomac Flats at Washington. In addition, Mr. Tracy visited the extensive trial grounds maintained by five large seed houses, as well as seven seed farms in California, where lettuce seed is grown.

Mr. Tracy concludes that of the 404 varieties named in seedsmen's catalogues 107 represent really distinct varieties, while the others are merely these same varieties under different names. In adopting a single name for a much-named variety, the most suitable of the trade names has been chosen.

WATER UNDER PRESSURE.

We have hot water under pressure, but as we do not get the right temperature in the houses, we would like to change the system. As the houses run north and south and are of even size, 18x60, and one three-quarter span running east and west, we would like to know how many runs of 2-inch pipe to put in each house. The house on the west is exposed to very strong winds, and is used for carnations. The second is used partly for carnations and general stock. The third is used for vegetables and the east and west house for roses only. We wish to keep the rose house at 60 degrees in zero weather and the other ones at 55 degrees. We have a 4-inch pipe for a main and a 4-inch for return, but under the benches and on the sides are 2-inch flows and returns. Do you think the return is too large? The pipes cool very quickly if the fire slacks off a little. J. J. V.

Each of the houses 18x60 feet, which is to be heated to 55 degrees, should have an equivalent of eleven 2-inch pipes and the three-quarter span house, if of the same dimensions, 18x60, and to carry a temperature of 60 degrees, should have an equivalent of at least 12 runs of 2-inch pipe. These houses with hot water at 180 degrees require about 440 feet of radiation to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees during severe weather.

While it is not always the practice in hot water heating, it is good policy to have the lowest return in the house somewhat above the top of the boiler. Better results follow from such an arrangement than when the returns are below the top of the boiler. The difference need only be a few inches but a foot or more is an advantage. Four-inch pipes are not too large for either flows or returns, but they are seldom used in water under pressure systems, chiefly, I suspect, because smaller pipes are cheaper. L. C. C.

LILIES.

We have some Lilium Harrisii that are three inches high in a house with a night temperature of 56 degrees. Will they be all right for Easter? If not, how should they be treated? Our L. longiflorum multiflorum are just breaking through the soil. How should they be treated to be had in bloom Decoration day? After the above named lilies show buds how many days does it take them to develop? J. W. R.

The Lilium Harrisii that are three inches high and in a night temperature of 56 degrees will do very well where they are for another three weeks. We will suppose that they were well rooted when brought in. They should make good, steady growth in 56 degrees and 15 degrees higher in the daytime. Much depends on the weather, but by the middle of March you can tell if they will need a higher temperature.

Those lilies only just starting to grow and intended for Decoration day should be kept quite cool, say 40 degrees at night. There will be no forcing needed. As the season advances your houses will be warm and there is more care needed in keeping them cool. In April and May they come along very fast. Keep them cool.

The number of days from the time you can count the buds to their opening will depend on the temperature and amount of sunshine we get. This year, as Easter is late and we should expect bright weather to help, four to five weeks should develop the expanded blossoms.

LIFE OF PIPE.

In ordinary greenhouse use what will be the life of 4-inch cast-iron pipe? How long would wrought-iron pipe last?

W. W. T.

It is a difficult thing to predict the life of either cast or wrought-iron pipe in heating plants. There is some difference in the qualities of iron from different sources. There is also an advantage in favor of cast-iron as a container so far as length of life is concerned, everything else being equal.

The one factor which more than any other determines the length of life of iron pipe used for carrying water, either in a heating plant or under other conditions, is the character of the mineral salts which the water contains. In some localities the water contains salts which soon consume iron pipe, while in other sections no such evil exists. The best and safest plan under all circumstances is to use rain water for filling the heating plant, whether it be a hot water or a steam plant. With rain water there should be little or no scale or corrosion and under such circumstances the length of life of light weight 4-inch cast-iron pipe should be thirty-five to fifty years and probably twenty-five or thirty years for the ordinary threaded maleable pipe, possibly more. MANURES FOR MUMS.

M. George Truffaut's researches show that while there are differences in constitution as regards varieties, yet as a whole it may be said that if it is desired to grow dwarf, robust plants with firm, regularly distributed foliage and brightly colored flowers, the following facts must be borne in mind; phosphoric acid assists in the formation of woody tissue and chlorophyll, hastens the production of flowers, and specially heightens the brilliancy of their colors. Without potash the leaves are flaccid, the stems hollow, the flowers of bad shape, and their development retarded. Excess of nitrogenous manure is singularly injurious to the chrysanthemum.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

We have recently been treated to the worst weather of the season and it had a depressing effect on retail trade. but it gave such a brace to shipping that every flower of whatever quality was quickly cleared up. The demand for funeral work has sprung into great activity. Prices continue firm. Violets are the only flowers that can be had in quantity.

William Cunningham has suffered an operation for appendicitis but is progressing favorably.

M. Regan, formerly foreman at Crabb & Hunter's Lake greenhouses, is very ill.

George F. Crabb is convalescing from a severe attack of grippe and congestive fever.

The Grand Rapids florists who attended the carnation meeting are very enthusiastic on the exhibits, the greatest difficulty being to decide on which variety to stock up on.

The Grand Rapids Florists' Club is grappling with the problem of fixing rates for bedding plants, the filling of window gardens, baskets, etc., for spring trade. It will also strive to make the price of cut flowers more uniform. If it accomplishes all it has set out to do it will be a long stride in progress. Henry Smith has the rate question in charge and will report at the next meeting, which will be held at the Board of Trade rooms on Pearl street on February 17.

G. F. C.

FROST IN SOUTHERN EUROPE.

The Revue Horticole gives a deplorable account of the destruction caused by the recent severe weather not only on the north side of the Mediterranean, but also in Tunis and Algeria. The crop of roses is mostly destroyed, also violets, anemones, reseda, ranunculus, and other flowers, have been almost entirely ruined, and in the market gardens there are no more artichokes, lettuces, radishes, carrots, turnips, or cauliflowers. What the effect will be on the palms it is too soon to judge. It is a curious fact that English growers have lately been supplying the Paris markets with forced tulips and other flowers; usually the London growers must compete with cut stock from the south of Europe.

Grand Forks, N. D.—E. O. Lovell says McKinley day business was good. Many dinner table flowers were supplied. They distributed many free boutonnieres on Saturday.

IMPROVED LORILLARD.

In a recent number of the Review we notice an article by Mr. Croydon, referring to Lorillard tomato as producing a number of badly shaped fruits, particularly in the first of the season. Many good varieties have been discarded because of roughness or some other fault. We give our experience because we think a good variety once found can be kept up to the standard and even improved if a careful selection of seed is made each year. Ten years ago we commenced forcing Lorillard under glass for ripe fruit in April and May and have grown it ever since. Five years ago we began selecting and saving seed from perfect fruit and are now satisfied that we have a perfect tomato, in size, form, earliness and productiveness. Each year we also grow the variety outside largely and find it produces ripe and perfect fruit as early as any grown in this section and continues throughout the season.

APHIDES ON LETTUCE.

Would Nikoteen or Rose Leaf Extract be all right to use on lettuce to kill aphides? I have been using tobacco smoke, but find it very easy to overdo. Is there a better way? M. A. B.

Nikoteen or Rose Leaf Extract of tobacco would be all right for destroying aphides on lettuce. I presume you mean to vaporize it. Directions regarding quantity necessary for certain space usually accompany the packages in which the extracts are put up. You could accomplish your purpose cheaper by using tobacco stems. Procure good fresh stems, tie up in bunches and distribute through the house. They are better and last longer if suspended rather than laid on the ground. If the fly has considerable headway you would have to use the stems pretty freely to get the better of them, but once your plants are clean the aroma from the stems will prevent further trouble. Moisten occasionally when the stems become dry and they will continue effective for a considerable time, the length of time, of course, depending a good deal on the quality of the stems. After the stems have lost their strength renew with fresh ones, and in this way you ought to be able to keep your house perfectly free from the serious attacks of aphis.

EARLY PLANTS FOR OUTDOORS.

The sowing of seed to procure early plants for subsequent planting outdoors, if not already done, should be attended to as soon as possible. If greenhouse space can be devoted to this purpose it will be a good deal more convenient than hotbeds. Just as good plants can be raised in notbeds as in the greenhouse, but it entails quite a little extra labor, and pretty close attention is necessary to insure success.

One of the first essentials is to procure a suitable soil for the seed sowing. Too often the ordinary potting mixture is used for this purpose and the presence of manure in it, which inevitably contains decaying vegetable or animal matter, not only makes the soil too heavy for the purpose, but it is almost sure to contain germs of fungi which would prove very destructive to the little plants just after they are over the ground. It is very disappointing, after procuring a good start of seed, to see the plants damping off. This damping off, as it is commonly called, is often caused by the attacks of minute fungi, the germs of which are often present in the soil. Over watering and an overabundance of atmospheric moisture are also fruitful causes of its presence. If a nice, free, friable loam can be procured in the right condition, neither too wet nor too dry, there is nothing better for the purpose in hand. For a stiff, retentive soil the addition of good sharp sand or, better still, some charcoal dust will be very beneficial.

For most seeds it is better to have the soil on the surface finely sifted, though it is unnecessary to sift the whole of it; in fact, it is better to have the main part of the soil rather rough to insure the free passage of water. The seeds should not be sown too thickly, so as to give the plants a chance to get large enough to be easily handled before they become crowded. A temperature of 60 degrees is about right for the general run of seeds. Cucumbers and melons require a higher temperature, but it is too early to start either of these for outdoor planting. A fine spray should be used in watering, so that the soil can be kept moist, but not over-wet. Air should be freely admitted on all favorable occasions, so that the atmosphere of the house be kept free from stagnation.

Regarding varieties for early use, we have found nothing better in lettuce than Boston Market for first; for succession Big Boston and Deacon are both good. In cabbage, Early Jersey Wakefield would be our choice for first, to be followed by Succession. In cauliflower we prefer Dwarf Erfurt to Snowball for early outdoor work. In tomatoes Earliana and Stirling Castle are both good for this purpose. A sowing of moss curled parsley made now will give nice plants for setting out by the time the weather is warm enough.

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are still in the midst of our rainy season and, while on one hand it makes business quiet, on the other it makes flowers of all kinds scarce. Violets are the exception, as they are a glut at present. They sell at from 50 to 75 cents per dozen bunches and are of splendid quality. Roses and carnations are even scarcer than they were last week and the prices have stiffened considerably. The daffodil is the flower in most demand at this time. They cost the stores from $1 to $1.50 per hundred. Trumpet major is the variety we are cutting now. Ard Righ, Henry Irving and other early sorts are all gone and Princeps is just beginning to bloom. Roman hyacinths and valley are in fair supply and sell well. Freesias are now to be had in any quantity and cost the stores about $1.50 per hundred for long-stemmed flowers. Good maidenhair is scarce but we are getting an abundance of the wild variety from the mountains, but this kind can only be used to advantage in cheap bouquets. Smilax is also very scarce and sells well. Mums are practically out of season, so that there is a great scarcity of cheap flowers, such as can be used to advantage in floral designs.

Various Notes.

Sievers & Boland made several very fine floral pieces for the funeral of Mrs. James Johnson, at Claremont, last week.

George Robinson, a gardener in the employ of A. D. Pryal, assistant horticultural commissioner of Alameda county, was dangerously wounded by the accidental discharge of a gun on a hunting expedition last Thursday.

It has been announced that the sum of $100,000, allotted by the trustees of the Carnegie Institute to Luther Burbank will be available in annual installments of $10,000. This will enable Mr. Burbank to devote his entire attention for a few years to his experiments.

N. Symacopulos has left for a three months' trip to Europe. He recently disposed of his florist establishment to his nephew.

The Society Hortensia had a regular meeting in Becker's Hall, Oakland, last Saturday evening.

Ferrari Bros. are cutting some very good roses.

It is rumored that another Japanese company has bought land near Colma and will erect considerable glass, both for carnation and rose growing. G.

LYCOPODIUM.

Enclosed find a spray from a long, vine-like plant that grows in abundance in Washington. It has had no care whatever and has been picked at least six weeks. Is it of any commercial value to florists? It can readily be packed and shipped from Washington.

W. G. T.

The specimen is a branch from the Lycopodium annotinum, found growing plentifully on the Pacific coast from Alaska to California. It grows both on the low lands and on the wooded mountain sides. It is closely related to the eastern club moss but has not been made use of by the Pacific coast florists to any extent. Green material is very plentiful here and we have an abundance of ferns and mosses. As it keeps a long time without fading it should be of value for shipping to less favored localities and would probably be of considerable service in arranging with flowers and for decorating if someone would take the trouble to introduce it and demonstrate its merits. G.

DAHLIAS.

The dahlia is one of the best paying summer flowers that the florist can grow. The dwarf double white varieties are especially valuable for funeral work and during the season between the going of the asters and the coming of the chrysanthemums there is no flower that will take the place of the white dahlia. The colored varieties are not so much in demand, unless for cheap decorations or bouquets, but as a garden flower it has few equals.

To obtain the best results with the dahlia I dig the clumps every year as soon as the frost has cut them down and pack them away in dry sawdust. I have had much better results when treating them in this way than when I left the clumps in the ground over winter, for, although they will stand considerable water, I always find that the tubers are more or less rotted after an extra wet winter or when they are planted in a situation where the drainage is not good. I replant the tubers generally about the first week in March, after having divided each clump in three or four parts.

As with almost all crops, I have found it a good plan to change the location every season, as the dahlias are gross feeders and easily exhaust the soil. It does not seem to make so much difference whether the soil be sandy or heavy loam as long as it is sufficiently fertilized, well rotted manure being the best material to use for this purpose.

The clumps should not be too heavily watered until after they have started to grow and after that it does not seem to be possible to give them too much moisture. Keep the ground free from weeds and well cultivated and the dahlia will be found to produce a good paying crop.

Unfortunately the green lady birds have a great fondness for the flowers and in some localities where there are no cool, foggy nights in the summer it is almost impossible to get any perfect blooms. I have tried many ways to get rid of the summer pest but have found that Paris green seems to be the most effective. I use one teaspoonful in a four-gallon watering pot and sprinkle the plants in the evening four successive days. After that once a week will be all that is necessary to keep these insects in check. It is only in some of the warmer situations where there is any trouble of this kind, for when the dahlias are planted where they get any of our ocean breezes, the destructive green lady birds cannot do any harm. One or two foggy nights seems to completely put them out of business. G.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a catalogue of American apples from 1804 to 1904, compiled by W. H. Ragan and published as Bulletin No. 56, Bureau of Plant Industry.

G. S. GILBERTSON, of St. Ansgar, has bought 200 acres of land near Mason City Junction, Iowa, and will go into the nursery and seed business on a large scale.

J. WOODWARD MANNING, for some years associated with his brother, Warren H. Manning, as a landscape architect, has decided to devote the bulk of his time to the care of the old established nursery business in Reading, Mass., so long managed by his father.

SOME well known English nurserymen say that the Myrobalan plum is much superior to the thorn for hedging purposes, that is as regards quickness of growth and impenetrableness of fence. It also makes a pretty hedge if trimmed annually, as all hedges should be. The plants will grow almost anywhere and under the most ordinary conditions.

P. LAMBERT, Germany's famous rosarian, suggests in a note to Rosen-Zeitung the practicability of working the Baby Rambler (Mme. Norbert Levavasseur) on to the original Crimson Rambler rose. He believes that any attempt in this direction in the way of grafting or budding would be followed by certain success. Most climbing roses of the multiflora class, he thinks, could thus be made to flower continually or at least repeatedly during a season.

A CARLOAD of nursery stock from three French nurserymen was cleared through the custom house at Portland, Ore., January 27. On the invoice were 185,000 fruit tree stocks, 6,000 English walnuts, 2,500 hollies, 3,000 conifers, and a long list of ornamental trees and shrubs. They were for J. B. Pilkington and make the third carlot received by him this season, the first containing 3,500 Holland-grown rhododendrons and azaleas, while bay trees from Belgium were the bulk of the second car. The duties paid amounted to about $600.

THE CORELESS APPLE is supplying the penny-a-liner with capital material for the exercise of his talents, and it need not be said that he is taking full advantage of his opportunities. In one of our daily contemporaries we are informed that "the trees are almost blossomless, so that they have little to fear from spring frosts. The annual loss to the fruit growers of the world from late frosts and codlin moth cannot be less than £5,000,000, but by the introduction of the new apples this will be prevented. The absence of seed makes the fruit wormless, because the voracious apple worm lives on the seed."—Gardeners' Magazine.

FRUIT MEN SPEAK.

The Northwestern Fruit Growers' Association, representing three-fourths of the fruit growers of the state of Washington, have asked the legislature to repeal a feature of the present horticultural law making a large bond compulsory for nurserymen doing business in the state. This bond, members of the fruit growers' association declare, is driving the nursery business out of Washington into Oregon. The tree buyers ask that the bond he discarded entirely, or, at the worst, made very low.

For their own protection the fruit men ask that the law prohibit the sale of fruit infested with San Jose scale and require the labeling of each package with the grower's name, the contents and quality.

SIZE OF BOILER.

What size of horizontal tubular boiler should I use to heat four greenhouses as follows: One lean-to 6x50, one three-quarter span house 17x50, both houses for palms, ferns, flowering and bedding plants; two houses 16x100 for carnations? The temperature very seldom falls to zero. C. A. M.

Your houses require a boiler capable of supplying about 1,250 feet of radiation. A boiler with about 175 feet of heating surface should be capable of supplying this amount of radiation. A return tubular boiler three feet in diameter, eight feet long and carrying twenty-eight 3-inch flues should be amply large. In fact, it will have a considerable factor in reserve, but it is always a good plan to have more power than one really needs. L. C. C.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

We have spent the week in the throes of a blizzard and have experienced the coldest weather of the winter, the thermometer dropping to 7 degrees below zero, still I have not heard of any damage to any of the greenhouses in this vicinity. While some found a shortage of gas, they were in shape to help out with coal. However, the retail dealers suffered, as part of the week was too cold for people to get out and materially affected trade. Among the wholesalers there did not seem to be much complaint and very little stock came in frozen, which reflects credit on our express agents, who are now giving the florists more consideration and attention than ever before. At the Union station, Adams Express Agent Hiner, has one man whose duty it is to get the flowers from among the other freight and see to their immediate delivery. Quite frequently we see boxes wrapped in blankets while being hauled to their destination.

Various Notes.

Ed. McCallum, of the Florists' Exchange, got back to work Friday after a ten days' siege of grippe.

J. S. Salmons, of the Washington Floral Co., is consigning the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. some very fine Maids, Brides and Meteors. M. C. Dunlevy & Sons are sending the same firm their cut of Golden Spur narcissi.

Samuel McClements, of Randolph & McClements, and Karl Klinke, bookkeeper for the Cut Flower Co., are the sick this week.

William Paul Bender, formerly of Philadelphia, has taken a position as gardener with Mrs. E. A. Williams.

Visitors the past week were: Martin Reukauf and B. Eschner, Philadelphia, and Mr. Dykes, of Jansen & Co., New York.

Hoo-Hoo.

Boston, Mass.—On a protest of N. F. McCarthy & Co. the Board of Appraisers has held that chip baskets are not manufactures of willow.

Bloomsburg, Pa.—J. L. Dillon was so well pleased with Carnation Crisis, raised by Davis Bros., that he bought about one-third of the stock plants last season. Both Messrs. Davis and Dillon report a good demand for the cuttings.

THE NEW ROSE WELLESLEY

IS A WELCOME ADDITION TO THE LIST OF FORCING ROSES.

Color is bright pink, with reverse of petals clear silvery pink, thus producing a combination that is exceedingly effective either in daylight or artificial light. Growth is very free and exceptionally vigorous and will prove satisfactory every month in the year. Delivery strictly in rotation, beginning April first. PRICES: Own Root—$25 per 100; $55 per 250; $100 per 500; $200 per 1000. Grafted—$30 per 100; $70 per 250; $130 per 500; $260 per 1000.

Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass.

JOHN N. MAY, - - SUMMIT, NEW JERSEY.

WASHINGTON.

Business for the past week has been practically tied up. The thermometer at 6 and 8 degrees staring us in the face, with snow and a good mixture of northwest winds, caused stock of all kinds to be scarce, consequently bringing high prices. Beauties are scarce and bring $6 to $12 per dozen, Maids and Brides, $10 to $15 per hundred; carnations, $2 to $4. Tulips and all Dutch stock are coming in fine, but are a drug on the market and do not go at all.

During the freeze-up last week Mr. Bissett lost a whole house of violets, also Ley Bros. had a house of carnations frozen up. Both have the sympathy of the craft. Quite a few of the others had a narrow call.

Vice-President Freeman is quite busy hustling around getting the S. A. F. souvenir book in shape. F. H. K.

Snow and continued cold weather do not seem to check the flower business. At present decorations and dinners keep the boys on the jump. A. Gude & Bro. had a decoration for the Tautalus Club which called for four wagon-loads of plants on February 4. Luckily none was nipped.

Gude & Bro. do not want to go on record with the disappointed florists on McKinley day. They had a big demand for carnations and their sales were far beyond their expectations. They had a McKinley window, decorated with carnations, and handled 4,000 carnations over the retail counter. Wm. F. Gude has been laid up with a severe cold but is able to be about again.

J. H. Small & Son are getting in shape for the inaugural ball.

Wm. Smith, formerly with F. H. Kramer, has taken a position with Henry Pfister. Rambler.

Broadripple, Ind.—The Dow Floral Co. has been organized to take over the business of the Bellevue Conservatories. The officers are: President, W. S. Dow; vice-president, Thos. Dow; secretary, T. C. Dow; treasurer, E. B. Dow.

ARE You Looking for a Scarlet that Does Not Go to Pieces as Soon as Warm Weather Sets In.

FLAMBEAU Is a seedling from Flora Hill and stands hot weather as well as its parent. Good in winter, too. Our most satisfactory scarlet.

INDIANA MARKET does not burst. It always has a beautiful round form and is the freest blooming white carnation we have. A fine bloomer both winter and summer. Strong clove scent. Fine keeper.

BEATRICE is the freest and most profitable light pink carnation on the market. Long stems, no burst calyx and a fine color. Just what you want in large quantities for moderate priced blooms for your every day trade. These three are not giant, fancy, shy-blooming exhibition sorts, but are every day bread and butter sorts. They won't let you go hungry. All three were awarded Certificates of Merit, Nov. 15, 1904, by the State Society of Indiana Florists. $10.00 per 100; $80.00 per 1000.

Get our price list of the cream of last year's novelties, as well as standard sorts.

INDIANAPOLIS is the freest blooming and most profitable deep pink carnation on the market. $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

RED SPORT (Of Maceo.)

Red Sport has proved the greatest money-maker we ever grew, producing more good blooms to the square foot of bench room than any other variety on the place. During the glut the first part of January we could only get four cents for fancy Lawson and sold every Red Sport we had at five cents. Every grower who was here in December was carried away with its possibilities, as a future supply of a "holly berry red" for Xmas. There is no pick in the blooms. They are all a uniform size and color. There are 40,000 or 50,000 buds showing in different stages of development at this time and there is not a split or off color bloom in the lot and every plant is the picture of health. We will plant 20,000 plants of Red Sport for next season's bloom and the cut is already engaged by two of Washington's leading retailers. Red Sport is an easy doer and everyone can grow it as successfully as we can. Price for Feb. 20th delivery—12 for $1.50; 25 for $2.50; 50 for $4.00 post-paid; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. We guarantee stock to arrive in good condition and be well rooted.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

A week of snow and intense cold has made things look very gloomy here and stock, especially roses, is of very poor quality and prices are weak. Some good stuff is coming in from outside points and prices are averaging good. Carnations are looking well. Some fine Enchantress and Lawson are to be seen. Tulips are more plentiful, while hyacinths, freesias and valley are coming in and are looking fine. Violets and sweet peas are at their best. An unusually large number of funerals the past week has about cleaned up all stock and there are enough advance orders to take all the stock in sight.

Various Notes.

Your correspondent visited the greenhouses of A. F. Barbe last week and noted the big improvements that have been added to his extensive establishment. A large, two-story building has been erected, with an office in the lower part and the upper part used as a dwelling for the night fireman. There are two rose houses 25x147 filled with Bride, Maid, Ivory and Golden Gate which are looking fine; four houses for carnations 20x80 each in which there are some excellent Lawson, Enchantress, Flamingo and Jubilee. The other houses are filled with bedding stock, in charge of Sam Willis.

Ed. Ellsworth, manager for G. M. Kellogg, is confined to his home by the grippe. His place is ably filled by P. G. Bradbury, assistant manager.

Ed. Bunyar, of Independence, is sending in some of the finest violets seen here for some time, which find a ready sale.

It is rumored that a new firm is about to locate here. A lease on an acre of ground has been secured on the south side, on which will be erected immediately four houses 30x122, to be devoted to roses. Later other houses will be added as needed. The new firm will be known as the Kansas City Cut Flower Co.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. is showing some very good stock. Mr. Rock reports a very large business the past week, principally funeral work, and has already booked some very large orders for weddings and receptions the coming week.

John Schneider, on Walnut street, reports business good.

The Misses Dalley are still confined to their home by sickness. Mr. Linquist is in charge of the store.

Geo. M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, was a visitor last week. Mr. Kellogg contemplates adding another 100,000 feet of glass to his already extensive establishment.

The Alpha Floral Co. is well pleased with business.

Lawrence Schwager reports business as above the average. He has some good stock on exhibition at his store.

ORANGE, N. J.

The tenth annual installation dinner of the New Jersey Floricultural Society took place on February 3, with the help of representatives of the floral and local press, sister societies and numerous representatives of the craft. Of the first, who made responses were J. Austin Shaw, W. J. Stewart and S. S. Butterfield. William Duckham spoke for the Chrysanthemum Society. A letter of regret was read from A. Herrington. Mr. Berry, of Kelsey & Co., Neil Campbell, C. H. Totty, Harry O. May, Dr. J. M. W. Kitchen and Charles Weber were also speakers. The evening was filled in by responses from six ex-presidents and numerous members. J. B. Davis, in behalf of the auditing committee, paid a glowing tribute to the services and worth of Treasurer Macrorie and to the services of John McGowan, whose photographs of the prize-winning flowers for the year covered the walls of the banquet hall.

The floral display was large and called forth encomiums from Mr. Barry and others. The exhibits were from Peter Duff, Arthur Bodwell, Edwin Thomas, William Bennett, William Reid, George Van Qualen, Lager & Hurrell, Hale Floral Company and Guttman & Weber, whose new carnation, Victory, occupied a prominent place. It was the initial night in the year's competition for silver cups.

The presentation of the twelve silver cups won in last year's competition was a feature of the earlier part of the evening. J. B. D.

CANTON, OHIO.

In Charles Lindacher's recent fire the boiler shed and two greenhouses were damaged and a large quantity of stock frozen. He had $2,000 insurance on the stock and was allowed $1,900, with $1,200 allowance on the structures and $250 on tools, in all $3,350. Rebuilding was begun promptly and everything will be in first-class shape by spring. The retail trade was not interfered with by the fire, as most of the stock destroyed was bedding material for spring, which is being replaced by purchase.

James D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I., N. Y.

Here are three good carnations. FLAMBEAU, a most satisfactory scarlet; INDIANA MARKET, a free blooming white, and BEATRICE, the freest blooming and most profitable light pink on the market. These three are not giant, fancy, shy-blooming exhibition varieties, but are every-day bread and butter sorts and are just what you should have. Price: $10.00 100; $80.00 1000.

Send for our price list of the cream of last year's novelties and of the standards.

TROUBLE WITH HEATER.

I have a greenhouse 15x28 and heat with hot water, the boiler 24x42 inches, set two feet below the ground level. The supply tank is four feet above the boiler. I use about 200 feet of 1¼-inch pipe. It all has a fall except one stretch of twenty feet. The return pipe and the supply pipe enter the boiler at the same place. When I get up good heat the tank will overflow through reaction, but we have a faucet where we draw the water out of the pipes and stop the overflow. What is the defect? A. W.

Small heating plants such as you have are more difficult to regulate than are more extensive ones. The temperature rises and falls more quickly and as a result a larger space in proportion must be provided for expansion than with more extensive systems. I believe that a part of your difficulty can be overcome by combining all the returns into one or two pipes and connecting them with the bottom of the boiler. There must be openings provided for admitting the returns near the base of the boiler. Place a tee in the return eight to ten inches from the point where return enters boiler and carry a ¾-inch pipe up as high as the boiler room or greenhouse will permit, ten or twelve feet if possible, and to this attach a fifteen-gallon steel tank similar to those used for storing hot water in dwellings. Attach an overflow to this tank, which will connect with the down spouts or a drain. A tank of this size should be sufficient to hold the expansion of a plant the size of the one you have. If the expansion tank used is an open one a float can be arranged in it for opening and closing the draught of the heater. When the fire gets high enough to cause the water to rise in the expansion tank the float will be lifted and close the draughts and dampers and when the water returns again to its proper level the draughts and dampers will open with the settling of the float.

I am not able to criticize the system of piping from the description given, but it is never wise to have hot water pipes on a level for any considerable distance. L. C. C.

NERINES.

Among autumn flowering greenhouse bulbous plants there is no doubt the nerines rank first. Their culture is simple, they are easily propagated, and they are equally as useful for cutting as for decoration, as their long stems make them extremely useful for vases, etc., and the predominant colors being rose or pink, they never fail to please.

Nerines are old favorites with some, but have never seemed to gain headway to the extent they should do, probably owing to their supposed shy flowering propensities. The chief point in successfully flowering nerines well is their subjection to a thorough scorching in the sun soon after they become dormant, and for this purpose I reserve a frame for them and they remain in this, with little ventilation and no water, until about the middle of August, when they are taken out and placed in a greenhouse to throw up their flower stems. When the flower stems appear weak, liquid manure once a week is given, and is very beneficial. As leaf growth commences, watering is increased until the growth shows signs of maturity, when it is gradually reduced until the bulbs are quite dormant, when it is withheld.

Where a number of offsets are to be grown on to flowering size, I have adopted the planting-out system with decided success. A frame is selected where a minimum temperature of 40 to 45 degrees can be maintained, and a maximum of 50 degrees not exceeded. Good drainage is provided and covered with loam, leaf-soil, and sand in equal parts to the depth of six inches. In this the young bulbs are planted, three inches apart each way, with their crowns just showing above ground. I have this season lifted a fine batch of nerines, which were treated in this way.

The great advantage one gains in growing nerines in this manner is that better bulbs are produced in less time than when grown in pots, and there is a considerable curtailment of labor.

There are about a score of species and many varieties of nerines, but all are worthy of cultivation, and will well repay any labor bestowed upon them.—Gardeners' Magazine.

Atlanta, Ga.—Benj. Gillespie, florist at Grant park, has resigned to resume his old position as gardener at Oakland cemetery.

Unadilla, N. Y.—N. H. Padgett was completely burned out on February 2. Three greenhouses, office, work room and all the contents were destroyed, with no insurance. Mr. Padgett says he cannot rebuild before spring but he expects to start again at the bottom of the ladder.

The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder

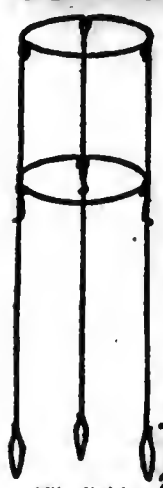
What a Few Say, All That Use It Say.

Wallingford, Conn.—Please send me by freight one hundred pounds The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder. I find nothing better. I have used it for four years, and find no injury to blossoms.
GEO. H. ROWDEN.

Marion, Ind.—Your Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder has given me more satisfaction than any other kind of insecticide, and I have used all the latest inventions. I have used it now for two years and think it is the satest, cheapest and easiest to handle on the market.
GUNNAR TEILMANN.

Montclair, N. J.—I think your The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder is by far the most effective and satisfactory Fumigator on the market, not only as regards its results, but also in the methods of using, and I have gladly recommended it to my friends. The Sprinkling Kind Tobacco Powder is equally good and effective.
H. BRADLEY.

Mt. Sterling, Ky.—I received the sample of your Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder but as I did not use but one-half the amount as directed I did not obtain the best results but am satisfied that if used according to direction it will kill everything it is intended for, as at least 90 per cent of Thrips and Aphis were destroyed this morning. Send 200 lbs. Emil Fredrich.



A FREE trial five-pound bag will cost you nothing more than the express charges on it. The trial bag will prove our assertion that it is the most effective, cleanest and quickest as well as the cheapest (10 cents per 100-foot house) article to fumigate with. All aphis killed in one night—our booklet tells of it; we mail one on request.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society held the first meeting of the year on January 31. The newly elected president, Francis Gibson, occupied the chair. The prize of the evening, a pair of handsome sleeve links, given by L. A. Martin, was for the best plant suitable for table decoration. Several foliage plants and several flowering plants were placed in competition. The judges, J. Mooney Hastings and Howard Nichols, awarded the prize to William Scott, his exhibit being a plant of Croton superba. A very interesting discussion was brought out regarding the relative merits of flowering versus foliage plants for table decoration, the consensus of opinion seeming to lean to the plant with flowers. The F. R. Pierson Co. exhibited several vases of carnations and was awarded a certificate of merit for Variegated Lawson, also honorable mention for vases of Flamingo and White Lawson. The secretary announced that he had the offer of two special prizes for the next November shows, one of $25 from Mrs. J. B. Trevor for the best twelve blooms of Glenview chrysanthemum, and a silver cup from F. R. Pierson for fifty blooms of Variegated Lawson.

TORONTO.

Trade during the past week has been a considerable improvement over previous weeks and the retail men all report that receptions, at-homes, etc., are more numerous than during January and we also note that there is an increased demand for white flowers for funeral work. Roses are still short, carnations and bulbous stock of all kinds plentiful. Stock does not seem to be moving off as freely as other years.

We are glad to report that Mr. Lampert, of the College Street Flower Shop, late of Chicago, who has been laid up with sore throat, is back to duty.

The carnation show under the auspices of the Horticultural Association and Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association will be held February 16 in St. George's hall. We expect a fine exhibition of this truly popular flower.

I BOUGHT a good deal of stock through the REVIEW for my trade in 1904 and I want to continue the paper, as I find it very valuable.—NICHOLAS HIMMER, Meramec Highlands, Mo.

KRAMER'S POT HANGERS.

Neatest, simplest, most convenient and only practical device for converting ordinary flower pots into hanging baskets. They fit all standard made pots from 2 to 10 inches in diameter. The illustration shows how they are attached. Just the thing for hanging up Ferns, Begonias, etc. You can make room and money by their use. Try them.

Price with wire chain, as shown in cut, $1.00 per dozen by express. Sample dozen by mail, $1.25.

AND REDUCE YOUR COAL BILL

YOU WANT PROFITS which continue to grow. The reasons why "Burnham" Boilers will save coal for you is that there is a large combustion chamber, also a large active fire surface for each square foot of grate. They heat easily, quickly, efficiently. It takes but a short time to set up one of these boilers.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Watch the Azaleas.

Very soon your fall-imported azaleas, even if they are kept cool, will be making new growth from the base of the flower bud and if these young growths are not kept rubbed off they will take all the strength from the buds, which will shrivel up and you will have a fine green bush but no flowers. If well budded, keep all that young growth pinched off as soon as it appears.

There are a few varieties that flower poorly the spring following their importation, notably Bernard Andre and Bernard Andre alba. If you see there are not enough flower buds on them to make salable plants, then let these young shoots grow and you will have fine plants for a year from now. Summered-over azaleas seldom have this tendency to make a growth before they flower. There is no doubt that selling the plants the first spring is most desirable, yet the plants that did not sell, if given good and correct care during summer, make the finest plants and have increased fifty per cent in value.

Overdrawn Tulips.

I noticed last week some Yellow Prince tulips drawn up to 15-inch stems and rather spindling. It was no fault of the bulbs; they have had too high a temperature and too much shade. Every week now as we approach spring their gay flowers will want less heat and shade and by March 1 they will come along to perfection on an ordinary bench without any shade. While a good length of stem is desirable, when it is weak and spindling your crop is about valueless.

Good Ferns Always Salable.

There is sure to be at least the usual demand for a nice pot or pan of nephrolepis at Easter. We would a year ago have simply said Boston fern, but now there are Piersoni, Anna Foster and lastly comes perhaps the most useful of all, Scottii. Well grown plants of these ferns sell every day in the year. I think right at this season we are selling more moderate-sized plants of the old Boston form, plants worth from $2 to $3, than we are any three other plants, and well do they deserve their popularity.

Piersoni seemed to get a set-back last year after the first gush of admiration for its beauty. I notice of late if you can show a Piersoni in an 8-inch pot, fairly dense with fronds, that it will outsell any of them. We are not yet all on to the wrinkle of how to make salable plants of Piersoni as quickly as we can the Boston, but we know it is a most free and luxuriant grower or Mr. Pierson could not have grown that great and splendid stock in so short a time, for we saw the mother plant—not a very thrifty looking old hen, either—surrounded by her flock of little chickens. And now he is sending out Piersoni elegantissima, certainly a beautiful thing.

Anna Foster is very attractive when a specimen but it reverts too much. Scottii seems as if it would be the leading commercial nephrolepis. Its dense growth of fronds, even as a small plant, makes it a specimen in a 4-inch pot and its form in larger plants is perfection.

Making-up Pans.

Too often we are guilty of making up 8-inch or 10-inch pans of these ferns by lifting 3-inch or 4-inch plants from the benches and potting several of them together. They pass in appearance, yet it is not the honest thing to our customers. Plants for spring sales should be shifted now, so that they will become well established. There is no harm in putting three plants in one pan to make a good sized plant, but give them time to get well rooted and make a growth that takes off that stiffness which made-up pans always have. Don't keep these plants in the shade. Give them a light, sunny position and plenty of room to grow or you cannot produce a shapely plant. In a fern it is form, not color, that is admired. Give these ferns that you want to grow just for the next two months about 60 degrees at night.

Shifting Palms for Spring.

Moderate-sized palms have sold better the past year than they have for two or three years. Palm raising is best left to the specialist. We raised a few thousand kentias for two or three winters and are convinced. You can buy plants in 4-inch pots and upwards from the man who raises a hundred thousand cheaper than you can raise them. It is their specialty and there is nothing like division of labor. It is a feature of the highest civilization.

Palms just potted are dangerous to sell to a customer. The customer is crude enough about watering without giving him a newly shifted plant to wrestle with. Don't be afraid now to shift a palm that will want it this spring. Kentias need only a comparatively small pot, but a customer will be sure to want you to shift it if the pot looks too small. If skillfully done, a shift from a 5-inch to a 6-inch or from a 7-inch to an 8-inch pot will do. Larger plants can, of course, be given a shift of two or three inches. Be sure with small kentias not to bury the base of the stem beneath the soil, or not more than half an inch, and let the soil be well firmed between the old ball and the pot.

Arecas and latanias will enjoy a more liberal shift, say from a 5-inch to a 7-inch or from a 7-inch to a 9-inch pot. While shifting these palms it is a good time to thoroughly clean them. Brown scale and mealy bug appear sometimes in the best regulated families. A sponging with fir tree oil, kerosene emulsion or Gishurst Compound will thoroughly clean them and make them look bright.

Sowing Early Asters.

It will now be about time to sow some of the early asters if they can be planted out the end of April. It is only for very early cutting that the small early varieties are used. The Comet, Victoria, peony-flowered and, best of all, the late branching varieties, need not be sown until early March, and then if you want successive crops you should sow at intervals of three weeks up to the middle of May.

Improve Your Strain.

Did you ever try saving your own aster seed? All there is about it is to select a few dozen of the very finest blooms, tie them to a stake so they won't get cut or broken down and, when thoroughly ripe, put the heads away in a paper bag and clean them at your leisure. Although I am a thorough believer in the division of labor, it is worth while saving some asters when you see a very fine flower. It may be good in color, form or size. You will be pretty sure to get as fine flowers as the parent and in a few generations a considerable improvement will be effected if every year you select only the finest flowers for seed.

Antirrhinums.

In these days when flower gardening is desired to be interesting rather than gaudy, a bed of antirrhinums is well worth a place. There is a splendid strain of large-flowered varieties that make a beautiful flower bed. Separate colors can be used, yet a mixed bed of colors is, I think, prettier. If sown now and transplanted later into flats they can be planted out after danger of hard frost, for they are nearly hardy plants, and will commence to flower by the end of June.

Propagating Genista.

This should be a busy time with the propagating bed. Besides all your soft-wooded bedding plants, there are some cuttings to go in that will be wanted as flowering plants next winter and spring. The cytisus, or genista, is one. Don't take little, single shoots, but take little branches with two or three shoots and a heel where it came off a stronger growth. You can always find such growth on the larger plants. They root freely and will make good, salable plants in one year.

The Euphorbia.

Euphorbia fulgens (it used to be known to the trade as E. Jacquiniæflora) is another pretty and useful cut flower plant that can be propagated now. Twenty-five years ago this was a standard cut flower, but it went out of fashion. It is as easily grown as the poinsettia, which is also a euphorbia, but very different in appearance. Any small piece with two or three joints of this winter's growth, but not too soft, will root easily in sand in a bottom heat of 65 degrees. It needs that heat, as it is a tropical plant. They can be pinched as they grow and plunged outdoors during the hot months and planted out on the benches in September, or if you can spare the room they will make a freer growth if planted out of 3-inch pots on the bench in June. They will just delight in the tropical heat that the glass will afford. The long, dropping branches, studded with the vermilion flowers, make them invaluable for decorations, and nowadays they are a novelty in many places, and the public is always after a change. WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Care of Young Stock.

I have often noticed the inclination of some growers to let the young stock in a great measure shift for itself. Sometimes the space along the edge of a bench occupied by blooming plants is used to stand them in and they are even seen strung along the edge of the paths.

While every grower must utilize his space to bring the largest returns, there is such a thing as giving so much attention to immediate returns that the stock intended for future revenue is allowed to suffer. Placed in damp, half-lighted or badly-ventilated quarters, the only result will be weak, spindling plants, good subjects for disease.

It is not necessary to give them a house by themselves, or a bench having great head room, but it is imperative that there be room to breathe and this means space between the plants, a sunny situation and also provision for abundant ventilation. The time is quite near when the sun will raise the temperature very rapidly between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m., therefore the matter of ventilation is of great importance.

For several years we have used a side bench on the west of a north and south house. A side ventilator opening directly out from this bench has contributed much toward the thrifty growth we have been able to maintain. After planting out time, this bench is filled with bedding or vegetable plants, followed by mums to be lifted and potted in late August, then filled with field-grown, dwarf stevia harvested during December and January, when it is again ready for young carnations. I make this digression to show this space is a paying one, withal it is intended mainly for the reception of young stock.

The importance of keeping clear of insect pests cannot be too strongly urged, as by their means various diseases gain entrance. Aphides are the most prevalent and at the same time the easiest to combat. They invariably occupy the tender leaves in the heart of the plant and are difficult to dislodge, but with regular fumigation as a preventive, all trouble will be avoided. The appearance of red spider indicates decidedly wrong treatment; probably too high temperature and close atmosphere have weakened the plants. Such conditions are eagerly seized upon by these pests and once established are, like the Russians in Corea, hard to unseat, but it can and must be done. Geo. S. Osborn.

Handling Stock of Novelties.

By this time you are receiving your stock of new varieties, and a few hints regarding the care of the cuttings and plants will not be amiss. Inform your local express agent not to send any of your boxes out unless the wagon is coming directly to your place, and not then if the weather is cold. Have him call you up by 'phone and then you can send for the box and have the stock protected from the cold. If the box shows any signs of having been exposed to the cold, do not open it in a warm room, but keep it in a cool shed for several hours, so it can warm up gradually. You will find in nearly all cases it is advisable to open the boxes in a cool room rather than in a warm one.

Before unwrapping have everything ready to pot up the cuttings, and do not unwrap too many at a time. Remember that these cuttings are not altogether the same as those you take from your cutting bed. They have been packed up close for perhaps three or four days and are softer than when they were taken out of the sand and will wilt quicker. The soil should be the same as you use for your own cuttings, good rotted sods, the same as you use for planting, except that you do not mix in any bone or other fertilizer.

The size of pot will depend largely on the cuttings and how well they are rooted. For well rooted cuttings we use mostly 2½-inch pots, but for cuttings that are not strong or well rooted we use 2-inch. Do not pot too deeply, but set the cuttings into the soil deep enough so they will stand up well. Pot firmly. As soon as they are potted and set away water them sufficiently so the water will go to the bottom of the pot. After the water has soaked in dump one of them out and see if it was sufficient. In case you use new pots you will frequently have to water twice, unless you soak the pots before potting.

Cover the cuttings with paper the first two days, whether the sun shines or not, and spray them each morning before covering. On sunny days they will need shading at least a week, and if the sun is quite strong dampen the papers about noon to keep them from drawing moisture from below. Set them on a good light bench, where the sun will strike them full. Always bear in mind that this is your next season's stock, and the best of culture in the field will not rectify any neglect the young plants are subjected to before they are planted out.

About 48 to 50 degrees is best for them. They will make a strong, sturdy growth with thick stems and short joints, and when you top them they will break from several eyes. After they have taken hold good, do not spray them except to syringe for red spider or other insects. Watch them closely for any kind of disease, and as soon as you notice any signs pick off the diseased leaves and apply the proper remedies. Do not over-water them, but rather keep them a little on the dry side after active growth commences; the growth will be firmer and healthier.

Now, all the above applies to cuttings that arrive in good condition. But suppose you receive a box that shows that the contents have been subjected to more or less frost. If you see it before opening the box, set it in a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees for about twelve hours and let it warm up gradually. If you open it before making the discovery, dip the cuttings into a pail of cool water several minutes before unwrapping and set in a cool place an hour or two before potting. Avoid sudden changes in all cases.

Two Sides of the Flower of Carnation Fred Burki.

If the cuttings are not so well rooted as you might wish, don't dump them back into the box and send them back to the shipper, but notify him at once and take the best of care of them. If he is a fair minded business man he will make allowance or replace what you lose through his fault. If among them are some that had the roots broken off in packing, they will seldom fail to root if you stick them into your propagating bed. That is much wiser than to pot them along with the rest. This often happens with some varieties; one of the worst is Mrs. Lawson. The roots branch out so much that the main root, where it joins the cutting, is often not able to support the large bunch of roots and the sand that clings to them.

When you pay a good price for novelties you naturally expect good cuttings, well rooted, and you have a perfect right to. But on the other hand bear in mind that in nine cases out of ten the disseminator is pushed to the limit for early deliveries and often he is hardly to be blamed if he takes a batch out of the sand a few days sooner than he ought. If the cuttings are the right sort and they only lack in quantity of roots, you should not lose your temper. Stick them into the cutting bed a week or two and you need not lose any of them. The disseminator is in most cases a hard worked and much abused man. Everybody demands early delivery, and unless he is able to calculate well he is apt to over-book on the early propagations, and then is when his troubles commence. So have patience and trust him to do the very best he can for you, and if he falls short of your expectations don't judge him too harshly. A. F. J. BAUR.

CAUSE OF STEM-ROT.

In the report of the carnation convention I read where Mr. Weber and others gave it as their opinion that much stem-rot originates in the cutting bench. I, too, think so. It may be that my experience will be of interest to some readers of the REVIEW. I have a range of three-quarter span houses running east and west, long span and ventilator facing south in all except the north house, which has its long span and ventilator facing north. Years ago, when stem-rot first began, I had my cutting bench in a center house under the long span, with bottom heat and no direct air, as the air from the next house could not reach the bench owing to there being no open space between the houses and the ventilators in the same house gave no direct air on that bench. Consequently there was always a warm moisture, very conducive to fungus, as I had to water often on account of the bottom heat. Cutting bench fungus started with a vengeance. I lost great patches two and three feet square all over the bench. Each day I would have to throw out the dead cuttings by the handful, and of those that managed to escape some would die after planting into soil and others would die by the hundreds in the field, and still others after planting in the houses in the fall, and so on all through the winter, till by spring my houses would only be half full.

I was nearly at my wits' end. I tried using fresh sand each year and thoroughly drying the bench and then whitewashing it and planting in fresh soil each year to check it, but all to no purpose; the disease went from bad to worse until it occurred to me that the trouble lay in the situation of my cutting bench. So I changed it, and from that time, which was eight or nine years ago, up to the present I have had no trace of cutting bench fungus or stem-rot except when we have a wet summer; then a few plants may go off in the field, but very few, and out of 15,000 planted in the houses not more than ten or twelve have had to be replaced.

My cutting bench ever since has been in a house with the long span and ventilator facing north. The bench used is under the short span and facing the ventilators of two houses, as the gutter connecting those two houses is about two and one-half feet from the bench and is open, allowing a free circulation of air to play over the well shaded bench. There is no heat whatever under the bench and very little in the whole house, only one flow and return, 4-inch pipe, along one side and across both ends, which fails to keep the house above freezing point in severe weather. Of course cuttings root very slowly in such a cold house, but every one roots and makes a strong and healthy plant. I have only to water them once, when first put in the sand. I am positively sure, from my own experience, that if benches that are free from drip, with no bottom heat and with plenty of air when necessary, are used instead of out-of-the-way benches that cannot be used for anything else, stem-rot would disappear. R. FISCHER.

CARNATION FRED BURKI.

At the Detroit carnation convention a year ago there was no variety which attracted more favorable attention than Carnation Fred Burki. This is a white seedling raised by John Murchie, at Sharon, Pa., and named for the well known cut flower grower for the Pittsburg market. It has fulfilled its early promise and this season has given better results than before. One of the accompanying illustrations shows a bench of this variety at Mr. Murchie's establishment and the other shows the front and back view of the flower. Mr. Murchie says that he does not profess that it is a first-class show flower or that it is the freest bloomer or that it is free from all the ills the carnation is heir to, but he finds that it is the only white for which he has use on his place. It has bloomed constantly since early in October and up to February 1 he had cut ten blooms to the plant, every one salable and no burst calyxes. The stems are good and strong. Mr. Murchie and S. S. Skidelsky are putting Fred Burki on the market jointly and report a good sale for the cuttings everywhere among those who have seen the stock or the flower.

NOTES ON CARNATION GROWING.

[A paper by Edward A. Stroud, read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, February 7, 1905.]

I have been asked to speak on the carnation and hardly know why, being probably the youngest grower around Philadelphia. However, if my experience will be of interest to any of you I am pleased to give it, telling you of our methods, which do not differ, as far as I know, from the general cultivation of the divine flower.

Doubtless after the rose the carnation is the most useful of flowers, its keeping qualities and the low price for which it can be bought bringing it in contact with the greatest number of people. There has been some advancement made in the culture of the carnation, due to the introduction of Lawson, by Peter Fisher, which, to my mind, marks the dividing line between the old and the new.

The carnation industry may be classed under three heads: First, the growing of the flower for the public; second, the production for cuttings for the trade; and, third, the raising of seedlings. With us it would be impossible to handle the three together and we think each grower should decide for himself which branch he and his place are best suited to and which will bring him the best results. We have taken up the cut flower production and our experience has been a practical one. As far as we can see there is no great secret connected with producing the flowers; we have tried to follow nature's laws, using common sense, close attention to details, cleanliness and houses well ventilated.

One of the most essential points, undoubtedly, is to have good stock to start with, for if the young stock is unhealthy there is little hope of ever obtaining first-class blooms. We select our stock carefully, from flowering stems as much as possible, but of course on some of the new varieties we buy we are compelled to cut closer in order to get sufficient stock. We first put in the sand those that take the longest time to make plants, such as Prosperity, Lawson and Flamingo, following with those that grow more quickly. When rooted we pot them in 2-inch pots, then into 3-inch and, if necessary, into 4-inch. We take great care in watering, not allowing the young plants to suffer at any time for want of it; this insures us clean growth.

Field vs. Indoor Culture.

From the propagating house we move them into the field or into the bench, the latter method being adopted by most of our modern growers. Our slight experience with indoor culture has not been a decided success over field culture, and we think that in our climate, situated as we are, a compromise between the two is much the best. We have adopted the plan of early propagating, planting in the field as soon as the weather permits and lifting the plants the middle of June. These measures have given us the best results, although we feel that to make a fair test, planting in the house should be made the same time as in the field, and not early in June, as we heretofore have done.

The objection to indoor culture might be the throwing out of our plants before Decoration day and the poor prices obtainable during the chrysanthemum season. We throw out our old plants in July, take out the soil, whitewash the benches and then give a thorough fumigation, after which the soil is replaced as quickly as possible, extra labor being hired for this purpose. Last year our houses (of which there are three, each 30x308) were emptied on July 17 and planted with new stock by August 3. This we consider very important as it would be very poor economy to let the work drag along.

Alexander Montgomery, Jr.

The Compost.

We make a compost heap every fall, consisting of one part cow manure to three parts of soil, adding some air-slaked lime to sweeten things up a bit. We turn the pile once in the spring and again before it is wheeled into the houses. There is one point in regard to soil which we consider very important, what we term its mechanical condition, which means a soil which will drain water freely, and at the same time distribute food to the roots. This is particularly important after planting from the field.

The bewildering subject of stem-rot and its causes is, to my mind, due to impaired root action and a drowning process of watering. This can occur in the propagating bench, the pot, the flats, or the fields, and a check of some sort is generally responsible for it.

We plant carefully, firming the ground around each plant, and resort to frequent syringings, watering plants as little as possible while they are getting established. During planting we shade the houses lightly with cloth, removing it as soon as the plants have taken hold of the soil. Then the daily routine of staking, disbudding and watering begins and we are underway.

What Varieties.

The question of what varieties to grow is always an interesting one, the tendency nowadays being after something new, and it is hard to resist the temptation to buy new varieties on seeing the exhibits at our flower shows. It is well to be progressive but we would advise the man with limited glass not to attempt too many. Three or four, in the various colors, which require the same treatment, is best. It takes some time to become acquainted with the carnation and the special care it likes and we do not pass judgment without giving each variety a fair trial, which cannot always be accomplished in a year. The competition in carnations is becoming stronger every day. The people no longer ask for a white, pink or red, but mention the name of the bloom desired and for this reason we think it is a good thing to tag each with its name when it goes to market; in this way the public become acquainted with the different varieties and we find out what is most popular.

By keeping careful records we find that those that produce the greatest number of flowers are not necessarily the most profitable. Our experience proves that it pays to work together with our commission man, keeping him posted as to what we will have and when we will ship. This gives him an opportunity to make sales which he might otherwise lose. We advise frequent visits to the wholesaler, not necessarily to see the proprietor but to examine the goods there, see how they are keeping and to compare them with the product of other growers. Valuable lessons may be learned in this way. It is hardly necessary to call your attention to careful bunching and packing.

In conclusion, I would quote Mr. Fred Lemon when he said at the carnation convention, "If you wish to succeed, nothing is too much trouble."

ALEX. MONTGOMERY, JR.

The subject of this sketch, whose portrait appears herewith, was born at Natick, Mass. in 1875, and was graduated from the Massachusetts Agricultural College in 1898. In the department of military science, which is a required course, he attained the rank of captain in his senior year and received commendation for having shown marked proficiency in this branch. Since graduation he has been elected to membership in the Phi Kappa Phi, one of the honorary Greek letter fraternities which has recently been established at this institution.

Mr. Montgomery is an enthusiastic rose grower, and has a knowledge of his specialty such as seldom comes to a man so young in years, as he has served in all departments of the industry, the Waban Rose Conservatories, under his father, Alex. Montgomery, Sr., president of the American Rose Society, with whom he is now associated in the management of what has long been recognized as one of New England's leading establishments for the production of high-grade cut flowers.

Mr. Montgomery, Jr., is the author of the article on Grafted Roses, which has been running in the REVIEW, and which is the most important contribution to the literature of the rose made in many years.

PROPAGATING FICUS.

I shall be glad to read in the REVIEW some directions for propagating the rubber tree, Ficus elastica. A. R.

The most common method of propagating Ficus elastica is by topping, this operation consisting in making a slanting cut about half way through the shoot of the ficus, and then binding a lump of damp moss about the size of a hen's egg, or a little larger, around the cut. The cut should be made about the fourth leaf from the top, and in order to keep the cut open to some extent it is a good practice to draw the binding twine through it before wrapping it around the moss.

The plants so treated are kept in a warm greenhouse, a temperature of 65 degrees being about right, and the moss kept continually moist and as soon as the roots are seen issuing through the moss the tops may be cut off below the moss, and potted up into 3-inch or 3½-inch pots, then placed in the same or a similar warm house, and shaded from the sun for about a week, by which time they should be sufficiently established to stand full exposure.

When potting off the cuttings do not attempt to remove the moss, or the tender young roots are likely to be broken.

At this season ficus tops may take from four to six weeks to root, but during the summer they will frequently form roots in about three weeks, much depending upon the condition of the shoots, large and sappy growths requiring more time than the short-jointed and firm side shoots, and of course the plants must have regular conditions of heat and moisture to ensure success.

A BED OF FICUS.

A simple but much admired ornamental bed in the outdoor display at Lincoln park, Chicago, during the season of 1904 was planted with Ficus elastica and Grevillea robusta, with a border of ivy. Ficus elastica alone is very stiff, but together with the graceful Grevillea robusta makes a very harmonious effect and each helps the other to bring out its best points. Head-gardener Frey says that the grevilleas were seedlings, sowed in January, and the ficus were rooted in February, grown on in 4½-inch pots and, after having been gradually hardened off, were plunged with the pots right in the hot sun at the beginning of June, where they kept on growing delightfully and attracted much attention.

PITTSBURG FLORISTS' CLUB.

Tuesday evening, February 7, was the regular monthly meeting of the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club. It was carnation night and election of officers for the ensuing year. It was one of the largest meetings we have ever held, the hall being filled to the door. The routine business showed a membership of 153, every bill paid and money in the treasury, and two new nominations for membership. The club is one of the most vigorous and most alive in the country and one in which there is absolutely no dissension, clique or jealousy.

Mr. Falconer, the retiring president, having been in the chair for several years, declined a renomination, and T. P. Langhans was elected president. All of the other officers of the preceding year were re-elected. A silver service was presented Mr. Falconer.

We had a splendid lot of carnations on exhibition and members Burki, Clarke and Wyland, who had been at the Chicago carnation meeting last month, told us a good deal about what they saw there and the kind treatment they received. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. showed a vase each of all the leading varieties now being consigned to them. Albert Lorch, of Dehaven, sent a mixed lot of magnificent flowers, and so did T. Jenkinson, Mr. Peacock's gardener.

F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., sent a large bunch of White Lawson and also one of Variegated Lawson, splendid flowers, and they kept well. The Pittsburg Gazette became enthused over these Lawsons and printed a prominent illustrated article about them in its next Sunday's edition.

John E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., sent a fine lot of the magnificent scarlet variety, his own namesake, also of a variegated one called Imperial, a yellow named Star of Bethlehem, and a most promising white one labeled No. 35. The scarlet in particular was highly favored. We had it last year and its fine keeping qualities were well remembered.

My Maryland, an inimitable white, came from H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., large in size, graceful and erect in form, purity in color and delightfully fragrant. It is a gem.

Guttman & Weber, New York, sent a box of their lovely scarlet, Victory. It captured every heart. It stood up well and kept in fine form for several days. Our members who saw it at the Chicago meeting declared emphatically in favor of it.

A. B. Davis & Son, Purcellville, Va., sent a generous exhibit of the Red Sport of Maceo that the members regarded favorably. Fred Burki declared that it had the look of a fine commercial variety. Crisis, a very fine scarlet, large and of fine form and beautiful color, and a good keeper, was shown by J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa.

Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, sent a lot of plants of hardy pinks in 4-inch

Doubtless after the rose the carnation is the most useful of flowers, its keeping qualities and the low price for which it can be bought bringing it in contact with the greatest number of people. There has been some advancement made in the culture of the carnation, due to the introduction of Lawson, by Peter Fisher, which, to my mind, marks the dividing line between the old and the new.

The carnation industry may be classed under three heads: First, the growing of the flower for the public; second, the production for cuttings for the trade; and, third, the raising of seedlings. Well as it would be impossible to handle the three together and we think each grower should decide for himself which branch he and his place are best suited to and which will bring him the best results. We have taken up the cut flower production and our experience has been a practical one. As far as we can see there is no great secret connected with producing the flowers; we have tried to follow nature's laws, using common sense, close attention to details, cleanliness and houses well ventilated.

One of the most essential points, undoubtedly, is to have good stock to start with, for if the young stock is unhealthy there is little hope of ever obtaining first class blooms. We select our stock carefully, from flowering stems as much as possible, but of course on some of the new varieties we buy we are compelled to cut closer in order to get sufficient stock. We first put in the sand those that take the longest time to make plants, such as Prosperity, Lawson and Flamingo, following with those that grow more quickly. When rooted we pot them in 2 inch pots, then into 3-inch and, if necessary, into 4 inch. We take great care in watering, not allowing the young plants to suffer at any time for want of it; this insures us clean growth.

Field vs. Indoor Culture.

From the propagating house we move them into the field or into the bench, the latter method being adopted by most of our modern growers. Our slight experience with indoor culture has not been a decided success over field culture, and we think that in our climate, situated as we are, a compromise between the two is much the best. We have adopted the plan of early propagating, planting in the field as soon as the weather permits and lifting the plants the middle of June. These measures have given us the best results, although we feel that to make a fair test, planting in the house should be made the same time as in the field, and not early in June, as we heretofore have done.

The objection to indoor culture might be the throwing out of our plants before Decoration day and the poor prices obtainable during the chrysanthemum season. We throw out our old plants in July, take out the soil, whitewash the benches and then give a thorough fumigation, after which the soil is replaced as quickly as possible, extra labor being hired for this purpose. Last year our houses (of which there are three, each 30x308) were emptied on July 17 and planted with new stock by August 3. This we consider very important as it would be very poor economy to let the work drag along.

Alexander Montgomery, Jr.

The Compost.

We make a compost heap every fall, consisting of one part cow manure to three parts of soil, adding some air-slaked lime to sweeten things up a bit. We turn the pile once in the spring and again before it is wheeled into the houses. There is one point in regard to soil which we consider very important, what we term its mechanical condition, which means a soil which will drain water freely, and at the same time distribute food to the roots. This is particularly important after planting from the field.

The bewildering subject of stem-rot and its causes is, to my mind, due to impaired root action and a drowning process of watering. This can occur in the propagating bench, the pot, the flats, or the fields, and a check of some sort is generally responsible for it.

We plant carefully, firming the ground around each plant, and resort to frequent syringings, watering plants as little as possible while they are getting established. During planting we shade the houses lightly with cloth, removing it as soon as the plants have taken hold of the soil. Then the daily routine of staking, disbudding and watering begins and we are underway.

What Varieties.

The question of what varieties to grow is always an interesting one, the tendency nowadays being after something new, and it is hard to resist the temptation to buy new varieties on seeing the exhibits at our flower shows. It is well to be progressive but we would advise the man with limited glass not to attempt too many. Three or four, in the various colors, which require the same treatment, is best. It takes some time to become acquainted with the carnation and the special care it likes and we do not pass judgment without giving each variety a fair trial, which cannot always be accomplished in a year. The competition in carnations is becoming stronger every day. The people no longer ask for a white, pink or red, but mention the name of the bloom desired and for this reason we think it is a good thing to tag each with its name when it goes to market; in this way the public become acquainted with the different varieties and we find out what is most popular.

By keeping careful records we find that those that produce the greatest number of flowers are not necessarily the most profitable. Our experience proves that it pays to work together with our commission man, keeping him posted as to what we will have and when we will ship. This gives him an opportunity to make sales which he might otherwise lose. We advise frequent visits to the wholesaler, not necessarily to see the proprietor but to examine the goods there, see how they are keeping and to compare them with the product of other growers. Valuable lessons may be learned in this way. It is hardly necessary to call your attention to careful bunching and packing.

In conclusion, I would quote Mr. Fred Lemon when he said at the carnation convention, "If you wish to succeed, nothing is too much trouble."

pots. These were very welcome, for they are perfectly hardy here and do well and live year after year, spreading into big mats, which in early summer are a sheet of white or pink or purple blooms, according to variety. Anyone doing jobbing, gardening, park or cemetery work should grow these hardy pinks extensively. They always give satisfaction.

Blind Bros. have their messenger boys togged up in a very stylish uniform, and were questioned about it. We thought it very proper and complimented them on this get-up and progressive step. "Yes, that's all very well," explained Ernest Ludwig. "I tried that thing years ago, and I would have a new boy maybe every week or every month, and that meant a new uniform every time I had a new boy, so I quit it. I wasn't going to clothe every kid in Allegheny."

T. P. LANGHANS.

T. P. Langhans, the new president of the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club, is one of the men of the time, about 31 years old, full of energy and a shrewd business man. He entered the florist's business about February, 1896, as bookkeeper for G. & J. W. Ludwig, of Pittsburg, but the following year entered into partnership with Frank Breitenbaugh in the Allegheny Market, under the firm name of Langhans & Co., and continued until July, 1898, when he with Fred Burki and W. A. Clarke entered into partnership as the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., Ltd., Mr. Langhans acting as secretary. As Mr. Langhans does nothing by halves, his election to its head speaks for a successful year for the club.

SETTING FOR TUBULAR BOILER.

I have a horizontal tubular boiler three feet in diameter with a steam dome. There are twenty-eight 3-inch flues eight feet long. The grate bars are three feet. I would like a description of the brickwork to go around the boiler. Is nut or pea coal cheaper to burn than lump coal? How often should the flues be cleaned? How many square feet of glass can be heated with this boiler? How often ought I to have to fire it to keep up steam when it is 20 degrees below zero outside? BEGINNER.

The brickwork suitable for your boiler can be shown better by a diagram than by description. See the accompanying illustration. The boiler should be placed so that the water line in the boiler will be three or four feet below the lowest point in the returns in the houses, so as to give a good gravity return. The boiler pit should be large enough to allow room in front for clearing the flues and space enough in the rear to clean out any soot or ashes which may collect on the under side of the boiler shell or in the space back of the fire-box. A door should also be provided at the rear, close to the bottom of the boiler, to admit of cleaning this part of the boiler. The excavation for the boiler setting need not be brought down to a common level. The floor level need only be carried back far enough to give space for the ash pit and bridge wall, the earth may be allowed to remain intact back of the bridge wall to the height of the ash pit. This will save both in cost of excavation and cost of brickwork. This is shown in the sketch between H and J.

About 700 fire brick will be needed and about 4,000 arch brick to build the setting. Walls eighteen inches thick should be carried up above the fire line, but from that point up they may be reduced to thirteen inches. The brick work should be made about two inches larger, inside measurement, than the diameter of the boiler over all, and after the boiler has been hung on its lugs, or bearings, a course of brick should be set up to within about a quarter of an inch of the boiler shell. The brickwork should be carried about two courses above the level of the top of the shell of the boiler. The space above the boiler should be filled with sand or dry ashes to form a jacket to prevent loss by direct radiation from the boiler.

An 8-inch stack should be large enough but I believe that a 10-inch one would be better and that it should be high enough to extend a foot or two above the ridge of any near-by buildings. In case there are no buildings I would not make the stack less than sixteen to twenty feet tall.

In general it may be said that pea or buckwheat will be found to be the most economical form of anthracite coal to use in a low pressure plant. With hard coal it should be sufficient to clean the flues once in two days; with soft coal they should be cleaned every twenty-four hours.

The boiler specified has a capacity for about 500 feet of radiation, which should carry about 2,500 feet of glass at 70 degrees, or about 3,000 feet at 60 degrees. The frequency of firing will depend altogether upon the efficiency of the dampers, the kind of fuel used and the ability of the fireman to make a fire.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

No sooner had we materialized a respectable temperature in the east than they sent on a 24 degrees below zero zephyr from Chicago that blasted all the hopes of the market's recovery. All last week was severely cold until Saturday. Then came a closing out of gathered surplus, especially of violets, price being the last consideration. It would be impossible to say how many were in the ice boxes, or of what uncertain age some of them had become. Certain it is that hundreds of thousands were disposed of at $1 per thousand. No wonder the grower opens inquiring eyes upon returns, little realizing that very often he has received a considerable advance upon the price actually obtained by the conscientious commission man. But Saturday's temperature was too good to last and, after Sunday's steady downpour a chilly greeting was not unexpected.

Roses have become plentiful again. Their quality is superb, but prices have fallen all along the line. Few Beauties reached over 50 cents and with rare exceptions could Brides and Maids command over 12 cents for special grades. Carnations flood the market. Inferior stock accumulates heavily and even the finest will not clear without heavy concessions. Bulbous stock continues to arrive in battalions. The finest daffodils hang back at $2 per hundred and tulips and narcissi are over abundant. A change for the better cannot be delayed much longer. The consolation of "it cannot be worse" has been doing the comforting stunt so long it has lost its efficacy. Big balls, receptions and even the dinners of the holiday were not potent enough to dispel the gloom. To add to the general pessimism many of the wholesalers are under the weather, some of them seriously ill. Jack Gunther and Jos. Millang were fighting bad cases of la grippe all the week.

Various Notes.

The Arion ball is over and Hanft Bros. did themselves proud, as has been their custom for a quarter of a century.

The dinner of the Republican Club, which the President attended at the Waldorf Astoria, was made brilliant by the splendid floral decorations of Wadley & Smythe. American Beauties and pink roses, with an abundance of palms were used. Boutonnieres of white carnations for 1,500 were provided and the ladies' corsages consisted of American Beauties tied with red, white and blue ribbons and tiny American flags.

Retail windows these days give no indication of the outside weather. It would take no flight of the imagination when gazing at them to see the robins' nests again. Easter and spring will arrive on the same train this year and people are beginning preparations for the holiday rejoicing already. The buying of flowering plants has begun. With the enormous supply in and around New York, it is a certainty there will not be enough to go around. The early birds ought to be flying to Whitestone and Rutherford and College Point and Flatbush, without delay. Procrastination is not only the thief of time, but of opportunity.

Club Meeting.

Notwithstanding the cold wave, the banner meeting of the New York Club was held on Monday evening, over 200 being present, nearly half of whom were the lady visitors. It was ladies' night and a royal time was provided for the fair guests, which they heartily enjoyed. Professor Black sang Scotch songs in a rich baritone voice that stirred every Scottish soul in the assemblage, John Birnie and Alex. Wallace giving signs of exaltation before the music of the bagpipes ceased. Mrs. L. J. Kreshover played the piano accompaniments for Prof. Breining, tenor soloist. Miss Bessie Butters played the violin with rare skill and sweetness, her sister, Miss Marguerite, accompanying her on the piano.

All the artists were frequently encored. Professor Cameron, the bagpipe king, played his pipes skillfully and was in Highland costume, as were Jessie Cameron and Annie and Jennie Birnie. Their sword and fancy dances were one of the greatest hits of the evening. J. B. Nugent sang some of the old songs sweetly and his fellow members voted him the star performer of the occasion. The carnations were distributed among the ladies at the close of the entertainment.

The exhibitors of the evening were J. E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa., a vase of John E. Haines; J. L. Dillon, Crisis; Wm. Duckham, Enchantress; Guttman & Weber, Victory; M. A. Patten, Mikado; John Reimels, pink seedling No. 31 and Variegated Lawson; Sea Cliff Nursery, pink seedling Long Island Beauty; H. Weber & Sons, variegated seedling No. 63 and My Maryland; F. R. Pierson Co., Winsor, Variegated Lawson, Daheim, Patten, White Lawson, Flamingo and Enchantress; The Cottage Gardens, Lieut. Peary, Robert Craig, The President and a vase of seventy-five mixed seedlings; Max Wirman, red seedling Max Wirman; Young & Nugent, vase of cape jasmines; Peter Bisset, new pink seedling rose; Palmer & Son, Red Lawson; Robert C. Pye, No. 31, a sport of Enchantress; John N. May, Phyllis.

The Daheim and Victory on exhibition formed a part of the table decorations at the dinner of the Hungarian Republican Club on Tuesday evening, President Roosevelt being a guest of the organization. The whole exhibit was most creditable to all concerned and in beauty, value, variety and novelty has never been excelled at any club meeting in this country.

Mr. Weber, of Oakland, Md., the essayist of the evening, read a very interesting and exhaustive paper on "Carnation Diseases." Mr. O'Mara followed the essayist with an interesting and amusing criticism elaborating on the subjects of the origin of disease, immunity and sanitation. F. R. Pierson gave an interesting address on similar lines, citing his own experiences. Mr. Haines, of Bethlehem, was called upon for particulars concerning his fine red, John E. Haines and A. J. Guttman spoke on Victory, the great scarlet that is to be disseminated in 1906 through the F. R. Pierson Co. Mr. Weber spoke lovingly of his child, My Maryland, whose parentage is Lawson and Norway and which he characterizes as "an invigorated Lawson."

Mr. O'Mara, for the committee on awards, reported at length the new rules governing the committee's work in the future and the consideration of the same was deferred until March. Five new members were elected and six nominations were read. The question box contained an inquiry as to the relative merits of the rose, the chrysanthemum, the carnation and the fern and the president appointed, to lead the discussion at the next meeting, Harry May, Wm. Duckham, John Birnie and John Scott.

The Bowling Club met at 3 p. m. on Monday. Arrangements were made to accept the challenge on the Hoboken alleys on March 4, to begin promptly at 7 o'clock. John Birnie promises a strenuous time. For the deciding game with Madison, the rival captains are authorized to determine the alleys and the date. Several visitors enjoyed the afternoon bowling. It was also determined to change the hours of bowling to 4 o'clock on Monday afternoons, the new departure to commence on Monday, February 20.

The Market.

February, the month of carnations that are for us and holidays that are not for us, is proving a month of snow and intense cold, interfering with the natural flow of business. Conditions and prices are very much the same as a week ago. There is a good deal of shipping business, but an irregular local demand, and a good supply of stock except in choice roses. Spring flowers are more and more in evidence, with prices easier. Carnations are not always sellers. An enterprising fakir opened a store at Twelfth and Market streets to work off a surplus of divine flowers last Saturday with a bell attraction. St. Valentine's created a fair demand, especially for pansies, violets, etc., but the weather was very unfavorable.

Carnation Night.

The February meeting of the Florists' Club was exceedingly well attended. A very interesting display of new and high grade carnations was the attraction. H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., sent My Maryland, a superb white of great size and substance that won universal admiration. Alexander J. Guttman, of Weber & Guttman, New York, brought Victory, a very fine red. The vase of fifty blooms was strikingly handsome. John E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., brought a bunch of his new red seedling, John E. Haines, a large full flower, borne erect on strong stems, which seemed to please the critics, also a number of promising seedlings, among them Star of Bethlehem, a very free blooming yellow. Davis Bros., of Bloomsburg, Pa., sent their new scarlet, Crisis, which looked well; Mary Albert, a pleasing white, and an unnamed pink.

Joseph Black's Son & Co., of Hightstown, N. J., sent four flowers and buds of a white seedling of which they have only two plants as yet. This seedling has blue blood and is worth watching. John Kuhn brought four pretty seedlings. A pink No. 13 was very attractive. There was also another light pink of promise, No. 16, a deeper pink and a red.

Last but by no means least, the Strafford Flower Farm brought seven standard varieties of fine quality, Enchantress, Prosperity, Judge Hinsdale Mrs. Lawson, Harry Fenn, Flamingo and Mrs. Patten. They were arranged by a floral artist, George Faulkner, and were greatly admired.

John Westcott called the meeting to order, G. C. Watson acting as secretary. After the minutes of two previous meetings were read, Robert Kift's committee report on the exhibits adopted and several new members elected, Edward A. Stroud read a very clever paper on "New Ideas in Carnations." The paper was clear and forceful and full of thought. Mr. Stroud, who received a hearty vote of thanks, had mastered an attack of grippe in order to be present. The remarks that followed were very interesting. Horace T. Dumont closed the meeting by singing two songs, which were heartily applauded. William Swayne, of Kennett Square, Pa., was present.

The Amateur Rose Growers.

Ask any well informed city florist who had the most American Beauty roses at Christmas. The answer will be Myers & Samtman. Go out to their place at Wyndmoor and you will be convinced. Philadelphia has a great reputation for Beauties, but it is doubtful if any of her famous places ever cut as many long-stemmed flowers for the holidays as did this firm during the last days of 1904. Their plants have proved doers, sun or no sun, and the way they stand by their customers, support the Flower Market and fill any stray orders during the busy season is quite wonderful. Good as are the figures of the cut, they are not so impressive as the appearance of the plants, bearing evidence of heavy cutting, yet with quantities of long, straight shoots everywhere, mostly topped with bud or bloom.

The stock is all bench grown, an interesting point in these days of solid beds. The foreman, Marty, would like to try solid beds, but he says the firm won't hear of it while the plants bloom so. Sunrise has done exceptionally well in the narrow propagating house. The first batch of Beauty cuttings is nicely rooted, ready for potting. Much of the firm's success is due to the advanced ideas of Frank P. Myers, who had the courage to specialize at a time when general collections of varieties were the rule, and the work of George Samtman, who has become a past-master in the art of distributing his product.

The Germantown Society.

The February meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society was held last Monday evening in Association hall. S. Mendelson Meehan had arranged an elaborate program entitled "Our Horticultural Indebtedness to Japan." John T. Morris, president of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society, opened the subject with a very polished lecture, describing his trip to Japan and the places he had seen there. The lecture was illustrated by a set of stereopticon views collected by Mr. Morris while in Japan. They were charmingly colored and very interesting, showing tea and rice growing, various trees, water views, etc. The slides were handled by Dr. Norman H. Keyser.

George D. Clark, of Henry A. Dreer, followed with a practical paper on Japanese bulbs. Mr. Clark dwelt chiefly on lilies, describing varieties, their merits and their culture, a most valuable paper. The evening was closed with a paper from the pen of Joseph Meehan on "Trees and Shrubs of Japan" read by George Redles. This paper was clear, bright and full of interest. Two other papers were held over for want of time.

Various Notes.

Robert Crawford, Jr., now owns the greenhouses at Secane and H. T. Dumont is out of the Philadelphia Carnation Co.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. has sent out a neat little St. Valentine's blotter.

John Savage, of Mt. Airy, has rented Thomas Foulds' place at Gwynedd for five years. He took possession last Tuesday. The cut of the place, which is planted with Brides and Maids, will go to the Flower Market.

H. H. Battles is getting some very choice valley from his place at Thornhedge.

M. Rice & Co. are already hard at work with Easter stock. They have had a novel experience—novel to most people at any rate—having two bills paid twice.

The junior partner of the commission house of William J. Baker calls attention to some extra fine valley they are receiving.

Answers to Correspondents.

REVIEW readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia to Phil in care of any of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

29.—Do you know of anyone growing first grade carnations in very heavy soil, such as that found very near your city? Yes. Edward A. Stroud, of the Strafford Flower Farm. The examples are, however, few, the bulk of carnations sent to this market being grown on light soil far from town, due more to economical reasons than on account of the soil.

30.—Would you suggest growing roses entirely in such soil? Yes, with proper additions to supply deficiencies. There have been instances of the soil being made lighter for certain varieties, but they are rare.

31.—Is Vesper giving any trouble as to keeping qualities? Yes, at times.

32.—Would you consider it a profitable market sort? Vesper is a free bloomer, has long stiff stems and is not apt to burst. It is a fine carnation, but unlikely to prove profitable.

33.—Is Golden Gate a profitable rose for the Philadelphia market? Golden Gate is hardly a variety for every day in this market. It has proved very profitable in limited quantities when well done. PHIL.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The market has been rather erratic the past week, very poor on some days and quite active and good on February 10 and 11. Weather conditions have militated against the producers as well as retailers. It has been too cold for the fakirs to do anything on the streets. They handle a lot of stuff during mild weather, which, while not of the best quality, would be largely lost if they did not purchase it.

Roses continue in rather short supply and maintain previous quotations. Carnations have brought about $3 per hundred for good stock, fancies and novelties making $4 to $6. Violets continue to arrive in large quantities. The top price has been 75 cents for the finest Princess of Wales. Good grades of both doubles and singles have made 50 cents, poorer samples going as low as 30 cents. Yellow trumpet narcissi are now arriving in big quantities. As a rule they have cleared out remarkably well, not a flower remaining unsold on one or two days. Prices average $2. Some extra fine Golden Spur made $3. Liliums are not plentiful, a few longiflorum beginning to supplement the Harrisii. Lily of the valley has been selling rather slowly. Sweet peas are now coming of very fine quality, Mont Blanc being most in evidence.

The Exhibition.

The regular mid-winter show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was this year joined in by the wholesale flower markets, each of which offered a number of prizes. The result was a very fine show, especially of carnations, and we hope to see this annual exhibition made one of the features of the local horticultural world. There is certainly no reason why, if the horticultural society and markets co-operate, it cannot be made a credit to Boston and one of the finest to be seen in the country.

Carnations had seventeen classes allotted to them and were, of course, the star feature of the show. Competition was quite good in nearly all classes. For the society's prizes, which called for twenty-five blooms of each color, Peter Fisher won for white with fine Lady Bountiful, M. A. Patten being second with The Belle, and H. A. Stevens Co. third with Wolcott. Patten showed a splendid vase of Lady Bountiful in which, however, one or two flowers were getting sleepy. For scarlet Backer & Co. were in the lead, C. E. Dickerman being second, each showing Flamingo. Enchantress won everything in the light pink class, Patten & Co., S. J. Goddard and Stevens Co. winning in order named. For dark pink Wm. Nicholson won with fine Lawson, L. E. Small being second for the same variety and Patten third for Nelson Fisher. Mrs. Patten was invincible in the variegated class, Messrs. Nicholson, Patten and Fisher being the winners. For crimson, Nicholson, Patten and Backer & Co. won, all showing Harry Fenn. In a good class of yellow Patten won with fine Dorothy Whitney, Backer & Co. being second and third with Dorothy Whitney and Eldorado.

In the Park street market classes for fifty blooms Peter Fisher won in the white class with splendid Lady Bountiful, Patten being second with the same variety. S. J. Reuter showed a fine vase of Vesper in this class. Peter Fisher won for scarlets with fine Flamingo. He was also in the lead for light pink with Enchantress, S. J. Reuter and E. N. Peirce & Co. being second and third. For dark pink Patten & Co. won with the best Nelson Fisher in the show, Reuter second with Lawson. Peter Fisher's new seedling, No. 113, was the winner in the crimson class. These were far ahead of any others shown in their color, stems stiff and flowers large and well formed, perhaps a trifle too dark to suit some, very similar in shade to Harlowarden, with which Reuter secured second prize. Mrs. Patten took everything in the variegated class, Patten & Co. leading, followed by Peter Fisher and the Stevens Co. Patten & Co. also won for yellow with Dorothy Whitney. Wm. Nicholson won for 100 mixed blooms with a fine vase.

The Music Hall market classes were well competed for. For fifty Fair Maid H. A. Stevens Co. won with finely colored flowers. A. Roper, who was second, had much larger flowers but somewhat lacking in color. For fifty blooms any white variety C. E. Dickerman won with White Lawson, L. E. Small being second with his seedling, No. 3. For twenty-five blooms of any new seedling Patten & Co. won with Mikado, L. E. Small being second with his seedling. For 100 double violets H. F. Woods won with fine Campbell, L. E. Small being second with the same variety. For 100 Princess of Wales H. F. Woods was again in the lead with splendid flowers, William Sim being second. For twenty-five mignonette Wm. Nicholson and A. H. Fewkes were winners. William Sim was first for 100 sweet peas with very fine Mont Blanc, Malcolm Orr being second for fine flowers of the same sort. For twenty-five blooms of any other rose than American Beauty, Waban Rose Conservatories were first for a fine vase of Wellesley. A special prize for 100 carnations in not over three varieties arranged for effect was won by Patten & Co.

The society's prizes for 100 double violets went to Malcolm Orr, L. E. Small and A. F. Coolidge, all showing Campbell. For 100 single Wm. Sim won with Princess of Wales. J. H. White, James Wheeler, gardener, who was second, showed larger flowers but a little paler in color. M. B. Dallachie was third. There was a strong entry for six plants of Primula obconica. G. F. Fabyan, James Stuart, gardener, was first and second and Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher, gardener, third. For six Primula stellata E. A. Clark, W. A. Riggs, gardener, was first and Mrs. J. L. Gardner second. E. J. Mitton, J. Lawson, gardener, had the best six Primula Sinensis, followed by G. F. Fabyan and Mrs. J. L. Gardner. For six Gloire de Lorraine begonias M. S. Stevens, Walter Angus, gardener, won with excellent plants, E. A. Clark being second.

In the way of miscellaneous exhibits Robert Cameron, from Harvard Botanic Garden, put up a fine table of Primula obconica and a nicely flowered batch of Lachenalia Nelsoni. Mrs. A. W. Blake, H. Wild, gardener, had a good plant of Cypripedium Dauthieri. Francis Skinner had a display of Primula Sinensis. A. M. Davenport had a nice lot of cyclamens. J. E. Rothwell, Emil Johannson, gardener, received a certificate of merit for Lælia x Mrs. M. Gratrix (L. cinnabarina x L. Digbyana), one of the prettiest cinnabarina crosses, flowers of a deep orange yellow color. The same exhibitor received honorable mention for Laelio-cattleya Adolphus (L. cinnabarina x Cattleya Acklandiæ).

E. N. Peirce & Co. showed a fine vase of their bright red seedling carnation, Lawson x Crane, which received honorable mention and promises to be a useful sort. Helen Goddard, from S. J. Goddard, recently referred to in the REVIEW, received a certificate of merit. Red Lawson grown by E. N. Peirce & Co. from Palmer's stock also won a certificate of merit, as did Winsor, shown by F. R. Pierson Co. and grown by Peter Murray. This latter is of a beautiful silvery pink color, just the color ladies like and is bound to become popular. We understand it will not be introduced until 1907.

Victory, from Guttman & Weber, scored the highest award of any new carnation in the exhibition, securing a silver medal. Nothing but favorable comments were heard in regard to it. Patten & Co. secured honorable mention for Mikado (Roosevelt x Prosperity). F. F. White and L. E. Small each showed their seedling whites, which had their quota of admirers.

Afterglow and Aristocrat from Richard Witterstaetter were delayed in transit from Cincinnati and some few blooms were frozen. They arrived ere the show closed and were the center of attraction. They seemed to stand up better than anything in the hall. Each secured a first-class certificate. While each variety had its admirers, Aristocrat seemed to be the favorite and should score higher when shown again. Patten & Co. showed Judge Hinsdale and Pink Patten in good shape. J. H. White had (not for competition) excellent vases of Enchantress and Mrs. Patten. John McFarland showed excellent lily of the valley. Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener, received a cultural certificate for a beautiful plant of Dendrobium Ainsworthi, carrying 300 flowers.

Various Notes.

Malcolm Orr, of Lynn, is forwarding superb Campbell violets and sweet peas to the new market.

The next meeting of the Gardener's and Florists' Club will occur on February 21. W. W. Rawson will lecture on "The Increase in Greenhouse Productiveness During the Past Twenty-five Years." There will be some interesting exhibits and no florist or gardener can well afford to absent himself from this meeting.

Prof. F. A. Waugh, of Amherst, lectured before the Horticultural Society on February 11, his subject being "Dwarf Fruit Trees; their Uses, Propagation and Management." At the meeting on February 18, Dr. Geo. T. Moore, of Wadington, will give a stereopticon lecture on "Bacteria as Fertilizers."

H. A. Cook, of Shrewsbury, who ships the bulk of his flowers to Welch Bros., has a magnificent lot of the dark blue Imperial violet which for length of stem and size of flower probably cannot be equalled in this section.

William Nicholson will grow Witterstaetter's new Aristocrat carnation next season in order to give eastern growers opportunities to see this variety growing. It will also enable him to show it in fine condition for the meeting of the Carnation Society in Boston in 1906.

Pans of bulbous stock are selling very well at the stores at present, daffodils being especial favorites. Azaleas and lilacs are also good sellers.

While many growers are condemning Flamingo and propose discarding it, some intend to grow it again, having found it profitable. John Barr and S. J. Goddard are among the latter. The first named grower has had great success with Manley, of which he is bringing in remarkably fine flowers.

Visitors the past week included A. J. Guttman, New York, F. R. Pierson and James T. Scott, Tarrytown, N. Y.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

We are still in the grasp of king winter, which has made transient trade very light. The regular volume of business has had quite an impetus since the first of February. Several social functions have made a large demand for select stock, which is decidedly scarce and has brought the best prices since Christmas. Good tea roses bring from 6 to 12 cents, Meteor from 4 to 10 cents, Beauties from $1.50 to $6 per dozen. Bulbous stock is becoming more plentiful and that with long stems brings 4 cents. Romans, Paper Whites, valley and sweet peas are in limited supply and good stock finds ready sale. Carnations are still in good supply and range from 2 to 5 cents. At this writing we have the coldest day and night of the winter. It was zero all day with a drop to 14 degrees below at 2 a. m. February 14 a strong west wind prevailed, making it almost impossible to keep the houses warm.

Club Exhibition.

At the regular meeting of the club a carnation exhibition was held to benefit those who could not attend the last convention at Chicago. An unusually large number attended and we can confidently say the exhibition was a magnificent success. Some of the local growers did well, considering they grow only for commercial purposes, and not for show. The following is a summary of exhibits and awards:

Enchantress, first, Bate Bros.; second, C. Hagenburger; third, Essex Greenhouses. Lawson, first, Essex Greenhouses; second, Essex Greenhouses. Red, G. M. Naumann, first, with Flamingo, Merkel & Son, second, with Flamingo; Bate Bros., third, with Crane. White, first, C. Hagenburger, with Lady Bountiful; second, Merkel & Son, White Lawson; third, C. Hagenburger, with White Lawson. A mixed vase of Patten, Nelson Fisher and D. Whitney by Merkel & Son received honorable mention. Bate Bros. displayed mixed varieties. G. M. Naumann displayed a vase of seedlings which was worthy of mention. C. Hagenburger displayed a vase of fine Princess of Wales violets. Robert Kegg showed some very fine Adonis, Lawson, Wolcott and Dorothy Whitney. H. A. Hart showed Enchantress, including a sport of same about Joost color, also Lawson and Joost, excellent for this variety.

M. Bloy, of the Essex Greenhouses, made a very good display of roses, carnations and sweet peas. He was awarded a certificate of merit for an elegant vase of Bridesmaid roses, also for white and pink sweet peas which had stems twelve to fourteen inches long. Meteor showed up well and proved this variety still a good one. The stems were fine, from eighteen inches to three feet. White Cloud carnations made a good showing with three-foot stems.

The J. M. Gasser Co. showed a mixed vase of roses, Gen. MacArthur, La Detroit, Chatenay, Bride and Maid. MacArthur was considered exceptionally well done and was highly thought of by those present. The J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., of Joliet, showed a magnificent vase of Robert Craig. It is a grand flower, with a perfect stem, and received a certificate of merit. The J. M. Gasser Co. received a certificate of merit for a vase of mixed roses. W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, made an elegant show with a large vase of Red Lawson. It won equal honors with Robert Craig, receiving a certificate of merit. The B. K. & B. Floral Co., of Richmond, Ind., displayed a vase of Richmond Gem, also some rooted cuttings. Although the flower is small it is of good color.

A special committee on awards was appointed by President A. L. Brown, consisting of J. S. Wilson, of Chicago, Adam Graham, of Cleveland, and Edward George, of Painesville. They did their arduous duties well and were tendered a unanimous vote of thanks by those present. All were well pleased with their decisions and there was no cause for complaint.

Various Notes.

We see by the press reports that a magnificent building is to be erected at the present location of Smith & Fetters. Building operations will begin April 1. It is to be occupied by a large department store.

The city budget for the coming fiscal year contains a large sum for park improvements. This is to be highly commended, as Cleveland has a beautiful chain of parks. More flowers are to be planted and a large quantity of trees and shrubs are to be set out the coming spring.

Dutch bulb agents are becoming quite numerous. It is a sure sign of the coming spring.

Mr. Anderson, who for many years was with the J. M. Gasser Co. at Rocky River and the recent foreman of said firm, has resolved to engage in business for himself, growing mums and carnations. Mr. Anderson has the best wishes of all the craft for unbounded success in his undertaking.

Carl Hagenburger, of West Mentor, has his place looking fine. Stock is in good shape, particularly the carnations. Lady Bountiful is in the lead, a robust grower and a fine flower. Lawson, Enchantress and Boston Market give evidence of having produced a heavy crop. Thousands of cuttings well rooted, show success in this line. Boston ferns are in great abundance. A large batch of lilies just coming into flower is particularly free from disease. Another lot in bottomless pots plunged in soil looks good and healthy. As a whole the place looks better than ever before.

A short jaunt brings us to C. Merkel & Son's. Here we found everything looking well. Carnations were a trifle off crop, but thrifty and in vigorous health. What struck the writer most was Flamingo in all its glory, perfectly healthy and an abundance of bud and bloom. White Lawson is also a good thing. Mrs. Patten is extra fine, producing high grade blooms. Boston Market is considered the bread and butter variety. A clean and healthy lot of Harrisii are just coming into flower, with a later batch for Easter. Lilacs are forced to perfection here and bring good returns. Ramblers and H. P. roses had just been brought into the cool house. Mr. Merkel has one brand of good things that does not grow on rose bushes, which was thoroughly appreciated by the visitors.

W. L. Smith, formerly of Jamestown, is now with the J. M. Gasser Co. in the capacity of foreman.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

In spite of very bad weather St. Valentine's day had an appreciable effect on the market, the impetus being first noted on Sunday, when an unusually large number of shipping orders went out. Monday was the coldest day of the year, the temperature in the morning being 18 degrees below zero, and one would expect little doing, but there was a considerable shipping demand and many of the local retailers bought quite heavily in anticipation of the valentine demand. It has been a season, however, when the store with a telephone trade did about all the business there was going. Transient trade has been dead. The weather has been too cold for people to be on the streets. Monday was 38 degrees colder than the ten years' average for February 13, and Tuesday was not much better. The growers have been busy stoking the boilers and it has taken much extra wrapping to preserve stock in transit from freezing. In fact, many shipments were frozen, some from near-by growers, but particularly violets from the Hudson river district. On Monday many thousands were a total loss.

The state of the market has not changed to any great degree since last report. There is still a call for Brides and Maids beyond the possibilities of the supply, and this also includes red roses, if to a less degree. Long Beauties are now under the demand, for the call has increased and receipts are less. The dark weather has also had its effect on the color. White carnations have been in very heavy demand and it has been impossible to fill all orders. Red has also been wanted, but there has been enough pink to leave something in the wholesalers' ice boxes nearly every night. At the same time prices are reasonably well maintained. Quality was never better. St. Valentine's day made some demand for violets. Tulips are now in good shape, but do not bring any better prices than when quality was lower. Some freesia is seen, but is slow sale. Callas are plentiful, but Harrisii are making good prices, although some days everyone has them to spare. Green goods are equal to the demand.

For State Experiment Work.

Peter Reinberg, for the Florists' Club's committee on the matter of securing an appropriation for floricultural work at the State Experiment Station, has placed the club's resolutions and a draft of an appropriation bill in the hands of Representative M. L. McKinley for presentation to the state legislature. The bill calls for the appropriation of $10,000 for greenhouses and equipment and for $10,000 a year for carrying on the work. Every florist should write the representative from his district urging that the bill be supported.

Winandy's Seedlings.

M. Winandy took to raising carnation seedlings a couple of years ago and has two benches of them. What he thinks is the best is a very large, bright red, which he has just registered as Lizzie McKey. There is a pink seedling from Guardian Angel which looks good; it is prolific, has good size, stem, etc. There is a white of robust growth which has not yet shown what it can do, and a good looking yellow. An oddity is a flower like Prosperity with a beautiful golden tint at the base of the petal and diffused outward. With this some mighty fine dinner-table center-pieces could be made.

Various Notes.

Mardi Gras at New Orleans should make some good business at that point March 6 and 7. Then comes Lent, but it doesn't cut as much figure now as it used to.

The body of George V. Thielmann was brought home from Sierra Madre, Cal., and buried from the home, 323 Division street, on Tuesday, a number of the trade attending.

C. W. McKellar has added orange blossoms to his list of specialties, but he doesn't carry them in stock. He had a nice lot in for an order on Tuesday.

The Florists' Club had an attendance of fifteen at the meeting February 9. E. Kurowski, N. J. Rupp, Paul Halbrook and F. Lautenschlager were elected to membership. A not wholly successful effort was made to straighten out certain neglected premium matters and a new program committee was appointed, with E. C. Amling chairman.

The committee on entertainment of the Carnation Society reports receipts of $1,101 and the disbursement of the entire amount. As a matter of fact, there was a shortage of $30, which was made up by subscriptions obtained after the deficiency was known.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

A few important fluctuations were noted in the cut flower market the past week, which were unlooked for. The early part of the week stock became very scarce in all first-class grades. Later in the week stock of all kinds was again overplentiful and prices were again reduced.

The retail trade runs in about the same channel, some days plenty of work, the next day dull. The bulk of the work is for funerals. No doubt these conditions will prevail as long as this disagreeable weather lasts. Some extra work was booked for St. Valentine's day, which was quite a busy day last year. It brings a good call for violets, which are very plentiful, $2 to $2.50 per thousand being about the best price for singles. Fine doubles are down to 50 cents per hundred. Carnations have been very plentiful and only the extra fancy and white sold. A big lot of colored stock was left over each day, only to be dumped. Prosperity, Lawson and Enchantress are of fine quality. Some extra White Cloud, Triumph, Joost and Estelle are also to be had at prices in reach of everybody.

White roses are not any too many for the demand. Of Maids, Meteors, Liberties and short Beauties there are more than enough. Long Beauties are also plentiful. The wholesalers are still overstocked with many kinds of bulbous stock of good quality. Of Dutch hyacinths, Harrisii and callas there are enough to go around. White and pink sweet peas sell fairly well. White lilac at Kuehn's is extra fine. Everything in the line of greens is plentiful.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held one of the largest meetings in its history February 9, nearly seventy-five being in attendance, including James Hartshorne and J. D. Thompson, Joliet, Ill.; A. C. Canfield, Springfield, Ill.; S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia, and Geo. M. Kellogg, Pleasant Hill, Mo.

There was a grand display of carnations: The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, was the largest exhibitor, showing Harlowarden, Lady Bountiful, White Lawson, Prosperity, Cardinal, Enchantress and Mrs. T. W. Lawson. E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., sent Mrs. Patten, Lady Bountiful and Cardinal. Thos. Salverson & Son, Petersburg, Ill., staged Mrs. Lawson, Norway and Prosperity. The Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, showed a grand vase of Robert Craig. H. Weber & Son, of Oakland, Md., sent an extra fine vase of My Maryland. John E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., sent John E. Haines and Guttman & Weber, New York, sent Victory. W. J. Palmer & Son, Lancaster, N. Y., sent a vase of fifty Red Lawson, which did not arrive until the next day.

Among the local growers who exhibited were John Steidel, who had Adonis, Enchantress, Gov. Wolcott and a fine mixed vase. J. F. Ammann had White Cloud, Enchantress and a vase of mixed. A. Jablonsky showed Enchantress, Crane, Lady Bountiful and a vase of mixed. N. Himmer showed a vase of sports of Enchantress and Joost.

The meeting opened at 2:30 p. m. with all the officers present. After the regular order of business, the building committee asked to be relieved and recommended that F. C. Weber, C. A. Kuehn and Otto Koenig take their place. The new constitution and by-laws were read for the first time. Two more readings will be required before they can be acted on. This will be at the April meeting. The trustees reported that it was not advisable for the club to hold a chrysanthemum show this fall. A press committee was appointed as follows: J. J. Beneke, Geo. Windler and R. Windt. Four members were dropped for nonpayment of dues. F. J. Fillmore reported at length on the carnation convention at Chicago.

Short addresses were made by James Hartshorne, J. D. Thompson, A. C. Canfield and S. S. Skidelsky. The latter complimented the St. Louis growers on their showing.

Messrs. Thompson, Hartshorne and Canfield acted as judges for the home-grown exhibits and Messrs. Ammann, Steidel and Jablonsky judged the outside exhibits. Their report was as follows: Fifty blooms pink, Chicago Carnation Co., first and second with Lawson and Enchantress; Salverson & Son, third, on Lawson. Fifty blooms white, Chicago Carnation Co., first and second with Lady Bountiful and White Lawson; E. G. Hill Co., third, with Lady Bountiful. Fifty red, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Cardinal; Thompson Carnation Co., second, with Robert Craig; E. G. Hill Co., third, with Cardinal. Fifty any other color, Chicago Carnation Co., first and second, with Prosperity and Harlowarden; E. G. Hill Co., third, with Mrs. Patten. H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., scored eighty-eight points on My Maryland and received a certificate of merit. John E. Haines and Victory were too far gone to be judged but are apparently good reds.

For the local growers the results were as follows: Fifty white, John Steidel first, with Gov. Wolcott; A. Jablonsky second, with Lady Bountiful; J. F. Ammann third, with White Cloud. Fifty pink, J. Steidel first, J. F. Ammann second and A. Jablonsky third, all with Enchantress. Fifty red, J. Steidel first, with Adonis; A. Jablonsky second, with Crane and Flamingo. Fifty blooms mixed, J. Steidel first, A. Jablonsky second and J. F. Ammann third. Favorable mention was given Mr. Steidel for a pink sport of Enchantress and a vase of seedlings.

The next meeting of the club will be a rose meeting. This will be March 9 at 2 o'clock. Prizes amounting to $50 will be offered and all rose growers are invited to exhibit. The committee of arrangements is Otto Koenig, F. H. Meinhardt and J. J. Beneke, who will meet this week to arrange for the list of prizes, which will be sent to all rose growers.

There is some talk among the members of the St. Louis Florists' Club of having a big celebration on the club's eighteenth anniversary, June 28. A big banquet is talked of at the Hotel Jefferson.

The New Growers' Club.

A meeting was called for February 9 for plant and cut flower growers of St. Louis and vicinity to perfect an association to be called the St. Louis Flower and Plant Growers' Association. Dr. A. S. Halstead was elected president, E. H. Michel secretary, and Gus Eggeling treasurer. The membership to this association is extended to growers within 500 miles of St. Louis. Their charter calls for seventy-five members. This association is in no way connected with the St. Louis Florists' Club. J. J. B.

THE advertisement of the Iowa Seed Co. last week quoted Louise Erdody begonias at $3 per 100. This was clearly an error, as this is well grown 3-inch stock, many having two plants to the pot. It should have been $6 per 100 and so appears this week.

WHITE LAWSON

THE FINEST WHITE CARNATION EVER SENT OUT

Remember that we are headquarters for it. The demand will undoubtedly exceed the supply this season, and in order to secure early delivery, no time should be lost in placing order. We are now booking orders for early January delivery. Orders will be filled strictly in rotation, as received, so the earlier orders are booked, the earlier deliveries can be made. We can supply

First-class strong rooted cuttings, $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Also all the other novelties of the season, FIANCEE, CARDINAL, FRED BURKI, etc.

Also the cream of the older sorts, Mrs. M. A. Patten, Daheim, Enchantress, Flamingo, Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson, etc.

BUFFALO.

There has been rather too much steady winter of late to expect a very lively business, yet we cannot complain. We don't look for large decorations, for they are few at this season, and many of us look upon the white flower trade as only incidental. It is the steady demand for flowers for the table, or remembrances to friends on many excuses. In fact, it is the ever increasing use of flowers by those of moderate means, as well as the very wealthy, that makes the business healthy and substantial. Flowers of all kinds are fairly plentiful, except roses; those of first quality are quite scarce.

The Florists' Club is to hold a meeting on the afternoon of February 22, to nominate officers for the next year, and there will be an exhibition of the newer carnations from our friends if they respond to the invitation we have sent them. Now this is an opportunity that the local men should appreciate. They did not go to Chicago to see the wonderful varieties, so we are going to let them "have a look" for the small sum of one dime (two car fares). We want you all in, prepared to pay up your dues for the year and nominate good, strong young blood for the next year's administration.

Am glad to say that Capt. James Braik will soon be out again after three months' martyrdom with inflammatory rheumatism. He has suffered much, but will be in good shape again when our parks need his valuable aid.

William Belsey has no more room for greenhouses on his lot, so to find a safe investment for his surplus earnings he has built a fine apartment house on the east side. It is not always the largest business that shows the greatest profit.

The Red Lawson.

Through a boisterous blizzard and eleven miles of snow banks, a trolley car landed us at the large establishment of W. J. Palmer & Son, at Lancaster. These country villages are lovely when the cherry trees are in blossom and the frog band is working in the marsh, but they have a chilly, lonesome influence in February. However, once you enter the first carnation house and almost immediately are greeted by the perennial smile of Barney Myers, winter is dispelled and you can walk through the 200,000 feet of glass without once stepping outdoors. We went there principally, of course, to see the Red Lawson carnation and two houses, each 20x100, are a grand sight, yet Barney, as everybody calls the more than able manager, told us they were off crop compared to December. Christmas week he picked 8,500 perfect flowers out of those two houses. As this carnation is Lawson in every particular except color, very little can be said, but one thing is very striking. While we all know that Lawson is showing a tendency to split more than formerly, this red sport showed not one bloom in fifty that was not perfect. In our opinion it is a carnation that should be grown by all. All of us can grow Lawson and all can grow this. Many of you have seen the blooms. It is a bright, cheerful red and shows up finely under artificial light. As a bread and butter red carnation we don't think it has any competitor, however fine in form, color or stem the latest aspirants for favor may be.

Most all the standard and later introductions are grown there. Lady Bountiful and White Lawson are favorites in their color. Mrs. Patten was flowering freely, but Barney said he had it in rather too warm a house. We have never seen Enchantress do better. It is a sight. In December they picked 4,000 a week, now about 3,000. Never was there a more perfect lot of flowers. Old varieties have to go. White Cloud, Glacier, Joost and Mrs. Nelson are seeing their last days, and yet Nelson is a beautiful shade and until Fiancee becomes generally grown we are short of a good pink. Altogether you can see 30,000 carnation plants as well grown in every respect as you will ever expect to.

Carnations are by no means all that's to be seen here. Everything that two first-class city stores demand is handled. Roses of the leading varieties are grown in quantity. A big house of Bridesmaid was a little extra, and what pleased me immensely was a house of Morgan and Canadian Queen, both simply loaded with magnificent blooms, and at least three flowers to one of any Bridesmaid that was ever grown. I wish we had had along with us some gentlemen who say Canadian Queen can't be grown outside of the Dale Estate. Morgan had good long stems, and the best blooms are retailing at $3 per dozen. It would pay at $1. Great preparations are made here for Easter, blocks of azaleas kept cool, thousands of lilies, hybrid roses in pots and all other Easter stock. Very large quantities of tulips and other bulbous stock are handled. This is a good establishment to visit to study greenhouse architecture, for there is almost every modern style and also many styles of bench, for these are the days of evolution in the bench.

I failed to mention what is only due, that there are two more houses of Red Lawson mostly for propagation, but you all know how freely Lawson propagates and there is no excuse for a poor cutting.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The ninth annual ball of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held February 10. It was one of the most successful the society ever had. Over a hundred couples were in the grand march. The hall was beautifully decorated. The stage was very tastefully decorated with cut flowers and decorative plants, by Wm. Turner. Corsage bouquets of white roses and lilies of the valley were furnished by the society, for the ladies, and carnation boutonnieres for the gentlemen. An elaborate dinner was served at twelve o'clock. The entertainment committee deserves great credit, as the success of the ball depended mostly on them.

There was a short business meeting before the ball and William Ritchie and Frank Jenkins were elected active members.

TULIPS ROTTING.

We would like to ask you about some Le Reine tulip bulbs. We planted them the same as the rest. The La Reine all decayed in the center and some of the bulbs were rotted altogether. We had yellow and red ones with them and they were all right. The bulbs were sound when planted. We put horse manure on them about four to six inches thick and they were planted in time. The florists around this city say it is in the bulbs.

B. O. S.

We take it for granted that you have been forcing these yellow and red and La Reine tulips and thus found out the condition of the La Reine. If the other tulips received the same treatment and are forcing all right, it is difficult to account for the decay among the La Reine. In all the years we have been forcing tulips we have never seen bulbs decay. We have more than once seen La Reine come blind, but that was merely poorly ripened or weak bulbs which never should have been sold us.

If you put six inches of horse manure on the flats or pans you did very unwisely. That quantity, if fresh, would heat and may account for the decay. We can account for it in no other way. Bulbs put into flats or pans for forcing should be first covered with two or three inches of light soil, then five or six inches of stable litter to keep out severe frost is all right, but fresh manure put right on the bulbs is all wrong. You may have had the manure thicker and warmer over the La Reine than the others. W. S.

AMELIA, O.—Charles Pommert reports the demand for goldfish as exceeding his already large facilities. He is building seven additional ponds, covering six acres, for next season.

HAGERSTOWN, MD.—Henry Bester will build two large rose houses the coming summer. His carnations are now in the pink of perfection. The demand is greater than the supply. He has a variegated seedling of Lawson and also a white seedling of Enchantress, inadvertly reported as sports in the issue of February 2. Wm. Bester will make extensive improvements and additions to his already large area of glass. His stock of roses and carnations are in good condition. The demand for good stuff is increasing at better prices than in former years.

THE frosty weather now prevailing at the south will give the northern market gardener a chance to get something worth while for his early crops.

SEEDSMEN at Shenandoah, Ia., report business for the first half of February as heavy compared with previous years, and the outlook better than ever before at this season.

THE announcement is at hand of a weekly journal to be published at Kansas City exclusively for the seed trade. The printed matter bears no names of individuals.

THE earnestness with which the salesmen approach the subject of orders would indicate that the war scare is over and that there are reasonable prospects for enough lily bulbs from Japan next season.

THE customs appraisers manifest a disposition to advance invoice values on many items. Cases to come up for hearing at Chicago February 15 were continued until the next sitting of the board.

IN Henry Field's corn tests at Shenandoah, Ia., one of the striking points brought out was the difference in behavior of seed corn from the east and from the west in the matter of standing up and resisting wind storms. The western corn accustomed for generations to prairie winds, stood up well even in a considerable storm, while the eastern corn of the same or similar varieties went down easily.

THE quinquennial exhibition of the Royal Dutch Bulb Growers' Society at Haarlem, Holland, March 17 to 21, will afford a fine opportunity to those especially interested with recent progress in this branch of the trade.

IT is advisable at this season of the year to remind buyers of onion sets that freezing while in transit does not hurt them. When onion sets arrive in a frozen condition all that is needed is to open up the packages, let the sets thaw gradually, and handle them as little as possible until they dry out.

THE general catalogue of Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, weighs forty-six ounces and L. E. Asher, the advertising manager, says that "when space costs us $1,000 per page for a season it behooves us strongly to use that page every inch and line and hair's breadth to the illustrating and describing plainly and clearly the merchandise we have to sell and crowd on the page as much as we can and do it justice." With space in the general book at that price naturally they have many special catalogues, and seeds will be one of them.

CHICAGO ONION SET INDUSTRY.

A man from Missouri coming into Chicago a few days ago observed from the car window at several different points along the railroad, buildings that were stenciled "Onion set warehouse." The size of the buildings aroused his curiosity and he asked his seat mate for information on the subject of onion sets. He was given a figure that was estimated as being the quantity of bushels raised in the vicinity of Chicago and was invited to inspect one of the warehouses, where a good bunch of the goods could be shown him. He could not accept the invitation because his ticket was limited. He seemed satisfied, however, that there must be something in the warehouses and admitted that the chances favored its being onion sets. He intimated that if a short statement of the history of the industry in so far as it applied to Chicago could be given him he would be pleased to make a note of it for future investigation. The person with whom he was conversing seemed to be in a position to give the desired information and proceeded to do it as follows:

"The beginning of the Chicago onion set industry dates back to 1886, when a seedsman who had just completed his second season in that line of trade planted a four-acre patch for onion sets on Diversey street, near Milwaukee avenue. The product of the four acres was in the neighborhood of 1,600 bushels.

"For some years previous to this a large pickle man at Bowmanville had been growing what were termed 'pickle onions,' and some of the market gardeners were doing the same thing on a smaller scale. These were all white onions, however, and were grown for the pickling vats of factories in the neighborhood; they were not onion sets, nor were they grown as such.

"In 1885 Chicago needed but a limited quantity of onion sets for home consumption and, aside from a few barrels of yellows shipped in from eastern points and stored in a seed house on La Salle street, and a hundred or so bushels of whites spread out on a floor over Johnson's 'Silver Brand' sauerkraut emporium on South Water street, all the visible supply of onion sets as far as Chicago was concerned could be put into a quart measure.

"The venture of the seedsman who harvested the 1,600 bushels in 1886, and to whom the credit of starting the onion set business at Chicago belongs, panned out first rate—so well in fact, that the next year he increased his plantings and encouraged the gardeners to grow small patches, taking their product from them after harvest at an agreed price. The soil and climate proved favorable and the price realized for the product at that time made the business a paying one. In 1888 mutual interests drew the Bowmanville pickle man and the Chicago seedsman together and an arrangement was made between them, the one to grow the sets because he had the land, and the other to sell the sets because he had a store which was known to be Chicago headquarters for supplying the onion set. 'In union there is strength,' and for the next few years there was a continued increase in the production of onion sets at Chicago, 50,000 bushels being the estimated crop of 1892.

"Up to 1894 the seedsman to whom the credit of starting the thing has been given, was practically the sole distributor and owner of the onion set product of Chicago. It chanced that 1893 was a banner year. The prices realized for onion sets in the fall of that year and into the spring of 1894 were such as to make the growers feel that with plenty of land all that was needed to bring them wealth was plenty of onion seed to throw into it, and in the fall dig out the sets. The consequence was that a new era was established, a scattering took place, new outlets had to be searched for and the new operators who took hold, finding themselves in it, had to push the thing along out of sheer necessity. The pickle man and the seedsman, who up to this time had been the main factors in the production of onion sets at Chicago, disagreed on a question of policy. The former wanted to double the quantity that they had heretofore produced to push the newcomers out of it, but the latter, being more conversant with the obstacles in the way of forcing a market, objected to this. The outcome was that the pickle man decided to go in as a distributor as well as a grower, and the seedsman, being originally both grower and distributor, resumed the growing for himself on a scale proportionate to the increased needs of his business. The Chicago onion set production for the next two years was more than double what it was in 1893 and 1894.

"Since 1896 and up to the present, the ranks of those growing and distributing onion sets at Chicago has been much increased by men who have pulled out as graduates, or from other connection of some sort with the original growers, until the product of Chicago in a good year cannot be far from 350,000 bushels."

The informant of the man from Missouri then ended up by saying: "That is a short history of the set industry as it applies to Chicago, and you are welcome to it." Being pressed for the name of the seedsman to whom the credit of starting the business was due, he said: "It is S. F. Leonard, now president of the Leonard Seed Co." "And of the pickleman?" "It is L. A. Budlong, president of the L. A. Budlong Co." "And who may you be?" insisted the man from Missouri. "Me? Oh, that don't matter; but I helped weigh in and take care of quite a bunch of onion sets at Philadelphia in the fall of 1884."

Cooper, Taber & Co.

Of the existing London seed houses, the oldest is that of Cooper, Taber & Co. It was founded by John Mason, who, about 1781, established himself in business at the "Sign of the Orange Tree," 152 Fleet street; and in the catalogue issued by the present house in 1900-1 they gave photographs and pages of the catalogue of John Mason for 1793. Eventually John Mason took his son into partnership, and up to 1827 the firm was known as John Mason & Son. In the latter year, Mr. Noble, a nephew of Mason, and a Mr. Goude, took over the business, and the same existed for three years as Mason & Goude. In 1830 the brothers W. & J. Noble became sole proprietors, and continued the business till they died of cholera in 1848. In 1849, the surviving son of W. Noble admitted to partnership Robert Cooper and John Bolton, both of whom had had long experience in the establishment, and the firm was known as Noble, Cooper & Bolton until 1867, when John Bolton retired and Robert Cooper became sole proprietor and carried on the business under his own name until the expiration of the lease of 152 Fleet street, when he removed to the commodious premises now occupied by Cooper, Taber & Co. After the death of Mr. Cooper, in 1885, George Taber, a well-known Essex seed grower, acquired an interest in the firm. Mr. Taber died in 1895, and was succeeded by his son, James Taber. The business has for several years past been registered as a limited liability company. This house has within the last forty years or so absorbed such old businesses as Beck, Henderson and Child and Waite & Co. (who had previously taken over the business of Minier, Nash and Nash). Within the last four or five years, an old seed firm in the Strand known as Batt, Ruttley & Silverlock, became incoporated with Cooper, Taber & Co., says Richard Dean in the Horticultural Trade Journal.

SEED SPECIALS.

The Vanderbilt lines of railroad passing through the corn belt doubtless will send out soon a "corn special" to disseminate scientific knowledge among farmers along its lines regarding seeds and soils. The remarkable success of the "corn specials" which the Burlington and Northwestern have been sending over their lines is what has led the officials of the Vanderbilt roads to take up the project. The "corn specials" consist of two or three cars expressly adapted for holding meetings during stops of a half hour at important towns on the line. During these stops lectures are given and farmers are instructed as to the best kind of seed, the preparation of the soil, and the proper care of the crop.

The start probably will be made on the "Big Four," and if the plan is well received by farmers along the route "corn specials" will then be sent all over Iowa, Illinois and Indiana, and possibly over the Illinois lines of the Lake Erie and Western. This will be the first time that eastern lines have taken up the education of farmers along scientific principles in crop raising.

GLEN COVE, L. I.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society meets the first Wednesday in the month at 2:30 p. m. At the meeting February 1 President Thomas Harrison prophesied a bright future for the organization. He said that he, for one, would "like to see the day when it will be necessary for a gardener to exhibit his diploma for proficiency in the different branches of the work from some horticultural college to be recognized as a professional horticulturist. This would not be an injustice to the already well informed practical gardener, but would inconvenience a great many would-be gardeners, whose only qualifications are that they have washed pots in a palm house, picked up the dead leaves in a rose house and admired the different colors of the flowers in the carnation house, then have the audacity to pose as professional gardeners, and aspire to fill some of our most prominent places in the country. These are the men who are 'thorns in the flesh,' so to speak, and are a detriment to our most noble profession."

At the meeting March 1 there will be exhibits of six red and six white carnations, the owner of the best vase to receive a box of cigars.

HARDY FERNS.

I wish to plant some hardy ferns this spring in the flower garden. Will you please let me know what are the best kinds for both shady and sunny places?

E. F. C.

While all ferns thrive better where afforded shade, a few sorts do quite satisfactorily in the sun if kept moist at the root. As a general rule ferns are shade and moisture loving subjects. They prefer well drained ground and like plenty of rotted leaves or leaf-mold in the soil. The following sorts succeed well in New England in sunshine: Onoclea sensibilis, Osmunda cinnamomea, O. Claytoniana, O. regalis, Pteris aquilina, Dicksonia pilosiuseula and Aspidium Noveboracensis. All the foregoing succeed well in shade. In addition the following sorts may be planted: Polypodium vulgare, Adiantum pedatum, Asplenum Filix-fœmina, Onoclea Struthiopteris, Pellæ atropurpurea, Aspidium marginale, Cystopteris fragilis and Phegopteris Dryopteris.

Some of the above will thrive under different conditions than they revel in, in a state of nature. To assist holding moisture in the soil where they are planted, mulch well with partially decayed leaves or sphagnum moss. Water well during dry spells. The stronger growing sorts will benefit from a surfacing of rotten manure. As a rule leafmold is preferable for most of the species. They should be planted where strong winds will not strike them and mulched with leaves each fall to prevent frost heaving them out of the ground.

W. N. Craig.

GERANIUMS.

I want geraniums for Decoration day and have just received a shipment of very small geranium cuttings, some of the cuttings being not more than three-fourths of an inch long. Will it be possible to get most of these in bloom by May 30 in 3½-inch pots? What temperature shall I give them? They are now in 60 degrees at night. E. J. H.

You are starting with very small plants to expect good flowering stock at Decoration day. Give them the lightest bench you have, one that has hot water pipes beneath it preferred. We keep our geraniums now about 45 degrees at night because we want them stout and strong. You want rapid growth, yet 60 degrees is too high; 50 degrees at night is enough and let the house go up to 70 degrees in the daytime. When large enough nip out the last made joint and shift into the 3½-inch pots and with light, warmth and fresh air on all opportunities you may get decent plants. This experience will teach you that you must put in your own cuttings in September or October.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The past week has been a most satisfactory one to both wholesalers and retailers. The demand has been good and prices very fair, but, while we have been able to get all the good stock wanted, the quantity of inferior stock coming to the wholesalers is noticeable and most of it finds its way to the dump. Beauties and lilies are still scarce.

Various Notes.

F. Stafford, manager of Geddis & Blind's south side store, has the sympathy of his many friends in the loss of his father the past week, while he is confined to bed with a serious attack of grip, which for several days his friends feared would prove fatal. However, he is now in a fair way to recover.

Dame Rumor says that Lincoln I. Neff has purchased of B. L. Elliott his Cheswick place, consisting of seven acres of ground, dwelling house, barn and about 35,000 feet of glass.

J. J. Zimmermann, of Mt. Washington, has accepted a position with the Ocean Park Floral Co., Ocean Park, Cal.

Club Meeting.

The club met Tuesday evening and, after the election of officers, T. P. Langhans, the new president, in a few well chosen remarks thanked the members for the honor conferred and asked their support and, turning to the retiring officer, Mr. Falconer, attempted to convey to him the feeling of regret with which he was permitted to retire, and then, as a small token of the club's appreciation of what he had done, presented him with a handsome sterling silver tea service suitably inscribed. Brother Falconer for once was taken by surprise and by his manner as much as his word showed his appreciation. E. C. Reineman in a little after-talk remarked that while some of us had seen Mr. Falconer's handiwork at Dosoris, we could follow him to Schenley park, which his skill has made the pride of our city, and then we turned over to him a club in name only, but in four years of interesting meetings and good shows, for many of which he had to draw on his outside friends, he is now able to turn back to us one of the best clubs in the country, 153 members, most of them active workers, and all in good standing.

Carnations were the subject for the evening's discussion. Among the whites shown was My Maryland, by Weber & Son, Oakland, Md. It is certainly a grand flower and was well liked. If it proves as satisfactory a grower and bloomer it will satisfy anyone. While some thought our trade, like the stock market, is troubled with too much Lawson, they were willing to accept F. R. Pierson's White Lawson as one of the good things, well worth taking the place of some we are growing now. John Murchie, of Sharon, would not have been ashamed of his white, Fred Burki, as shown by the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. It stood up well and they say it makes no weak stems. We like it very much. Guttman & Weber's Victory was well received, both for color, size and reported keeping qualities. J. E. Haines, a good red variety and a favorite, was believed to look better than when shown last season. Other out-of-town exhibitors were J. L. Dillon, of Bloomsburg, with Crisis, a splendid commercial scarlet, and Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, who sent us samples of hardy pinks. The home-growers showing stock were Mr. Jenkinson, A. R. Peacock's gardener, a vase of very fine stock; A. T. Lorch, Allison park, and the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. showed some of the regular stock sent in by consignors for the daily sales and, although not show stock, it would compare favorably. Hoo-Hoo.

PIPE COVERINGS.

"Pipe and Boiler Coverings and Their Uses" is a small pamphlet from H. W. Johns-Manville Co., 100 William street, New York, describing various forms of asbestos and magnesia sectional pipe covering, their use and value, for both steam and hot water pipes and to protect pipes from freezing. The prices of covering, elbows, tees and valves are listed. Each page contains an illustration, the letter press is in red and black and the cover a Dixie gray, printed in blue and gold with an embossed design showing a Phoenix rising from the flames, making a very attractive booklet containing much valuable information.

PACIFIC COAST.

A CALIFORNIA GARDEN.

The accompanying reproduction from a photograph gives a January view in the garden of a California residence. The tree in front of the corner of the house is Magnolia grandiflora. To the right are seen several rose bushes in bloom. The little girl is standing in front of a clump of Eulalia zebrina. In the upper left hand corner of the picture is seen a part of a huge Acacia nollissima, with a height and spread of thirty-five feet. It was covered with millions of yellow blossoms at the time the photo was taken, but unfortunately they do not show in the picture. To the right of the acacia, near the house, is a fine specimen of Pittosporum nigricans.

EVERGREENS RECOMMENDED.

The California promotion committee has sent out an open letter urging that trees and plants whose leaves remain green throughout the winter be planted in California for ornamental and shade purposes. Such trees are the best evidence of California's climate and attract and impress visitors from the frozen east. Few eastern people realize that the climate in California is not determined by the distance north or south but by the distance east and west. What is known to the weather bureau as the "orange growing thermal belt" extends from San Diego county on the south almost to the base of Mt. Shasta on the north, a distance of about 700 miles. In this belt the mean annual temperature is between 60 and 70 degrees. Trees and plants of semi-tropic nature can and ought to be grown within this belt.

The committee also recommend the planting of non-deciduous trees for ornamental and shade purposes in preference to deciduous trees. There is nothing which so pleases and impresses the visitor from the east as to find everything green in California and the leaves covering the trees in the middle of winter. Trees like elms and maples, while highly ornamental, look particularly dreary and out of place here among so much verdure and often leave a doubt in the visitor's mind as to whether we do not have occasionally heavy snows.

There is a vast area in California where evergreen plants and trees can be grown with success and regions possessing the requirements should make the most of their advantages. What can be more pleasing to our eastern visitors than to come into a California town and find the trees in midwinter bordering the avenues all in green foliage while the lawns of our residences show groups of palms, bananas, giant ferns and other semi-tropical shrubs? Such a prospect is worth thousands of dollars to any city, for the growing of non-deciduous trees and plants such as I have mentioned is the best advertisement for its climate that we can have.

The committee also recommends that in localities where deciduous trees have been planted largely for ornamental purposes, it would be well to replace them as soon as practicable with evergreen trees. The committee also urges all improvement clubs and development organizations and planters generally in such localities as I have mentioned to take this matter up and give it all possible support and publicity.

It is of the greatest importance to the trade generally that an effort be made to supply the demand which will soon be created owing to the change of opinion with a majority of the tree planting public which has occurred in the last year or two. Such growers as are making a specialty of the class of stock I have mentioned are bound to have good sale for well grown evergreens for many years to come. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Within the last few days we have had a return of our usual California weather and plenty of warm sunshine promises a goodly supply of flowers in the near future. Daffodils, although the popular flower at this season of the year, are in almost unlimited supply and the price has fallen to $1 per hundred. There is absolutely no sale for the double varieties and the growers are not picking them. Narcissi are getting scarcer and Paper Whites now bring the same price as the daffodils. Violets are received in enormous quantities daily and are really the best selling flower handled by the trade at present. They cost the retailers about $5 per hundred bunches. Roses are scarcer than last week and carnations somewhat easier, with a lower tendency in price. In about two weeks, if the present warm weather continues, there will be a great slump in both the prices of roses and carnations. Mums are entirely gone. Valley is very plentiful and Roman hyacinths are scarcer. Green stuff of all kinds is very plentiful except maidenhair fern, and except the wild variety there are little really good ferns in market. Wild flowers have commenced to make their appearance and we will have quantities of them for the next two months. Lilium longiflorum is a good seller and the growers easily dispose of them at $1.50 per dozen stems. Huckleberry and other kinds of native growths are assuming a much brighter color and texture since the advent of warm weather.

Various Notes.

F. Ebel, of Sacramento, was in town this week.

Several daffodil growers are going to plow up their bulbs and plant other stock this season. The low price of the flowers is the cause.

Frank Pelicano reports a heavy funeral trade during the month of January. Mr. Pelicano carries one of the finest assortments of cut flowers in San Francisco. G.

conditions soon righted and January went out like a whirlwind. At this writing everybody is busy and a feeling of general satisfaction prevails. While decorative work has been rather above the average, funeral work constitutes the largest item. The death rate has been unusually high, a condition characteristic of Oregon when we experience a dry spell in winter time. The Oregonian, or "Webbfoot," thrives best and enjoys better health in wet weather.

The supply of cut flowers is ample for all purposes and never was the standard of quality so good at this season of the year. A few hours of sunshine each day for the past three weeks has put vigor into the plants and the greenhouse men are jubilant. Prices are holding up well, carnations having the advantage. Those famous old reliables, Estelle, Lawson, Scott and Flora Hill sell readily at $1 per dozen, while Enchantress and Prosperity refuse to be classed with the common herd and command $1.50 and $2 per dozen. Home grown violets are in abundance and are especially fine. Princess on 12-inch stems takes precedence over all others. Paper White narcissi, Roman hyacinths and other bulbous stuff is being brought into bloom with the slight protection of sash frames.

The advance guard of the eastern traveling men has come and gone. He came in the person of James Karins, representing H. A. Dreer, and was well pleased with his first trip to the coast.

S. H. Forsham, of Pendleton, delegated a commissioner to the Lewis and Clark fair, is here this week. Work at the fair grounds is being prosecuted vigorously. The weather has been most auspicious for grading, planting, etc., and aside from minor labor troubles nothing has happened to deter the progress in any department. We hope to be able to give a full account of this memorable undertaking between now and the time of its opening, which will be June 1. H. J. M.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

THE seventy-fourth fair of the American Institute opened at New York February 16. A conference on fruit interests called for the presence of many growers and nurserymen.

IRON-CLAD TREES AND SHRUBS.

The cut and dried phrase, "hardy as an oak," must be eliminated from modern sayings and "as hardy as a lilac" substituted. Prof. Wm. Saunders, director of the Central Experimental Farms, Ottawa, Canada, and his co-laborers at Brandon and at Indian Head, in the Canadian northwest, have been testing for the past sixteen years the hardiness of all trees and shrubs of economic and ornamental value. In a recent bulletin the results to date are given, and it is with pleasure that we find many friends of our more temperate zone among the list that stood the test, in it being the lilac in many varieties and species, while the oak is limited to one species, Quercus macrocarpa, the mossy cup oak.

In Manitoba and the territories where these tests were made, the snow covering averages during the winter from one to two feet in depth, which acts as a protecting blanket of much value. At Brandon, in ordinary winters, the thermometer runs from 40 to 45 degrees below zero, and often continues as low for several weeks and at Indian Head from 50 to 52 degrees below is sometimes reached. Any plant standing for successive years the degrees of frost here given may justly be called an iron-clad and be safely used by planters in the United States in exposed situations.

It must be borne in mind, however, that a foot or more of snow over the roots is of untold value in protecting them. The main loss in trees and shrubs in the United States during the cold winter of 1898-9 was at the roots, not the tops. Strawy manure is a good substitute for a blanket of snow, and acts as an additional protection where snow exists.

All varieties mentioned in this list proved reasonably hardy. A few were damaged a little at the tops in some winters, but not enough to effect them to any extent. It may be taken for granted that almost any tree, shrub, or vine ordinarily in commercial nurseries, possessing a reasonable degree of hardiness, not found here, was tried and proved tender. Some trees, including the maples, were hardy if grown from seed ripened in the Northwest Territories, otherwise not. Those that stood the test were:

The following plants are used in hedges for shelter belts and ornamental purposes:

Caragana arborescens, cotoneasters, Salix Britzensis, white spruce and box elder.

Prof. Saunders illustrates a handsome hedge of box elder, Acer Negundo, over fifteen feet high and some eight feet wide at the base, clothed to the ground in foliage.

In 1899 Prof. Saunders issued a catalogue of trees and shrubs tried in the arboretum at Ottawa, Canada, indicating their degree of hardiness, and it is a singular fact that when I compare the long list of those I have tried here, their degree of hardiness coincides with the results at Ottawa, with very few exceptions, probably due to individual vigor, for in the Ottawa trials some individuals of a species were hardy while others were tender. This similarity of hardiness in this region may be confined to a narrow zone bordering Lake Michigan.

MASSACHUSETTS GARDENERS.

Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Brookline.

At Mrs. John L. Gardner's, whose estate in Brookline covers some thirty-three acres, orchids are grown in considerable numbers. Some extra fine forms of Cattleya Trianæ, of which 250 plants are grown, were noted. Dendrobium nobile was also in season. Some good vandas and other rarely seen East Indian species were represented by fine plants. Phaius grandifolius is a favorite for decorating, about 100 plants being grown. These were just opening. The stove house contained a fine selection of well-grown stuff. Camellias are still favorites here. Some planted-out specimens were nearly twenty feet high. Boronias, acacias and other hard-wooded stock filled one house. At one end of a propagating house a nice lot of phalænopsis were just coming into bloom. Cinerarias, cyclamens, primulas, genistas, eupatoriums and bulbous stock are grown in quantity for house decoration. William Thatcher is the gardener in charge here.

J. E. Rothwell, Brookline.

A most interesting place to visit for all who are interested in orchids is James E. Rothwell's on Sewall avenue, Longwood, where one of the best collections in America is to be seen, quite a number of small houses being filled to repletion with well grown plants of the various genera. Cypripediums are prime favorites and there are some 500 distinct varieties and forms of these alone. Many of the choice yellow forms of Cypripedium insigne were noted, including Sanderæ, Sanderianum, Joungianum, Ernestii, Laura Kimball, Ballianum and others. Other fine types included Harefield Hall, Coulsonianum, platysepalum and Dominianum. Numerous seedlings from good crosses were noted. Two just flowering, C. Leeanum x C. insigne Ernestii and C. Spicerianum x C. insigne Sanderæ were distinct and good.

Many interesting cattleya and lælia crosses are being made, quite a collection of Lælia cinnabarina crosses being included. Several of these were in bloom. Some baskets of the pretty Lælia Lindleyana were flowering very freely. Odontoglossums are great favorites here and are well grown. Some fine spikes were open on O. crispum, O. Pollettianum, O. Hebraicum, O. mulus and others. A nice batch of masdevallias are grown in a cool north house, M. Veitchiana grandiflora being the finest in flower. In dendrobiums several of the nobile sections, such as Tollianum and Cooksoni, were in flower, also D. splendidissima grandiflora.

A small division contained a finely grown lot of phalaenopsis. Most of these were in flower and comprised P. grandiflora, amabilis, Schilleriana, Stuartiana and Dayana, such spikes as would make a star attraction in a high-class New York florist's store. Very good results have been obtained here from the use of native leaf-mold, Emil Johannson, the skillful grower in charge, pointing out seedling cattleyas grown in it which were much superior to those grown in fern fibre. Everything on the place reflects great credit on Mr. Rothwell and his excellent gardener.

J. E. Thayer, South Lancaster.

At John E. Thayer's, in South Lancaster, are to be seen a lot of magnificently grown Lorraine begonias. J. E. Clark, the head gardener, is an adept in their culture. They are the best we have seen. Some beautifully flowered Erica melanthera were noted. These are found very serviceable for house decoration, lasting finely. In violets, Campbell is still preferred to the single ones. Enchantress was the best carnation. Lawson was also good. Flamingo will be dropped, as it is too slow and shy. Boston Market is grown for white. A fine lot of antirrhinums were yielding fine spikes, the color of Rosy Morn being especially taking. Schizanthus is being grown in quantity, a compact form of S. pinnatus alba and S. Wisetonensis being used. Some well flowered large pans of Cœlogyne cristata of the Chatsworth variety were just at their best. Ruellia macrantha Mr. Clark thinks highly of and says it is a persistent bloomer. A bench of Kronk's cauliflower had been furnishing fine heads for some time and Stirling Castle tomato was carrying a fine crop.

Nathaniel Thayer, South Lancaster.

At Nathaniel Thayer's the large house of Beauty roses was off crop when we called. Quite a number of gardenias are grown. Like other growers, A. P. Meredith is troubled to some extent with the "yellows." He thinks shallow and more porous compost, and the use of very little animal manure in the same, will improve conditions another year. Calceolaria rugosa "Golden Gem" is a favorite in pots, being grown in quantity. Campbell violets are grown exclusively. Some very fine forms of Cattleya Trianæ were noted.

RED SPORT (Of Maceo.)

Red Sport has proved the greatest money-maker we ever grew, producing more good blooms to the square foot of bench room than any other variety on the place. During the glut the first part of January we could only get four cents for fancy Lawson and sold every Red Sport we had at five cents. Every grower who was here in December was carried away with its possibilities, as a future supply of a "holly berry red" for Xmas. There is no pick in the blooms. They are all a uniform size and color. There are 40,000 or 50,000 buds showing in different stages of development at this time and there is not a split or off color bloom in the lot and every plant is the picture of health. We will plant 20,000 plants of Red Sport for next season's bloom and the cut is already engaged by two of Washington's leading retailers. Red Sport is an easy doer and everyone can grow it as successfully as we can. Price for Feb. 20th delivery—12 for $1.50; 25 for $2.50; 50 for $4.00 post-paid; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. We guarantee stock to arrive in good condition and be well rooted.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

A week of unprecedented snow and cold has brought things to a low level. Stock is very scarce. Roses are very poor, with the exception of Brides and Maids. Very few receptions have been held on account of the snow and were it not for an immense funeral trade business would have stagnated. Carnations are very scarce and of poor quality, with the exception of Enchantress, which in some shops shows an improvement over the past week. Bulbous stock is coming in freely and of fine quality. Prices are a little in advance of last week. Some extra fine sweet peas and violets are shown and are bringing good prices. Several large weddings and receptions the coming week promise to brighten things up.

Various Notes.

Your correspondent visited the range of W. J. Barnes, at Thirty-eighth and Euclid streets. Mr. Barnes has entirely remodeled his place and made quite an addition to his already large plant. He has two large houses in carnations and is growing some fine Joost, Lawson, Boston Market and Wolcott. He also has two large houses in roses, Brides, Maids, Gates and Beauties. He also has coming on an immense stock of tulips, hyacinths, longiflorum and Harrisii lilies. The office has been remodeled, with new fixtures, including a new cash register and improved bookkeeping system. Mr. Barnes does very little wholesaling, being able to dispose of the most of his stock to local trade.

J. H. Vesey, on Denver avenue, has two large houses in carnations, some fine bedding stock, and an exceedingly fine lot of hardy roses coming on for Easter trade. Mr. Vesey reports business as very good in spite of the gloomy weather.

A new firm, known as the Budd Park Flower Co., is rebuilding the Jarrett place and expects to have things in shape for the spring trade.

E. A. Humfeld has one of the finest locations in the city, having two of the principal driveways of the park system on either side of his place, and is doing a large business. Mr. Humfeld is confined to his home with the grip but reports business as first-class.

Jas. Payne, of Union cemetery, has some fine carnations and a large amount of bedding stock. Mr. Payne reports business as all that could be desired.

Miss M. Dalley is able to attend to business again and reports good trade in her line.

Nelson Jarrett has some of the finest begonias to be seen here and is growing a large stock of bedding plants for the spring trade.

A new fuel is being tried by a local grower, who claims for it that there is no smoke, an intense heat and no waste. His experiment is being watched with interest, as the new smokeless law here makes a smokeless fuel necessary.

W. L. Rock is showing some of the finest stock in the city, grown at their place near Forest Hill cemetery.

NARCISSUS.

FUNGUS ON ROSES.

We enclose a few rose leaves which are affected with some kind of disease. We would like to know the cause and remedy. The leaves we send are off of 2-inch pot plants. The plants seem to be thrifty with the exception of the older leaves turning yellow around the edges and curling up. In a house of 8,000 there is only one spot affected this way but it seems to be spreading slowly. Any information concerning this trouble would be gladly received.

G. N. & F. C.

When the leaves reached me they were so much dried up that it was almost impossible to diagnose the trouble but they are evidently affected with a fungus very much resembling the rose leaf blight and which if unchecked can do a lot of damage in a short time. It may not be this identical fungus but it would be safe to treat it as such. Spray with the carbonate of copper compound, using five ounces of the carbonate of copper to three quarts of ammonia and sixty gallons of water. Spray once a week using a fine nozzle and wet every part of the leaves. This is a sovereign remedy for many of the fungi which trouble the rose under glass. RIBES.

DOROTHY PERKINS RAMBLER.

Kindly give me some advice as to forcing the new rambler rose, Dorothy Perkins. I want them for Easter. They are in splendid shape now, just beginning to break. G. J. E.

We have not forced this fine pink rambler rose since the spring of 1903, but it is only through neglect or carelessness, for it is well worth forcing, and except that its color is not so showy as Crimson Rambler, it is just as desirable an Easter plant. Your plants are evidently in just the right condition. You should tie them into desirable shape. Keep them sprayed daily, and 50 degrees at night should do very well for another month; 5 degrees higher may be needed near flowering time. The few dozen we forced sold well. The cooler these ramblers can be flowered the better the color and larger the flowers will be. W. S.

PLANTS FOR OUTDOORS.

We find about the beginning of March the best time to sow seeds of peppers and egg plant, as they want to be kept moving pretty freely after they are started and require quite a little more heat than the average run of vegetable seedlings. By sowing at this date by the time the plants have got a start the weather is warmer and they can be grown on a good deal easier than if started earlier. We also sow our main crop varieties of tomatoes about the same time.

Regarding varieties in egg plant there is not much to choose from. Some firms catalogue several varieties but I am inclined to think that most of them will be taken from the same bag. Though trying several we have found nothing yet to beat the old stand-by, New York Spineless. In peppers we like Ruby King best of the larger varieties but where a medium-sized variety is wanted a very free growing and prolific one is County Fair. In tomatoes the varieties are so numerous as to be rather bewildering, and (for the beginner at least) it is hard to know just what to choose. Of the main crop varieties, Stone is, I think, the best introduction of recent ears. No one will make a mistake in growing a quantity of this good all-round variety. Of the purple tinted varieties the old Acme is as good as any.

In a recent article I gave my ideas about the sowing of seeds, soil employed, temperature, etc., so it is needless to go over the same ground again. The time when the seedlings should be pricked over will depend somewhat on how thick the plants are in the flats. If they begin to crowd one another at an early stage, they will have to be handled all the sooner, but unless they are crowded so as to induce drawing it is well to wait until the plants are of sufficient size to be easily handled. Ordinary potting soil will be all right to use for this purpose. If this contains a little well rotted manure it will not do any hurt but chemical fertilizers should be avoided. The size of the flats used is immaterial, so long as they can be conveniently handled, but if the size can be regulated so that they will fit neatly into the benches, no space will be wasted. A little rough material should be put into the bottom of the flats to act as drainage, and, although it is seldom necessary to sift the soil, it is all the better to have that on the surface rather fine.

The distance apart will have to be regulated by the growth of the different plants. About two inches each way will be room enough for lettuce to attain sufficient size for planting out, but cabbage and cauliflower will require about three inches. Peppers, egg plant and tomatoes succeed best when planted from pots. It is better, however, to prick over into flats from the seed flats, allowing them a space of about two inches each way, and pot up into 3-inch pots when they begin to crowd one another in the flats, which will be about the end of April. Potted then, they will fill the pots pretty well with roots before setting out time. Shade is necessary for a few days just after pricking over but once the plants have taken a fresh hold they should be exposed to all the light possible, so as to prevent them from becoming drawn and weakly.

A COIL BOILER.

I am thinking of building a boiler of 1-inch wrought pipe, to heat 2,000 square feet of glass, 1,500 feet in carnations and lettuce and 500 feet in roses, also three rooms in the dwelling house, average size 10x12. How many lineal feet of pipe will I need, arranged in horizontal coils? How large a grate area will be required and how large and tall a smokestack? I use soft coal and hot water for heating. What provision can I make for cleaning such a boiler? The houses are all new and tight and not much exposed. Is there a book published treating on the above?

C. L. W.

A boiler constructed as shown in the Review of December 31, 1903, p. 269, in order to heat the house you have, should contain 140 feet of 1-inch pipe exposed to the action of the heated gases of the furnace. Such a furnace will contain only about fifty feet of heating surface. The size of the grate will depend somewhat upon the arrangement of the pipes in the furnace. The more compact the coils the smaller the grate can be made. By making the top of the furnace of cast-iron plates covered with sand they can be removed when it is necessary to clean the water tubes. I know of no book which will aid you in the construction of such boiler.

L. C. C.

SOOT IN FLUES.

I have two houses 18x60 heated with a horizontal boiler with thirty 2-inch flues and have trouble with soot in the flues except where using wood with my soft coal, but wood is expensive. What is the most economical fuel to use, or should I get a boiler with larger flues?

W. N. T.

The trouble with the heating plant is evidently poor draught in the chimney. If the stack were larger or higher and the fire coaled very lightly and more frequently it is probable that less trouble would be experienced. The flues should be cleaned every twenty-four hours, however, when using soft coal. If after trying the plan of light, level, "pancake" firing no better results follow, secure buckwheat or pea coal and try it. Plants which act badly with soft coal frequently give good results when fired with hard coal. L. C. C.

DRAFT IN FLUES.

Referring to the inquiry of T. F., who is having trouble with the draft in his flue heating a house fifty feet long, if he will put a small stove where his flue turns into the chimney and starts to go straight up, keeping a wood fire in it, he will find his draught much improved. A very small stove will do the work by heating the air in the flue and thereby creating a draught. W. N. Thorp.

Shenandoah, Ia.—The past year has been a very prosperous one for the trade here and many improvements have been made. Since the holidays trade has held up better than usual and good prices have been realized for cut flowers. Lately the weather has been very severe, adding greatly to the work. O. B. Stevens is preparing for a big business on dahlias, cannas and gladioli, which have been leading specialties with him.

CAUSES OF FLOWERS DOUBLING.

The botanists find the doubling of flowers a somewhat hard nut to crack. There are several forms of doubling, one of the most common being found in the multiplication of petals. But when the inducing causes of doubling are considered there is ample opportunity for speculation. In a general manner, the causes assigned by physiologists, or the plans. proposed by cultivators are reducible to three heads—namely, plethora, starvation, and sterility. As Dr. Masters stated many years ago, these three seem inconsistent one with the other, but are not so much so as they appear at first sight to be. The advocates of the plethora theory have much in their favor; for instance, the greater frequency of double flowers among cultivated plants than among wild ones, says the Horticultural Trade Journal. Dr. Seemaun brought out the facts of the great preponderance of double flowers in plants derived from the northern hemisphere, when contrasted with those from the southern. Cases have been known of debility or starvation having the effect of changing flowers to the double form; but then it has had a contrary effect also, as a case has been mentioned of a double-flowered thorn producing single blossoms from this cause. Mr. Darwin makes mention of a state of things which brings about sterility or imperfect formation of the flower, leading to a consequent increase of the petaline element, either in the form of an increased number of bracts, petals, etc., or in the substitution of petals for stamers and pistils.

It is said that the way in which double stocks are produced in Erfurt, Germany, is by giving the plants a minimum supply of water. This much appears to be certain that when once the disposition to form double flowers is established from any cause, that tendency becomes hereditary; there are races of stocks in which out of hundreds of plants scarcely one double flowered form is met with; this is particularly the case with the Giant Brompton, and especially so in the case of the White Giant; on the other hand, where the tendency is set up, single flowers become the exception.

PLAN FOR HEATING.

I have a house, even span, east and west, 24x100 feet, twelve feet six inches to the ridge, side walls five feet high, containing twenty inches of glass. On the north side is a lean-to from the eaves, of six-foot sash. The house, containing three five-foot center benches, is to be used for carnations and the lean-to for violets. Using hot water, how many lines of 1¼-inch pipes will be required, the house being tight but somewhat exposed and subject to the weather of western New York? How large a flow is needed and what is the best arrangement of the system? The boiler will be below the lowest point in the piping. Using steam what piping would be required? What is meant by hot water under pressure? L. C. S.

The house 24x100 will require twenty-one runs of 1¼-inch pipe arranged along the side walls and under the benches, or entirely under the benches, to heat it to 60 degrees during severe weather with hot water at 180 degrees. It should have a 3½-inch flow pipe to supply these pipes. A good system would be to run a 3½-inch riser under the ridge with a rise toward the far end of the house and there divide into 2-inch branches to supply a coil under each of the three benches, i. e., three coils of seven pipes each. The coils should have a fall from the far end of the house towards the boiler of at least twelve inches in the 100 feet. To heat this house with steam the riser can be reduced to 2½-inch and the twenty-one pipes replaced by sixteen of the same size. The riser should fall in the opposite direction for steam, however. The lean-to house, if provided with a 2-inch riser and four 1¼-inch returns, should provide 50 degrees during severe weather with hot water. If steam is used a 2-inch riser and three 1¼-inch pipes should do the work.

Hot water under pressure is the system of using small malleable pipes, such as above mentioned, and using an expansion tank of good size located twelve to twenty feet above the returns in the houses. In the above described hot water system a 1-inch pipe should connect with the main return near the boiler and rise as nearly vertical as possible to a height of fifteen feet or more. If necessary, build a cupola on the boiler-house to accommodate the expansion tank and use a tank with fifty gallons capacity. L. C. C.

PIERSON Water Steam BOILERS

Will reduce your coal bill. They did it for others last winter.

The Reason of this is found in the construction of the boilers. They have a larger amount of direct fire surface than other horticultural boilers. The flue areas are large and all parts are easily accessible for cleaning. They are adapted for the use of any kind of fuel.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Keep Easter Stock Cool.

We shall soon be studying out the right time to get in various plants for the big event, Easter. To those who have been forcing plants for years for this occasion I give no hint except to remind them that Easter is very late and, after this steady, hard winter, it is more than likely we should get an early, bright spring, although I don't aspire to be a weather prophet, for they are "without honor" both at home and abroad.

Azaleas of nearly all varieties must be kept very cool. A north house, where the direct sun will never reach them, is a great help in retarding them, as well as a low temperature. If kept now, and for another month, almost dormant, three or four weeks will be plenty of time to give them in a light house and moderate temperature. The bright and perhaps warm days of April are sure to make them jump.

Pyrus Japonica will want about four weeks in the house. This is a very attractive plant when well flowered, but it is difficult to get plants well prepared for forcing.

Various Shrubs.

We have been rather late more than once with Deutzia gracilis. Give it six weeks in a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees. Lilacs you are forcing right along and they are particularly well set with buds this year. For Easter, four weeks in the greenhouse will be plenty of time for them. A well-flowered Marie Legraye is a beautiful plant and we find our customers know enough to prefer a plant that has some blossoms fully out and some buds to open, as they do with the azalea.

The rhododendrons differ in earliness. Those swelling their buds must be kept cold and shaded but those showing no signs of starting, and the buds small and tight, can be got into a warmer house, for these varieties come along slowly. The hardy deciduous azaleas, known as the Ghent hybrid varieties, are not as generally grown as they deserve. With a little decorating with ribbons, etc., we find they sell well. They give us shades of orange and pink and clear yellow not found in any other of our forcing plants and are a mass of blossom. Considering the season, one month will bring them into flower from the cold frame.

Now all these plants, which are really hardy shrubs, should receive a thorough watering when first potted up or brought into the houses and never allowed to get dry afterwards; also, they should be sprayed at least once a day until the flowers are open. The syringing is an important item.

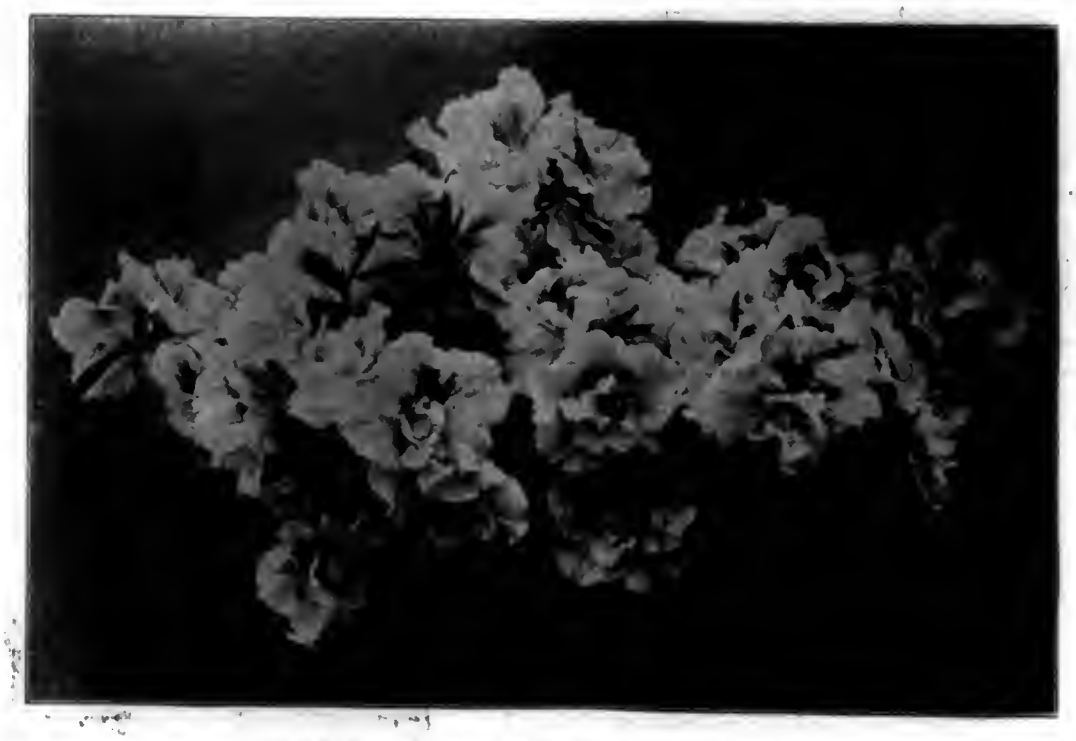
Lemon Verbena.

This is a good time to start up this old favorite. In every mixed border of plants there ought to be some lemon verbena. Plants that have been under the bench, dormant but not dried out, will, if cut back to sound wood and put into heat and kept sprayed, give you any quantity of young, tender growths, which root as easily as a coleus providing you keep the sand well saturated. I knew there is a prejudice against the old-fashioned hotbed and I am almost afraid to mention it, yet how many of our plants will thrive and grow in them as no up-to-date steam-heated greenhouse can make them, and the lemon verbena is particularly one of them.

The Lantana.

The lantana is another plant that should be started now. We give it the same treatment, a little shortening of last summer's growth, and with heat and moisture soon get young growths that root readily. This is not a showy, high-colored bedding plant, yet most pleasing. In the almost forgotten but good old Pan-American there was a bed of lantanas shown by Henry A. Dreer Co. The variety was called Robert Craig and there were few flower beds more admired on the grounds.

Petunias.



Your seedlings are now, or shortly will be, advanced enough to prick out into flats or pots. I much prefer pots for these very small, soft plants, as there is less danger of their damping off if over-watered. We use a 2½-inch or 3-inch pot. Make the soil moderately firm and then strike it off level with the rim of the pot. With a fine pointed stick, transplant the little seedlings, five or six plants around the edge of the pot and three or four in the center. Put the pots in the full light and as near the glass as you can. When they begin to crowd it is time to pot them singly in 2½-inch pots if you intend to sell them by the dozen. If you want them for bedding orders they are just as well put into flats, two inches apart. They will never feel the transplanting into the flower beds any more than a pansy. What a lot of cheap bedding plants can be grown in flats quite as well and at half the cost and labor of fussing with little pots! The verbenas, alternantheras, petunias, Begonia Vernon and several others can be transplanted just as well as from pots as we do all our asters and other so-called hardy annuals.

Light or Air.

I mentioned just now to put these petunias "near the glass." We have contended heretofore that there was as much light ten feet from the glass as there was ten inches away and on the middle bench of a light house there is certainly perfect light. Yet what is there that conduces to a healthy, vigorous growth, especially in winter, with plants on a shelf near the glass? It is not merely perfect light. It must be the pure, fresh atmosphere they breathe in the upper part of the house. The heavier, denser and more impure atmosphere remains near the ground and this sometimes makes me skeptical of our low benches or solid beds for such important plants as the rose and carnation. When ventilation can be given daily and freely there may be little difference in the atmosphere in any part of the house, but in the winter, when the opportunity to ventilate is very infrequent, and then only to a small degree, there must be a difference and it is greatly to the advantage of the plants well above the ground.

Lady Washington Geranium.

The show pelargoniums will soon want the last shift. How fashions have changed! Thirty years ago these were most popular of plants and honored with the title of Lady Washington. If they could return to favor they might be rechristened Lady Lawson or Lady Rockefeller. We keep them over winter in 3-inch pots, not growing much because they should be kept on the dry side and not higher than a night temperature of 45 degrees. You can shift them now into 6-inch pots. Use rather rough, unsifted loam with a fifth of rotten manure and make the new soil firm. Give them the lightest bench and not over 50 degrees at night. Greenfly is their greatest enemy and tobacco stems among the pots will save a good deal of fumigating. We will always have the greatest respect for these good old pelargoniums, for they were instrumental more than any other plant in our owning our first greenhouse.

The Indian Azalea as it Should be Flowered.

Salvia Splendens.

Don't fail to get up a good big stock of some free flowering variety of Salvia splendens. More and more every year these plants are in demand. There is something about the brilliant flowers that harmonizes with the autumn tint of our fields and foliage and you feel a glow of warmth when looking at a bank of the scarlet sage. It is so easily propagated and grown nothing need be said, only keep the red spider away by frequent syringing. WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

BASKET ARRANGEMENTS.—II.

In today's pictures we have styles of baskets entirely different from the types shown in the issue for February 9. Instead of the high arched handle, there are in No. 1 two low circular handles, which, when brought together, reduce the center space and throw the flowers up and out toward the ends, and in No. 2, stationary handles lengthen the appearance of the basket and add grace to its severe outline.

The first study is a soft raffia basket about ten inches long, suitable for suspending in front of a mirror, under a chandelier over a table, either alone for a small table, or in a cluster for a long table, or for a child to carry at a wedding. A larger basket of the same style might be used by a maid of honor or bridesmaid for the same occasion. As presented here the basket is a get-ready-quick, loose arrangement, intended to last a day or an evening, but it is an open question whether flowers without sphagnum packing and stemming do not last equally well with those which are laboriously prepared by the old processes. The amount of water which the stems absorb from the sphagnum, which must be too dry to drip, cannot be considerable. If stock is well filled by standing over night, at least several hours in water, it will remain fresh out of water for a period long enough for almost any social occasion. The advantages gained are time, a little material, and a more natural effect of arrangement.

Some material, however, must be used for a filler which will also serve for a foliage effect. In this case a coil of stiff Asparagus Sprengeri fills the body of the basket and throws out its tip end to the left above the handles. Three or four sprays are added extending toward the edge of the basket one through the handles sideways. Wire these short sprays to the center coil. Three or four sprays are added extending towards the edge of the basket and one through the handles sideways. Fasten the latter sprays to a handle of the basket with a single wrapping, and you have secured the filling in place.

Then, with the center of the basket as a starting point, fasten the sprays of hyacinths to the strong Sprengeri. It is best to wrap most of them, by a turn or two of fine wire, to the Sprengeri and let them fall over the green background whichever way they naturally incline. They must not all take a downward turn, however. Set a cluster upright, as seen a little to the right of the center, and let a few short-stemmed hyacinths be placed so as to come out under the handles sidewise. Care should be taken to follow and develop the shape of the basket, which is oblong. Equally long clusters should not be allowed to hang out at the side, as is shown from the illustration, where the long sprays fall out from the ends, and from the center toward the ends.

In order to have a gracefully filled basket one must have a well shaped basket to start with, and must keep within the lines of the outline to get the best results. In other words, enlarge and develop the idea of the maker of the basket with the filling.

The most desirable results to be obtained from publishing illustrations of this kind and describing so minutely the process of construction is not that somebody shall copy these designs to their smallest details, but rather that the principles of design and construction may be discovered, described and studied for succeeding occasions. If one can learn how to fill one basket correctly and gracefully he will probably be able to meet the next emergency equally well, and even though some other law is involved in the correct arrangement of the second, it can be more easily discovered and worked out on account of a previous study having been thoroughly made. The two principles laid down by this illustration are, therefore, conformity to the shape of the basket or frame of the design, and a common source or center from which to start all stems or lines.

The second study is a more complicated design, but more simple of construction. It is a low, olive green, rattan basket, rectangular in form, with triple circular handles on the end. The body of the basket is filled with violets in two low dishes of water. The basket is about twelve inches long and requires 300 violets to fill after this style. A small cluster of violets is thrown over the handles on the right and wired over the drapery of light green embroidered chiffon. This chiffon is drawn through the handles there and allowed to fall loosely across the front of the basket and is finally caught on the handles to the left with the long end hanging. Around the edges of the basket the longer violets are drawn out as far as possible against the drapery. Then, starting with the drapery on the right are La Detroit roses thrown to the left across the corner of the basket.

One of the best elements of a floral design can never appear in a photograph, and that is the coloring, but it will not be difficult in this case to see the color scheme in the mind's eye. Violet, crimson pink and light green describe it fully.

This basket is suitable for a low centerpiece and can be filled with sphagnum in the usual way. Stem the violets in clusters of six or a dozen on whole picks. See that the upper ends of the picks run well in under the green covering of the sphagnum. Wood ferns are the best covering. Insert the stemmed violets in clumps to look like live plants. This is a series of bunches like the simple bunch of the hyacinths in No. 1, which was remarked upon as illustrating the principle that all lines and stems of a design should spring, or appear to spring, from a common source. All the space between the clumps need not be filled closely; allow patches of the background to appear here and there. Following the same law, start the stems of the roses and the bud from the same point on the right handle. Pull a few long stemmed violets across the rose stems and the design is complete. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

Suspended Basket of Roman Hyacinths.

Basket of Violets and Roses Trimmed With Chiffon.

TUBEROUS ROOTED BEGONIAS.

Do tuberous begonias do well in this country, or is it too hot in this section (Indiana) for them to grow to perfection? When ought they be planted to have good plants at bedding out time? H. D. S.

In western New York, which is certainly a cool section of the continent, these begonias are fine bedding plants. We have seen beds of them in our public parks that surpassed any geranium in brilliancy of color and in varied form of flower, and many shades were most fascinating. The REVIEW illustrated last summer at least two beds of these plants. One was very close to the writer's front door and was a great success. People walking along would simply glance at a bed of cannas or geraniums, but they would come to a full stop opposite the begonias.

The begonias are aristocracy compared to most of our other bedding plants. It is not necessary but with us begonias are benefited by partial shade, not behind a wall or building or directly beneath a tree, but say by a tree some distance to the south of them that would shade from the noon sun. We believe, however, that Indiana has a much warmer climate and more bright hot sunshine and that partial shade would be an essential. Watering has much to do with success. Make the bed almost level and then you can water thoroughly by running the hose between the plants and give the bed a soaking twice a week in hot, dry weather. This sprinkling the bed daily and its not soaking in more than half an inch is simply an abomination and aggravation, especially to these begonias.

I think failure with these plants has often occurred because they were too much grown inside and felt the change from, perhaps, a shaded bench to the sun and wind outside. I don't know when you bed out tender plants, in Indiana perhaps by the middle of May; we can't plant with safety before June 1. About April 1 we put the begonia bulbs in flats of sandy soil mixed with leaf-mold or very rotten manure. If placed over some hot water pipes they soon start and should be given a light place on the bench. We pot them about May 1 into 3-inch or 3½-inch pots and plunge in a very mild hotbed. Here they grow rapidly, but stout and robust, and by the middle of the month we can remove the sash and let them be exposed to sun and air and by planting out time they feel no change. For an interesting pretty bed, all colors and double and single varieties mixed is the thing to please. The single flowers, however, make the greatest show. W. S.

STEVIA.

I have a stevia which does not bloom until February 1 to 15. In the same greenhouse Stevia variegata blooms December 1 or sooner. It seems impossible to make the other come earlier. The kind seems to be Stevia serrata. I am compelled to keep the plants in the house all the time here in Alabama because outside zero is more than they will stand. F. J. U.

If the species is S. serrata it flowers in the north in December and by keeping very cool after showing flower it is most useful as a cheap flower at Christmas. There is in the query some mention about zero. Surely there is no zero in Alabama. This stevia, although a cold blooded plant, will not endure a single degree of frost. Perhaps our chilly October days arrest growth and induce flower, while the balmy October, November and perhaps December of the sunny south encourage growth and hinder the great function of reproduction, which is flowering. The variegated form of S. serrata may flower earlier from the fact that it is variegated and therefore less vigorous in growth.

We plant out the small plants of this stevia the end of May and lift before there is danger of frost. If you were to grow them entirely in pots, as we used to do years ago, and starve them for root room, it would likely induce them to flower a month earlier. Send me a spray of leaf and flower.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

STANDARD SIZES OF PLANTS.

I was much interested in the effort to secure the adoption of some sort of a measure of quality of plants at the last convention of the S. A. F. The society seems to have shelved the problem as one impossible of solution.

Some sort of a measure of quality more definite than size of pot and adjectives is certainly much to be desired, both by those who buy and those having stock of good quality to sell, and it seems to me that the matter did not receive at St. Louis the consideration to which its importance entitled it. Why not invite a discussion of the subject in the REVIEW? I believe that the combined wisdom of the thoughtful members of the trade could evolve some sort of a scale or classification that would be a vast improvement on present methods, even if not as exact and complete as to be wished. W. E. S.

[We shall be pleased to hear from any one who has a suggestion to make along the lines indicated. The determination of a rational standard for the designation of sizes of stock is certainly devoutly to be wished for. How can it be done?—ED.]

FREESIAS.

Will freesias bloom from seed in four months? I see in some of the catalogues that they will. As we have never grown any we would like to know what W. S. thinks about it. I have his Manual, but he does not say anything about growing them from seed. We have a bench here 4x95 and if we were to plant the bulbs in it next fall how many could we plant in a bench of that size? Will they grow in boxes four inches deep in good earth? My idea is to put the boxes on the bench and, after they have bloomed, take the boxes off and plant something else on the bench. Will they grow that way? R. & S.

We have never raised these bulbs from seed. It is possible they may send up a flower spike from the strongest bulbs the first year, but we doubt it, and you most assuredly could not depend on these seedlings for a crop. The bulbs or, more properly, corms, are sold to us so cheap that it would be folly for us in the northern states to go into raising our own bulbs. The bulbs are produced in France, also in Bermuda and California.

A bench 4x95 would hold an enormous lot of bulbs and without going into the number it would be far more, if all flowered at once, than any market would demand, as they can be planted three inches apart in the rows and five inches between rows.

There is no better plan than the one you suggest, viz., to put the bulbs in boxes of convenient size and four inches deep. Then a moderate amount of bench room will be sufficient to force thousands of these pretty flowers. You can cut freesias at Christmas and on to June by making plantings from August to February. The earliest can be started in frames. These bulbs do not want covering, as do tulips and hyacinths. Be careful not to keep the soil too wet before active growth begins. It is no very severe forcing we give the freesia, therefore, after the flower is cut and the plants dried off, the bulbs can be grown again the following winter.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Topping Young Stock.

On the care taken with the work of topping depends the shapeliness of the plant at housing time and it goes without saying that the first top is an all important one inasmuch as it has a direct bearing on the neck of the plant. If topped too low there will be scarcely any neck; if too high, the result will be a top-heavy plant, very liable to be troublesome in the field.

Of course we cannot produce plants as near alike as peas in a pod, but a little preliminary thought and exercise of care will do much to encourage evenness and symmetry in growth. You will find this desirable when housing, and particularly so if desirous of disposing of the surplus.

Some varieties have a natural disposition to form neat, bushy specimens, but there are those of the "let me lay down" sort, Daybreak and White Cloud, for instance, which, if carelessly topped at the start, give no end of trouble by their persistent sprawling.

Like many other operations there is a proper way and time to top. Above all things do not pull out the center of a plant to induce branching. Besides being a barbarous custom it leaves a lodging place for moisture. Allow growth to continue until you can see signs of the formation of a stem between the lower three or four joints; then it is time to top. Use a sharp knife, making a clean, smooth cut that will heal quickly. Breaking with a quick snap is liable to take more than intended and gouging off with the thumb nail leaves an ugly wound.

Opinions differ somewhat as to the point at which to cut, and rightly so, as different varieties need treatment to conform with their natural habit of growth. As a rule trim-growing sorts should be cut just above the fourth joint; those of sprawly habit, a joint lower. As an experiment I have cut White Cloud, leaving but two joints, with the result that we lifted extra fine shaped plants.

The advantage of having stock in pots will be apparent when topping, as these can be set aside and kept a trifle dry until the new growth appears.

If you transfer stock from pots to flats or repot as occasion requires, remember not to top and at once repot or transfer. Allow time for roots to adjust themselves.

At no time can young plants be allowed to suffer for water if for no other reason than that this treatment hardens the stem and retards branching.

Keep the plants cool, which will induce sturdy, short-jointed growth, which is the foundation of shapely plants.

Do not worry about the plants being too small if kept cool. It is not so much the size we want for some time yet as it is a vigorous look.

CROP FOR EASTER.

We have a house of carnations of the following kinds: Lawson, Francis Joost, White Cloud and Queen Louise. They have been giving a good crop of flowers since December 1, but are now going off crop. How shall we handle them from now on to get another crop for Easter? They are at this time full of nice, strong breaks, about the size of good cuttings, or in other words shoots from two to four inches long and over. We have been keeping the night temperature at 52 to 56 degrees. We gave them a sprinkling of ashes of tobacco stems three days ago and scratched it in and intend to give a watering of liquid sheep manure. Is this right?

S. F. P.

I would not advise you to feed your carnations liquid until the flower stems have begun to set buds. You will do far better to give them a mulch of half-rotted cow manure an inch thick or a half inch of sheep manure and soil mixed, about half and half. While the plants are between crops they are not in shape to stand much feeding. You would find that Queen Louise especially would sicken and turn yellow. After they get into a vigorous growth you can feed them with safety. Easter comes very late this year, the last part of April, and you should have no trouble in getting another crop on by that time without raising the temperature. Just do all you can to promote a strong, sturdy growth, so the cut will be high grade.

F. H. Kramer, Washington, D. C., registers Carnation F. H. Kramer, a cross between Lawson and Marquis, color a shade brighter than Lawson, flower a trifle larger, with no short stems in the fall and does not burst; in growth it is stronger than any carnation we have grown and is entirely free from disease, a continuous bloomer and stems stand without support.

A USEFUL PLOW.

In one of the recent issues I saw a statement I cannot now find, in regard to a hillside plow. Can you tell me where they are manufactured? J. A. F.

Almost any implement dealer ought to be able to get you one of those hillside plows. Ours came from the Gale Manufacturing Co., at Albion, Mich. You will wonder how you got along without it so long, after you have used it a season. I might add that this plow is not as good for breaking up new ground as the regulation breaking plow, as it does not turn the soil as well when it is lumpy. A. F. J. Baur.

A GROWER'S IDEA OF STEM-ROT.

[A paper by Wm. Weber, of Oakland, Md., read before the New York Florists' Club on Carnation Night, February 13.]

In accepting the invitation of your secretary to read a paper here tonight, I judged that in the absence of a definite subject being assigned to me, I was free to take up any part or parts I might choose. I have therefore sought to avoid rehearsing the old story, beginning with the taking of the cuttings and winding up with their ultimate end when the torch is applied somewhat more than a year later.

In attempting to discuss the subject of cutting bench fungus or stem-rot, it is not my intention or wish to lock horns with any of our brethren who are studying these subjects from a scientific standpoint. We need the aid of the experiment stations and scientific men; we have been benefited much as a result of their labors and we look forward to their aid in disposing of the various vexing problems which are constantly besetting us, but I believe that our friends, the professors, being only human, are apt to err just as we ordinary growers are apt to do.

Fungi, a Cause or a Condition?

Prof. Hasselbring, in his paper read recently before the American Carnation Society in session at Chicago, stated that fungi in every instance are the prime cause of disease, not the condition. Now I doubt if any successful grower who has given the subject any serious consideration will corroborate Prof. Hasselbring's statement. If he told us that typhoid, smallpox, etc., were first causes and not the result of conditions he would be arguing along the same lines. But let us see how his theory stands when compared with what I believe are the actual facts in the case.

We will start at the cutting bench, say with a full bench of sound, healthy cuttings, recently placed in new sand. I maintain the idea that during the rooting process cuttings not only do not require direct sunlight, but even strong light, such as will penetrate ordinary newspapers with the sun shining directly upon it, is far from beneficial. You will see at a glance, then, that I am an ardent adherent of the north-side propagating house for carnations.

But to illustrate why fungus appears let us imagine our bench of cuttings is in a house admitting the sun's rays at all hours, but especially during mid-day. During cloudy weather it is not difficult to maintain an even temperature of about 50 to 60 degrees, but during bright weather it is not so easy. Of course the glass may be shaded, but much heat will generate just the same, and it is quite easy for the temperature to go above the danger point, which is 60 to 65 degrees, depending somewhat upon the conditions.

Under the influence of strong light and added heat, plants throw off the moisture collected during the night and a wilting ensues. This process is equivalent to exercise in the animal family, but we don't expect infants to take strong nourishment and vigorous exercise, and we must act accordingly with our cuttings. When we give heat and light in sufficient quantities to cause this wilting process, evaporation takes place out of all proportion to the cutting's vitality and ability to withstand the drain. One good experience like this will start the ball rolling. Cuttings here and there, or whole batches, have a shriveled appearance and refuse to thoroughly freshen up; it will not be long then before an examination will disclose the presence of fungus around the stems, which will kill the cuttings quickly or slowly, according to the temperature maintained.

We advocate the north-side propagating house because of its easier management. The direct rays of the sun are kept out during most of the propagating season, but sufficient light is admitted for all purposes. The only time we experience difficulty at all is when the high south partition or wall no longer excludes the sun's rays, when greater vigilance is necessary. However, even then the sun's rays strike the glass at a very extreme angle and we do not suffer in proportion as we used to before we adopted the north side.

Clear Sand Not Necessary.

We have found it unnecessary to have clear sharp sand; in fact, we consider that a distinct drawback. The inability to secure sharp sand in our section soon taught us this lesson. We all know that for the first few weeks the cutting is obliged to subsist upon its own vitality, and while the process of rooting is going on, a gradual hardening of the stem takes place, and if allowed to remain in sharp sand long after they become rooted, we say they are woody. This is a frequent cause for stem-rot developing in the plants later on, and usually produces the slow process of rotting unless conditions very favorable to the growth of fungi exist, when wholesale dying will result.

This does not occur with cuttings rooted in sand containing some loam, decayed leaves, twigs, etc., such as we find along the banks of any small stream which overflows at various times of the year, depositing the sand, leaves, twigs, etc., mixed with some of the fat of the land, a very fine loam.

The nourishment contained in sand of this kind, while very mild, is very nourishing to young cuttings just putting out their first tiny rootlets, and from this moment on they begin to stop hardening at the stem, and grow, instead of getting woody and laying the foundation for various stages of stem-rot to crop out later on.

With our system of propagation it takes about six weeks during mid-winter to thoroughly root a batch of cuttings, and during this time they are watered about six times, four times during the first two weeks. After they are callused they are kept increasingly dryer until they are quite dry when ready to plant in soil or pot up. This drying process we find necessary to counteract the absence of sunlight.

I do not wish to infer that good results are not obtainable in a propagating house admitting the direct rays of the sun, but the point I would make, is that the chances for unfavorable conditions to arise are much greater as compared with the north-side house.

Any Check Causes Stem-Rot.

Any check sustained by the plants after being removed from the cutting bench, such as getting extremely dry in flats or pots, will result in producing that hard woody condition in the base of the plant; and every grower knows how plants so treated will at best die a lingering death. Many plants more or less affected in this way find their way into the field, which is responsible for much of the stem-rot found there. Deep planting and imperfect drainage are also large contributors to stem-rot.

A couple of years ago we began our field planting, as is our custom, about May 15. The soil was quite dry, but there were indications of rain; however, the rain did not come, and on the third day we were obliged to water the plants by hand. The bright sun and a strong wind, however, had already sapped out all of the moisture the plants could muster; consequently quite a few never revived, some only partially revived, and others kept dying from time to time throughout the summer, and even after they were housed. Perhaps a week later we had plenty of rain but those planted in the dry ground without being watered until the third day kept on dying just the same, while those planted after the rain, and those watered as they were planted, did not suffer.

Rot Enters at Surface.

Just a word concerning the theory advanced by Prof. Hasselbring that the fungus enters the plant through the roots. I have never yet been led to believe this could be the case and, instead, I have invariably noticed that the fungus operates upon the surface of the sand or soil, and any dead roots are the result of curtailed breathing of the plant through a loss of foliage. The same thing happens if we use the pruning shears too freely upon our roses or other growing plants. A portion of the roots die through a lack of something to do.

We have all noticed young plants and even old plants carried off by quick rot just at the surface of the soil, and some time later see numerous small new growths coming out of the old stem, indicating that the old root is still alive, and doing away with the idea that the disease enters the plant by way of the roots. The slow form of stem-rot would too far. We can cite many illustrations of this kind.

We have also noticed that plants partially affected with stem-rot have lived for months, and in the meantime produced a partial crop of good blooms. We do not attribute this entirely to the resistant power of the plant, to the disease, but rather to the absence of favorable conditions for the growth of the fungus.

I am willing to go on record as differing with Prof. Hasselbring that the fungi are the prime cause of disease. In my humble opinion they are the effect, and conditions unfavorable to plant life and favorable to the rapid growth of the fungi are the immediate causes. In other words, the fungi bear the same relation to vegetable matter that the green bottle fly and its larva do to carrion—nature's method of disposing of dead matter where sufficient moisture and heat exist to make the growth of these organisms possible.

The proof of Mr. Weber's paper was submitted to Prof. Hasselbring, at the University of Chicago, when he made the following comment:

There still seems to be some misconception regarding stem-rot. This disease is caused by a fungus known as Fusarium. Unfavorable conditions may predispose plants to attacks of the fungus, but if the fungus is not present no condition of light, heat or moisture can produce stem-rot. These are not speculative considerations, but experimental facts. H. Hasselbring.

House of Bride Roses at A. C. Brown's, Springfield, Ill.

AT ILLINOIS' CAPITAL.

Springfield, the capital city of Illinois, is rather out of the beaten track and we do not hear as much of the florists there as we do of some in smaller places and doing less business. Springfield is a city of upwards of 40,000 people and there are several nice ranges of glass and some rather good stuff grown in them. There are nearly a dozen places and every one of them worth a visit. Nearly all are located on the outskirts, so that one gets a chance to see the city in going from one to the other. In summer it is a very pleasant trip but just now there is more snow on the ground than in many years previous.

One of the largest and best kept places is that of a bright eyed, quick witted young woman, Miss Bell Miller, whose business ability is not less than her personal popularity. A widely known place is that of the W. T. Buckley Co., which does a large wholesale plant business. The late Louis Unverzagt did a good trade and Carl Rauth, David Wirth, H. L. Phelps, and Wm. Bierstadt & Son are each keeping up with the procession.

One of the ranges which has attracted most local attention of late is that of A. C. Brown. A year ago Mr. Brown was located practically in the center of the city but last season he undertook the very large task of moving to a new stand a mile farther out. For many years Mr. Brown had been a partner of A. C. Canfield. When they separated each continued in business for himself Mr. Canfield has a large and growing place in the south part of town and grows cut flowers for the St. Louis market. Mr. Brown retails most of what he produces at his store on South Fifth street, so that the old partners can hardly be said to be in competition.

Mr. Brown's new plant is a modern one and already there are preparations for extending it in the spring. Two ninety horse-power boilers lie just outside the boiler room and inside are two of eighty horse-power in operation. Roses and carnations are grown in considerable quantity and violets have done so well this season that more will be indeed, give this impression, but knowing the facts as already stated, I believe this view to be erroneous. Cutting bench fungus and stem-rot will cease when the conditions favoring its growth cease, and not before.

No Immunity in Prospect.

It is true that some varieties are carried off much quicker than others, but this does not indicate that we may hope for varieties which will remain immune under conditions favorable to the growth of fungi, but rather that those varieties of a rather soft or fleshy nature, such as Daybreak, Uncle John, Flora Hill, Enchantress and others similarly constituted, need special care. As a rule such varieties must be kept a little dryer than those of a more firm and solid growth.

While there is no hope of ridding a plant of the disease when once attacked, I know that in the case of valuable plants, such as first year seedlings, cuttings may be taken with entire safety, providing the disease has not progressed grown another year. Quite a number of pot plants are grown for use at the store. The roses have done well but were necessarily late planted because of the rebuilding. The carnations were also benched late but have done well, Lawson, Enchantress, Boston Market and Mrs. Nelson looking especially fine. Nelson Fisher and Mrs. Patten will be grown more extensively another season. There will then be two more large houses, one for carnations and one for roses. There are already six houses, five 315 feet long and one 160 feet long. The houses run east and west on a side hill with a gentle slope to the south. The steam main runs across the center of the range in a tunnel. The heating system works perfectly and was installed by the foreman, Wm. P. Marshall, who is seen in the accompanying illustration of the bench of Enchantress carnations. Mr. Marshall is a graduate of Peter Fisher's school of carnation growing and got his training on roses under Alex. Montgomery. He planted his carnations from pots in June. He has not had ten per cent split Lawsons this season and will grow Mr. Fisher's varieties and some others indoors next season, being well satisfied with results. One of the pictures shows Mr. Brown in a rose house. Just at present he's in Mexico. In the picture showing the Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and the Bostons is David Nolan, the plant grower.

PROPAGATING FOR EXHIBITIONS.

It is not too early to begin thinking about propagating the chrysanthemum cuttings, for many of the best exhibition growers already have their cuttings rooted. February propagation is none too early for many varieties, particularly those of dwarf habit, Merza, Nellie Pockett, Cheltoni and W. R. Church furnishing good examples of the varieties referred to. If one has lots of headroom any of the kinds may be rooted now and grown right along with advantage but in such a case one must have twelve feet of head room, clear above the bench, which is not often provided for. I saw Timothy Eaton last year over twelve feet high with flowers of enormous size, showing the good effects of a long growing season. The idea that one can strike cuttings in June and get just as good flowers from them as though the cuttings were rooted in February is now proven beyond question to be wrong.

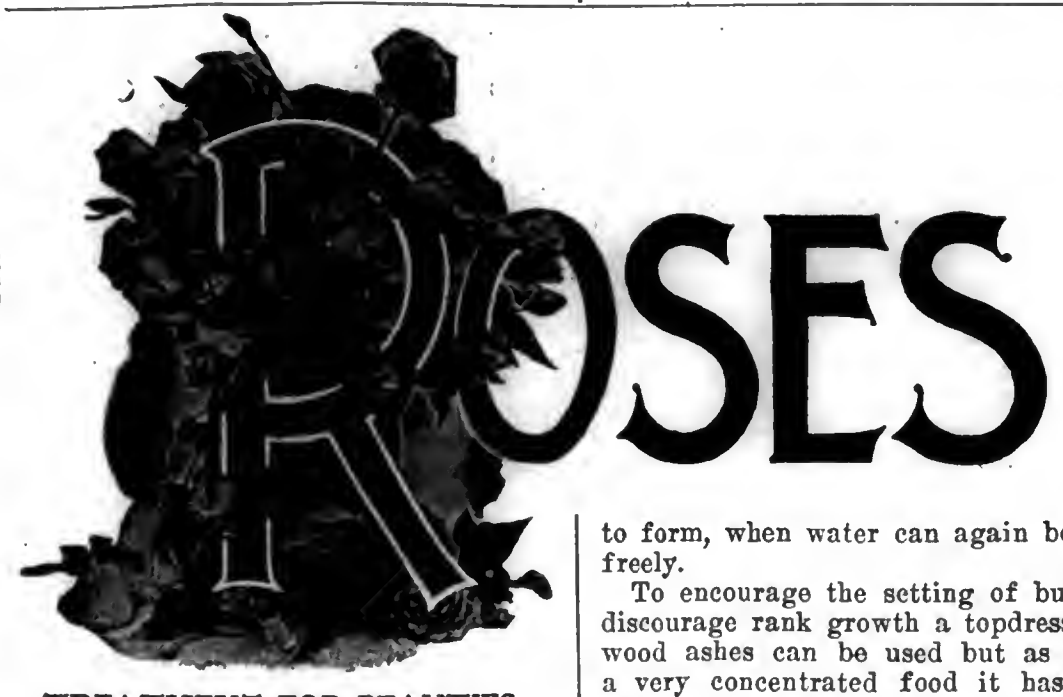
The grower for commercial flowers only does not need to bother yet awhile, excepting in the case of new or scarce varieties, which it may be desired to increase considerably. These may be rooted and when the young plant has made sufficient growth it can be topped and the cutting rooted. This operation may be repeated several times without much injury to the stock if done properly and the plants carefully handled.

When the cuttings are rooted they should be potted up at once and kept in a cold house, and by being rooted I mean when the young roots are half an inch long. It is a great mistake to leave cuttings in the sand until the roots are five or six inches long and the top all drawn up and spindly. Such a condition as this will cause a severe check to the plant at the commencement of its career, and that spindly, hide-bound cutting never catches up to its stronger, better cared for neighbor.

It occasionally happens, after a batch of cuttings have been potted up, that they will run to bud instead of making a clean good growth. Every spring I hear more or less of this trouble and, noticing a batch of plants yesterday that were budding when they should be growing, reminded me that some beginner may shortly be worrying because his plants were doing the same thing. This disposition to run to bud instead of growth shoots may proceed from several causes. First, some varieties are "built" that way, W. R. Church being a bad offender with me at any season of the year, and, secondly, improper selection of cuttings will at times be the cause.

The ideal cutting is the sucker that comes through the ground and is about two inches or so in length. When cuttings are taken from the stem of the plant or when the suckers are allowed to run up a foot or so in height before being topped, they very frequently run to bud after rooting. Another thing that will cause cuttings to make bud is permitting them to get too dry and wilted in the sand and before they are rooted. A chrysanthemum cutting should never be allowed to wilt down but should be kept well watered in the sand and frequently sprayed, also, if the day is warm. If it is dried out a time or two the cutting gets too hard and dry to root and will very frequently make a small, abortive bud and never root at all, or in such a feeble, half-hearted way that it is useless.

This drying of the shoot causing a bud to appear is a useful hint to the grower if he cares to take advantage of it. In August if the plants are running too high and no sign of a bud showing, by drying off the plants a few times the tissues of the tender growth harden and a bud will result which might otherwise not have appeared for some time. It will thus be seen that while man may not be able to make the mum do just as he wants it to, he can by watching its peculiarities come reasonably close to it.



CHARLES H. TOTTY.

THE BETTER CUTTING.

Will you please tell me if I take a chrysanthemum cutting and root it now, then later on take the top off and root it, which is the better plant for exhibition purposes? E. L.

The remarks on propagating, in this issue, bear somewhat on this query since the writer will notice that I recommend February propagation for the slower growing varieties. It is largely a matter of head room. It has been proven that, all other things being equal, a cutting rooted in February or March produces a deeper, more solid flower than will a cutting rooted in June, since it has so much longer to grow and mature. Either of the cuttings would produce equally good flowers if properly cared for, the fact of one being a top from the other being immaterial.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

TREATMENT FOR BEAUTIES.

When there is a protracted period of dull weather Beauties are inclined to run to wood rather than forming flower buds and to stop or prevent this condition requires a deal of skill and careful watching. Great care must be taken not to give too much water, as this encourages the habit, and still greater care is needed not to feed too liberally, especially with nitrogenous matter. As a prevention they should be run on the dry side until the flower buds begin to form, when water can again be given freely.

To encourage the setting of buds and discourage rank growth a topdressing of wood ashes can be used but as this is a very concentrated food it has to be used sparingly at first application, one bushel being sufficient for 300 square feet of bench. This can be alternated every three or four weeks by an application of bone meal and as the days lengthen the quantity can be gradually increased.

I have frequently under such conditions used liquid ammonia with success but as this chemical is very quick in its action it requires to be used with caution. For a first application, one gallon of ammonia diluted with seventy-five gallons of water is about the strength that can be used with safety, and only on bright days, once in two weeks.

As the plants get accustomed to this class of food the strength can be gradually increased till the proportion would be one gallon of ammonia to fifty gallons of water.

With the advance of spring, growth will naturally become rank and greater care and attention should be given to keeping the stems neatly tied up, so that they may not become crooked, which greatly detracts from their value.

If the foliage becomes too dense, shutting out the light from the surface of the soil, a judicious thinning of the foliage close to the bench is beneficial, as this allows a free passage of air allowing the leaves to become dry by sundown and has a tendency to prevent black spot and other troubles. RIBES.

AVERAGE PRODUCTION.

How much should 600 Brides and Maids produce from November 1 to May 1, plants that were benched in June and reached the height of three feet by November 1, free of mildew? We plant 15x15 inches and carry at a night temperature of 56 to 58 degrees, with 65 to 70 degrees on cloudy days and 75 to 80 degrees on bright days. C. L.

Roses planted in June and skilfully handled should produce during the period stated an average of twenty-seven blooms per plant, including all grades. In some soils they can be made to do even better than this. RIBES.

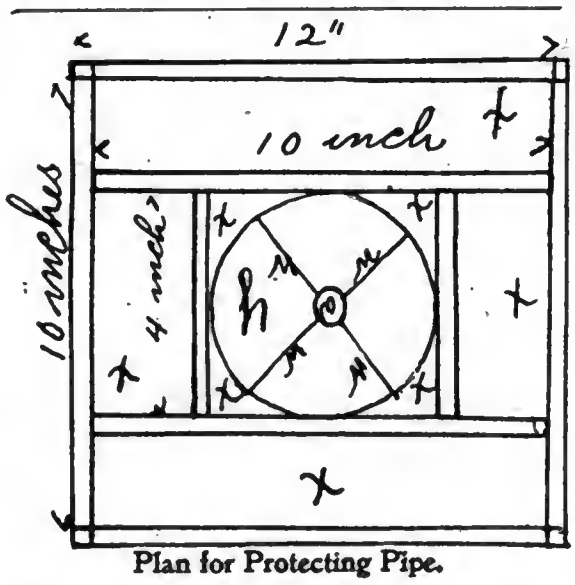
TEMPERATURE.

We would like to know the temperature required for gaining the best results in growing American Beauties and also for Brides and Bridesmaids. V.

The most suitable temperature for Brides and Maids is 56 degrees during the night. Day temperature can range from 62 degrees during cloudy weather to 80 degrees in bright sunshine. Beauties give best results at 58 to 60 degrees night temperature, with much the same temperature as Brides and Maids during the day.

These figures are not arbitrary, as many growers produce good stock at higher temperatures than this, but the conservative grower who studies the general health of his stock will find that by abiding by these figures and ventilating judiciously good results will follow. RIBES.

CARRYING STOCK OVER.



This is only my second winter as a florist and consequently I don't "know it all" as yet, though I have had fair success with my carnations and roses. What I want to know is this: Could I carry over my roses for another year by drying off in June and then simply water once or twice a week till August, prune, remove part of the soil, replacing with new compost, and start afresh? Of course by omitting daily syringing, the red spider would come, but would not this be removed in great part by the pruning? I have other things to attend to in the summer and can do no work in the greenhouse. Could I get some young stock in June, teas and Beauties, repot in 6-inch and plunge to the rims outdoors, mulching to keep moist, and plant in the benches in August? My rose house is only a small one, and I want to start up in the fall with as little expense as possible. F. D. B.

These roses can be carried over another season with good results by the method suggested. The greatest care has to be taken in the drying off process, so that the young wood and foliage must never be allowed to wilt, nor must spider be allowed to destroy the leaves, as these are quite as essential to the well-being of the plant at this period as at any other time.

Seeing that you cannot attend to the houses during summer, the plan you suggest may succeed with young stock but the care and work required would be more than young stock would need if planted in the bench and cared for in the usual manner and good results by the latter method would be more certain. RIBES.

TO PROTECT WATER PIPES.

In telling how to protect water pipes from freezing I am speaking from actual experience with a 60-foot standpipe under a tank and also with another tank only thirty-two feet high. Both of these pipes are 1½-inch. We tried several methods, and found the present plan entirely satisfactory. It may seem at first rather expensive, but such a job to be improperly done is much more expensive, as we have found by experience. The diagram will show just how we do it. Make a 4-inch pipe of heavy galvanized iron in sections like stove pipe, each made to slip over the next. Every second section should have four copper wires run through holes in the pipe on four sides and opposite to each other and the wire soldered on the outside, also solder the holes up tight. As you put each section on fasten these wires so the water pipe is in the middle of the galvanized pipe. If inconvenient to disconnect your water pipe to slip these pipes over the top, then crimp and fasten at top and bottom with small short stove bolts, screw heads on the outside. Then put the boards on as shown in the diagram. Be sure always to break joints. Do not wrap the pipes with anything; leave them bare. Paper and asbestos get wet in summer and freeze in winter. Do not try to keep the water from freezing in the pipes by letting water run through them; it will not work under most conditions. Unless the water is very warm in the tank it will form ice and freeze quicker running than if not running. If you have a windmill to supply the water by letting the water run and also the mill you will be all right, but any other kind of a supply will not be satisfactory. I use a gasoline engine and pump every night just before going to bed for a few minutes, and had no trouble during the last severe winter. The other tank is supplied by a ram, and the water is so cold coming from the ram that it will often freeze while the ram is working. With this style of protection you have an advantage over any other method, as by setting a lamp under the box you can thaw the worst kind of a freeze out in a very short time.

The heat gets direct at the pipe, and very quickly lets the ice loose, and there is no possible danger from fire, because the iron pipes are protection. Before putting up the pipes it is best to paint them with white lead and oil, which will keep them from rusting for many years. A lamp set in this box on the severest night in the coldest climates will absolutely prevent freezing. The chimney of the lamp should be made of tin, and should be eight to ten inches long, and fit tightly through a hole in a piece of tin under the box. Brush the wick every day and put in a new wick every month. A lamp with a ½-inch wick is large enough. You will only need the lamp during extremely cold nights.

In the diagram A is the water pipe and W are wires to hold the pipe in center; circle is galvanized iron pipe four inches in diameter. Rest are one-inch boards carefully trued. Paper should be put under every joint, and two thicknesses would be better. It acts as an air-tight washer. Numerous XX represent the several dead air spaces; Y is inner dead-air space, which can be warmed when necessary.—Rural New Yorker.

WITH BOSTON GROWERS.

Patten & Co., Tewksbury.

Among the largest and best growers for the Boston market is the well-known firm of Patten & Co., Tewksbury, situated quite near Almont and Tewksbury Center stations on the Boston and Maine railroad. Carnations are the great specialty here; in fact, little else is handled. The houses are mostly roomy, of quite modern construction, and everything on the place is kept clean and inviting. In white varieties, Lady Bountiful looks splendid, being a mass of bloom and buds. This sort is well liked and will be retained. Mr. Patten's son says indoor culture or early lifting is necessary for best results. A batch of The Belle looked remarkably well and if Lady Bountiful were away would be considered an acquisition. White Lawson will also be grown again in quantity. As seen here it is a wonderful producer, flowers perfectly pure also. The Queen and Boston Market both looked well, the former if anything carrying the heavier crop.

Dorothy Whitney is the only yellow grown. It succeeds wonderfully well, being loaded with fine blooms. In dark pinks Lawson and Nelson Fisher are grown. The latter was better here than we have previously seen it. Mr. Patten says he will discard Lawson in favor of it next season. In light pinks Enchantress is grown in quantity and appeared invincible. Some Fair Maid are also grown, but was producing less freely than Enchantress. Quite a number of Flamingo are being grown. It will be dropped, however, not being found at all profitable. The most prolific scarlet is J. H. Manley, but it does not come up to the ideal scarlet by any means. Crusader is classed as of no value, lacking in stem and number of blooms.

Mrs. M. A. Patten, as grown here, is superb, a batch of 5,000 plants bristling with buds and blooms. The sportiveness of this variety was evidenced by a considerable batch of the pink sport, which, when it becomes reliably fixed, should be valuable. A very distinct and pleasing sport with lavender blue markings was also noted. Variegated Lawson was being propagated for another season's trial. Judge Hinsdale is not considered of much value. Sensation, while small, was of a rather pleasing color. Daheim and President are grown as crimsons, the former being the favorite, its principal fault being coming short-stemmed early in the season.

A considerable batch of seedlings are under trial, some of which are very promising. One of which a considerable batch is grown and which has recently been figured in the REVIEW is The Mikado (Roosevelt x Prosperity) the markings being deeper than in Prosperity. It has a stiff, wiry stem which holds the flowers erect and is much more floriferous than Prosperity. The propagating house was filled to repletion with excellent stock. A nice batch of Cypripedium insigne was noted. Some fine pieces of C. villosum were in flower, one carrying twenty-five flowers.

Two sons of M. A. Patten assist in the business and are equally as enthusiastic carnationists. Flowers from this establishment are handled by Thomas F. Galvin, in Boston.

Albert Roper, Tewksbury.

A short walk from Patten & Co.'s brings us to A. Roper's, a plant of considerable size. Here the well known and popular Fair Maid carnation originated. As grown by Mr. Roper it is remarkably prolific, with flowers of fine quality. Two benches, which produced so well late into the fall that it seemed too bad to throw them out, were kept over and are still covered with fine flowers. Half of one of the large houses is planted with Chester Roper, a variegated seedling from the same seed pod as Fair Maid (Lawson x Mayor Quincy) and now in its seventh year. The flower is not what can be classed as a fancy, being only of medium size. It is carried on a stiff stem and for productiveness we question if any carnation in America can equal it today. To say that the plants were smothered in bloom expresses it mildly. This variety has not hitherto been introduced, as Mr. Roper said it paid him so well to keep it in his own hands.

Flamingo will not be grown again as a scarlet. Mr. Roper has some promising scarlet seedlings he hopes to get an ideal commercial scarlet from. A good many seedlings are under trial, some of considerable merit. Mr. Roper has several from which he expects to make exhibits at the Boston carnation convention in 1906. With the exception of some Enchantress and Flamingo, practically everything grown here originated on the place. Mr. Roper sells his flowers at the new market in Boston.

M. A. Patten.

Another Tewksbury grower who is coming to the front and who, during the past four year, has built up a nice, compact establishment, is L. E. Small. Carnations are the principal crop here. Lawson does well as a dark pink and will not yet be discarded. Fair Maid is equally good as a light pink. Manley is grown for a scarlet and several benches are devoted to a white seedling which has attracted favorable notice at Horticultural Hall and the public markets during the past two seasons. The flowers are of fine form, never show a trace of color and are carried on very stiff stems. Quite a batch of Variegated Lawson was noticed. It is counted a great producer and will be more largely planted next season. Some long benches of Campbell and Princess of Wales violets were a mass of bloom and looked particularly well. Mr. Small's flowers are sold at the new market, Boston.

MAKING STEAM.

Along the Great Lakes many growers find it their best plan to pick up firemen from among those who are released from their regular employment by the closing of navigation. The man who stokes a marine boiler through the hot days of summer is likely to have the art of making steam down to an exact science. He doesn't shovel any more coal than is necessary and he knows how to hold the steam gauge at the same point for hours at a stretch. And not infrequently such a one has time in the night watch to read the REVIEW. Here is a letter from one of them, dated in a Wisconsin town:

"I cannot see what is the matter with all your firemen. Now I will tell you what I have here and what I do, and any good fireman should do. I am firing a thirty horse-power boiler containing thirty-four 2¾-inch flues ten feet six inches long. The stack is eighteen inches in diameter and thirty feet high. It is a poor boiler and the brickwork is leaky. There is only an 8-inch wall and brick on top of the boiler to keep the heat in. It feeds cold water and it is all returned from the houses. According to the weather I carry from five to thirty pounds of steam and we burn from 1,000 to 2,600 pounds of coal in twenty-four hours. I fire nights. We heat about 11,000 feet of glass and have steam to spare. We could heat another house 100 feet long with two benches. We burn lump coal and my fire lasts from half an hour to three hours, according to the weather, and I have seen it 35 degrees below zero. I clean my flues from one to six times a night and I should not care if the stack were eight feet shorter; I could still have steam to spare and burn any kind of coal or clean stock.

"On page 705, of the Review for February 16, that boiler setting is all right except that the space behind the bridge wall wants to be deeper. Keep the flues cleaned oftener than once in twenty-four hours. I am only a marine fireman off the lakes but I have been firing twenty-five years." L. A. U.

Bayard Thayer, South Lancaster.

William Anderson has a beautifully grown lot of white cyclamens at Bayard Thayer's. The varieties are Sutton's Giant and White Butterfly. Lorraine begonias are also good. In the carnation house Enchantress was easily in the lead. Wolcott was flowering heavily, but a large proportion were coming split. bury bells in 12-inch pots are used for piazza decoration. None of the four fruit divisions had yet been started.

E. V. R. Thayer, South Lancaster.

Seedling orchids are always a prime attraction at E. O. Orpet's, on the E. V. R. Thayer estate. All his plants of seedling cattleyas, lælio-cattleyas and other bi-generic crosses were in fine health. Of Cattleya Thayeriana, quantities of sheaths were pushing. Some of these plants are now in tubs, which they will soon outgrow. A pretty and distinct cross just open was C. intermedia x C. Trianæ, a fine, bold and pleasing flower. C. labiata x L. cinnabarina was good. Lælio-cattleyas C. G. Roebling and Bletchleyensis were in flower. A good cross is L. Perrini x L. cinnabarina. At present Mr. Orpet is working mostly on sophronitis crosses, from which he expects interesting results later.

Odontoglossums are better grown here than elsewhere in America. A span house contained a grand lot of them, hundreds of plants all in the best of health. On O. crispum we noted three spikes coming from a single bulb. Plants now in 6-inch or 8-inch pots and pans will soon need a shift to larger receptacles. These plants are grown warmer than used to be considered advisable, with all possible sun eral others. Orchids here are all grown in pure osmunda fibre, no leaf-mold being used. We noted a batch of Odontoglossum crispum received from Sander & Sons. These were potted in compost of three-fourths English bracken roots and one-fourth English peat over it, but they were not at home in it.

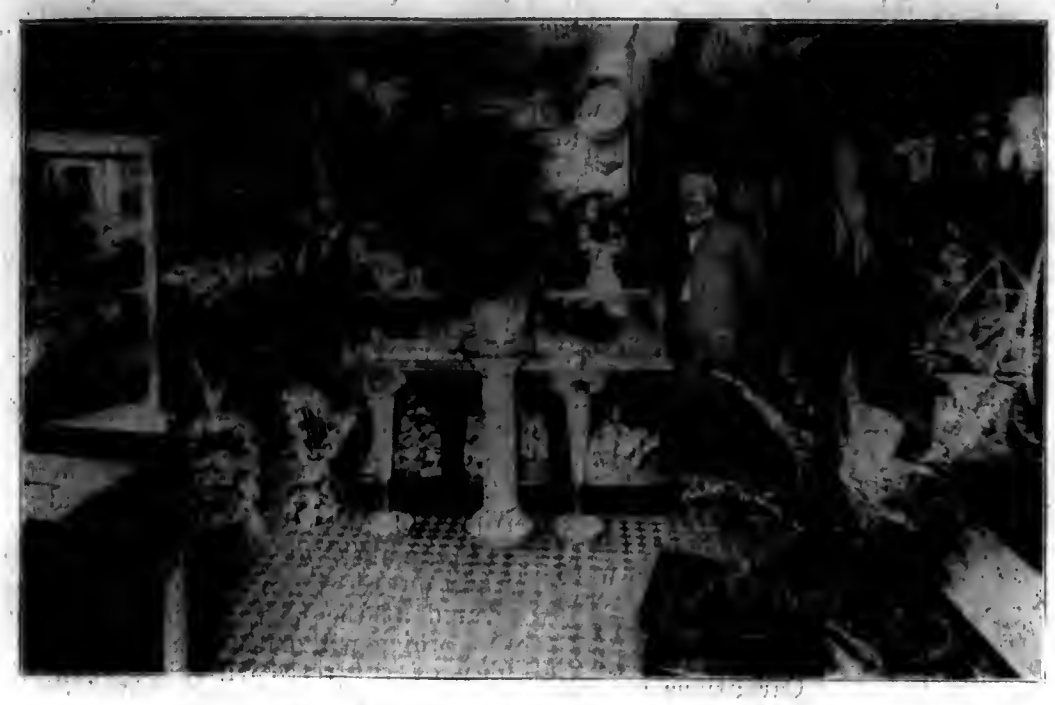
A splendid lot of amaryllis, mostly seedlings, were in flower. Schizanthus in several varieties is grown in quantity. The earliest were just coming into flower. Stock Beauty of Nice, of a delicate shrimp pink color, has the earmarks of a popular commercial variety. A house of roses looked very well. A small lot of Killarney is being tried. Campbell still does well as a double violet. Hydrocyanic acid gas is the popular fumigant with Mr. Orpet just now. The only plants he has hurt with it are some antirrhinums. He finds it especially good for cleaning out mealy bug from dormant graperies. W. N. Craig.

L. K. Peacock.

Lawson will be dropped after this season, as will Flamingo. In the large rose house Brides, Maids and Beauties are mostly grown. A few Killarney are being tried and Mr. Anderson sees good possibilities in it. In the orchid house there was a fine show of Cattleya Trianæ. A number of the specimens are big ones. Quite a few carried five flowers to the sheath. Schizanthus is being tried here. Canter- in winter. This gives the leaves a ruddy hue and makes them tougher and better adapted to standing our hot summers. A batch of seventy-five miltonias somewhat similarly grown were very vigorous. A fine set of yellow forms of Cypripedium insigne were flowering, including such varieties as Sanderæ, Laura Kimball, Dorothy, Ernestii, Statterianum, Joungianum superbum, Brightness, Ballæ and sev-

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.



Despite two holidays this week, the market continues in fair shape. There has been a good deal of shipping, Palm Beach, Fla., coming in for quite a nice lot of stuff. The local demand has also been good, with little change in prices, except in gardenias, which have fallen from $1 to 12½ cents in seven weeks, and now it is rumored that one large concern is likely to cut even this price. A noteworthy feature in the carnation market is an improvement in the demand for ordinary grades. Whites continue to sell better than colored varieties, except the fancies.

The New Dahlia Co.

As announced in the Review exclusively a few weeks ago, L. K. Peacock has completed the incorporation of his new dahlia company. The following details are now for the first time given out: The business was founded by L. K. Peacock in 1885, was purchased by W. P. Peacock in 1892; one half interest was purchased by L. K. Peacock in 1893 and the business continued under the firm name of W. P. Peacock. L. K. Peacock purchased the interest of W. P. Peacock in August, 1904, and the firm name was changed to L. K. Peacock and incorporated as above December 14, 1904. The authorized capital is $50,000. The officers are: L. K. Peacock president, W. P. Peacock vice-president, A. M. Peacock treasurer, G. E. Cain secretary; directors, L. K. Peacock, Ateo, N. J.; W. P. Peacock, Ateo, N. J.; Thomas B. Hall, Camden, N. J.; Samuel S. Pennock, Philadelphia; Adam Schlorer, Berlin, N. J. The many lovers of dahlias will wish Mr. Peacock all success in his broader venture.

Acacia Pubescens.

This beautiful flower is the novelty of the present market. The Leo Niessen Co. has been fortunate in securing the entire stock which is grown by W. & Harry F. Evans, of Rowlandville. They have three large specimens, probably seven feet high and fully twice as broad. They are literally covered with the fine yellow blooms, exquisitely graceful and contrasting harmoniously with the delicate green foliage. These acacias are planted out in the ground and as the growers were afraid of injuring them by moving, it became necessary to rebuild the greenhouse covering them last fall, so as to secure more head room.

A Trip to Bermuda.

J. D. Eisele, the popular vice-president of the H. A. Dreer Co., and Mrs. Eisele have lately returned from a short trip to Bermuda. Mr. Eisele enjoyed the trip immensely. He spoke with admiration of the even temperature, varying scarcely more than a dozen degrees during the eighteen days of his sojourn. The farming appeared to be done on a rather small scale, it being somewhat difficult to realize that the detached fields, never over an acre in size, could produce the respectable aggregate given out in onions and in potatoes. The cultivated fields lie in the hollows between the rocks, where the soil attains a depth of from sixteen to eighteen inches, while above it is scarcely two inches deep, sufficient only for the hardy native growth. Oranges, once a prominent feature on the island, have been abandoned, owing to the attacks of scale, yet curiously enough the oleanders planted there for windbreaks appeared entirely free from scale, while here they are very subject to them. Acalypha marginata is used as a hedge. Some fine specimens of ficus, crotons and pandanus are seen, while the leaves of Cycas revoluta, which attain a great size, are shipped to the New York market. While driving one day Mr. Eisele saw a great rock completely covered with Bougainvillea glabra, its purplish crimson flowers making a display whose gorgeousness he had never seen equaled anywhere. The native driver, however, assured him that when in bloom the poinciana was even more superb.

Various Notes.

F. & H. Mergenthaler are planning an addition of twelve short-span houses in one range at their place in East Washington Lane, Germantown, to be devoted to carnations. It is said that they are also considering the feasibility of securing an even better location for their retail store.

John F. Andre, of Doylestown, is planning a new house about 20x200 to be devoted to Liberties.

W. F. Powell delivered an illustrated lecture on "Farming in the City and School Gardens" before the Philadelphia Horticultural Society on Tuesday afternoon.

Thomas Meehan & Sons are sending some nice snapdragons to the Flower Market.

Edward Reid was the first to introduce the system of ticketing each consignor's flowers into the commission business in this city. He has steadily followed this plan and also that of weekly statements. Mr. Reid realizes that good stuff costs more to produce than poor, or, as he aptly puts it, "labor is cheap and brains come high," so he does all in his power to secure best returns for choice stock.

Albert Woltemate is sending nice freesia to the Flower Market.

S. S. Pennock had some heavy orders for Palm Beach on Monday.

Harry Crawford is sending in some nice carnations, including Queen Louise, from the greenhouse at Secane.

A. Hall, of Atco, N. J., has been sending some good carnations, including Queen Louise and Joost, to S. S. Pennock.

Mrs. Sarah I. Smith, of Secane, is sending some special bunches of single violets to the Flower Market, which are unexcelled for quality and size.

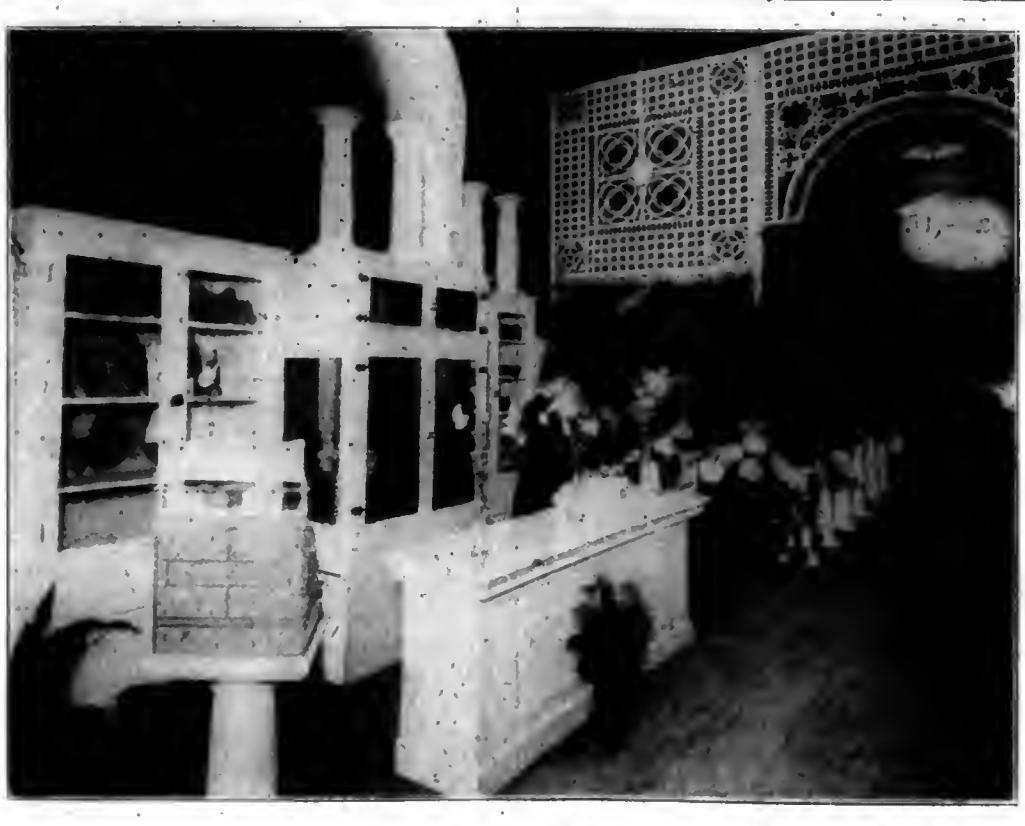
A telegraphic order from the south reached the Cut Flower Co. at 10:52 p. m. the other day. The stock was in the 11:05 p. m. train, just thirteen minutes later. Mr. Muth says it is their record.

Both A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., and Paul M. Pierson, of Scarborough, N. Y., were in this city not long ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Leonard Grant announce the marriage of their daughter, Elizabeth, to James E. Olive, on January 29, at Overlook, Soquel, Cal.

Henry S. Pennock is shipping Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri from Florida to his brother, S. S. Pennock.

PHIL.



It has been decided by the committee having the matter in charge that the next meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, to be held Tuesday, March 7, will be rose night. The members of the Florists' Club are anxious to see all the novelties among roses that are likely to become popular. All those having such are invited to bring them to this meeting, or if it will be impossible to do so, kindly forward same by express prepaid in care of David Rust, Horticultural Hall, Broad street, Philadelphia, Pa. P. J. Lynch, secretary and treasurer of The Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., will deliver a paper on "Some Notes on the Newer Roses," at this meeting. EDWIN LONSDALE, Sec'y.

AT SALT LAKE CITY.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph taken in the store of Richard E. Evans at Salt Lake City, Utah. Mr. Evans started in business in 1892 with a capital of $65 and a determination to succeed. He now has a range of 25,000 feet of glass and a very satisfactory business.

A MICHIGAN STORE.

The accompanying illustration shows a portion of the store of Henry M. Burt, at Battle Creek, Mich., opened last September. He makes use of pedestals for everything, even for the cash register, having fifty at times in use. Mr. Burt is doing a nice business in this white enameled room. Chrysanthemums were in season when the photo was made.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Activity in the cut flower trade was curtailed somewhat by the cold and stormy weather prior to February 18, still a fair business was reported. On February 14 exceptionally good trade was done, especially in violets for valentines. Shipping trade is also active and some orders for fancy stock had to be turned down owing to scarcity. A number of social events the past week kept some of the west end stores quite busy. Funeral work was pretty well distributed among the trade, everybody having some of this to do, which made white flowers in big demand.

In colored roses the market is fairly well supplied, but white roses were very scarce. There were more red roses than the demand called for. American Beauties have had a good call, but there were enough for all. Carnations are all of good quality and plenty, except in white. These sold clean every day. In the colored sorts quite a few were left over each day.

Bulbous stock, such as Romans, Paper Whites, freesias, Dutch hyacinths, lily of the valley and Von Sions are in abundance. Harrisii and callas are not overplentiful at present, as the demand is good. Tulips are also selling well but only the light colors. White sweet peas are fine, with long stems. All greens are in demand at their usual price.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Weber, their daughter and Theo. Miller will make a European trip this summer, leaving here June 1. They will return in time to attend the S. A. F. convention at Washington in August.

Mrs. Frank M. Ellis left Sunday morning for Milwaukee with a party of lady bowlers to take part in the games there this week in the National Bowling Congress. Mrs. Ellis has hopes of bringing back one of the many prizes offered to lady bowlers. Arthur Ellison is on one of the strongest teams which represent St. Louis at Milwaukee this week.

Frank M. Ellis is handling extra fine California violets by the tens of thousands. These are cleaned out fairly well each day.

Charles Kuehn is receiving an extra fine supply of Dutch hyacinths and La Reine tulips, which have a big demand.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers has been very busy the past week with all kinds of floral work and decorations. No wonder Charlie is sporting a new gold watch.

George Waldbart is making an extra fine display of blooming plants, also fancy cut carnations. Whenever we call, Mr. Waldbart is always busy.

The Riessen Floral Co. had an extra busy week with funeral work. Mr. Buechel, the manager, is still confined to his room, nursing his broken limb. He expects to be back to work by March 15.

Fred Foster has renovated his store the past week. The improvement gives him more room, of which he was very much in need.

John Burke, at Grand and Finney avenues, reports a good trade in fruit and cut flowers.

J. F. Windt, on Bayard avenue, is making a great display of fancy cut stock and blooming plants in his attractive conservatory.

John G. Knoll, in South St. Louis, was doing jury duty the past week. He surprised the jury, judge and the attorneys by decorating everybody in the court room, including the defendant, with a carnation. The daily press made quite a story of it.

George M. Kessler, the landscape artist, proposed to the city council a girdle of parks from Carondelet to the Chain of Rocks. Mr. Kessler also declared that St. Louis appropriated far too little money for its parks.

George Windler, on Delore avenue, is making preparations for an extra fine lot of blooming plants for Easter sales. He put in his first appearance at the Florists' Club meeting since his marriage and his many friends in the trade were delighted to meet him.

A number of very important questions on roses are already in to be answered at the next Florists' Club meeting, which will be March 9. A big display of cut roses will be on exhibition, also new varieties. Fifty dollars in prizes are being offered. A very interesting and instructive meeting for both grower and retailer is looked for.

Fred C. Weber, Theo. Miller and E. W. Guy, trustees of the Florists' Club, and Otto Koenig met on Saturday at Ellis' place. A full report of this meeting will be read at the club meeting. This will be of interest to all the members.

Fred Meinhardt left for Fort Wayne, Ind., on Sunday to attend the funeral of Mr. Vesey's brother.

Visitor: B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia.

Bowling.

The Lady Florists' Bowling Club rolled on last Thursday at the Cass avenue alleys. The scores were as follows:

CORRUGATED GLASS.

In answer to S. C. T., in last week's issue of the REVIEW, in which he asks as to the practical benefit derived from corrugated glass, I will state that I had one year's experience with that variety of glass and want no more. I had one house under my care, 18x50, in which I planted carnations and was so thoroughly disgusted with my experiment that I threw them out and filled my benches with begonias and ferns, which did first rate. In my endeavors to see what would grow thriftily there I tried a great many varieties of plants and found it a failure with the exception of the two named above.

F. A. B.

A STRONGER ASPARAGUS.

In my large house of Asparagus plumosus nanus I have one plant entirely different from all others, the growth being very robust and the plant branching, and each branch making regular fronds or plumes, the branches being three and four feet in length. My plant has been out about eight months and has filled four strings fourteen feet in length and extends on the roof several feet, foliage rich dark green. Could this be the so-called robustus? The original seed came from Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Conditions showed a distinct improvement the past week, on one or two days hardly a flower remaining unsold. The weather has continued very cold, but fortunately snow has kept away. Roses have been in quite brisk demand, the best grades fetching higher prices. Some select Beauties have made up to $65. There has been a scarcity of Brides, the very finest making $25. The popular priced stock at $10 to $12 has cleared out quickly, there being a heavy demand for funeral work. Bridesmaids have held previous quotations. Carnations are very little changed in price, continuing to sell well.

Violets have made 30 to 50 cents, except for extra select stock, which went at 75 cents. Daffodils have been the greatest surprise in the market. Prices on these have advanced to $3, with no surplus. These flowers seem to catch the popular fancy this season. Other years they have been rather a drug. Lilies, callas, valley and other flowers, as well as green goods, remain about the same.

Various Notes.

Dr. George T. Moore, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, delivered an exhaustive and most instructive lecture on "Bacteria as Fertilizers" before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on February 18. He had a large audience, which seemed to take a keen interest in his talk, and in the views on the screen which illustrated the difference between inoculated and uninoculated crops, which showed clearly the value of these beneficial bacteria under certain conditions.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club meeting on February 21 was once more a very successful one. The lecture by W. W. Rawson on the increased output of vegetables under glass during the past twenty-five years and the large additional productiveness of the houses was very interesting. A more extended report must wait for our next issue.

We inadvertently omitted mention of A. Roper's fine vase of Chester Roper carnation in our last issue. At the same exhibition Backer & Co. showed a vase of a fine seedling yellow variety.

Quite a number of the craft have visited Fairhaven this week to see the annual exhibition in the Winsor greenhouses, where Peter Murray has charge. All where delighted with what they saw.

Prospects are good for the approaching show of the American Rose Society, which opens on March 22. The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will entertain visiting members at a banquet at the Copley Square Hotel.

James Farquhar, who has been in Porto Rico for some time, hopes to return to Boston early in April. He hopes to return there each winter for a few months. He has planted a large quantity of bulbous stock on land secured there, including the Lilium Philippinense they are introducing next fall, and all are doing finely.

The members of the Seed Trade Bowling League, which comprises the firms of Schlegel & Fottler, Farquhar & Co., Joseph Breck & Son and W. W. Rawson & Co., held their annual banquet on February 21 under the presidency of William E. Cahill. It was an enjoyable and highly successful affair. President Cahill was the subject of a highly complimentary illustrated sketch in the last issue of the Boston Sunday American.

Carbone, on Boylston street, is showing some fine Phaius grandifolius and some excellent Azalea mollis.

McMulkin had a very effective yellow window the past week, using genistas, acacias, tulips, narcissi, English primroses, carnations and roses.

Morse & Gomperts have opened a new store on Tremont street in close proximity to Keith's new theatre.

Galvin had the decorations for the ball given by Mrs. H. P. Quincy for her debutante daughter at the Somerset Hotel on February 17. The prettiest effect was in the supper room, where each of the forty tables had a basket of flowers, no two of which were alike.

Narcissi which are chiefly grown for our market are Trumpet Major, Von Sion (double), Henry Irving, Golden Spur, princeps and poeticus ornatus. Princeps does not take so well as the other sorts. Emperor, Horsfieldii and other sorts are not in evidence yet.

J. A. Pettigrew has been quite seriously sick, but we are glad to report is now much improved. W. N. CRAIG.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

A few days of bright and moderate weather have produced a very appreciable effect in greenhouse crops. There are many more roses than the market has seen in weeks and prices have taken a drop, although strictly fancy stock is still bringing good figures. Beauties are the one item of which it can be said that there is not an ample supply, as crops are now pretty well off. Bride is a little less plentiful than Bridesmaid but there is enough good stock of each so that low grades have lost half their value. The receipts of carnations have increased materially and very fine stock is now selling at moderate prices, with a considerable quantity of pink hanging fire and selling at cheap rates in job lots. The Greek venders are now retailing carnations at 15 cents per dozen. The scarcity of Harrisii is a thing of the past, for receipts are now large, but the quality is not up to the standard. There are plenty of fine callas. The receipts of La Reine tulips are heavy and prices low considering the high quality of stock. Good red and yellow tulips sell fairly well. Paper Whites are again in heavy supply and immovable. There are large quantities of bulbous stock in pans offered for the retailers and most of them make this class of material a feature of their window decorations. Violets are not coming in as heavily as a few days ago, but are more than equal to all requirements. Some fancy mignonette is offered. There are green goods for all requirements, smilax being of particularly good quality. Common ferns are advancing in price.

Trade was fair at the end of last week and Monday saw a better demand, although the increase was not so great as the increase in receipts, but Tuesday was dull and the accumulation will be hard to work off as long as fine, warm weather holds; several days of it will mean a glut.

Jensen Enters Business.

J. E. Jensen, formerly grower for the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., and J. S. Dekema on February 17 bought the establishment of Matson & Kron, 631 West Foster avenue. The plant consists of six houses, about 48,000 feet of glass, built less than two years ago and thoroughly modern in every respect. The place is planted with up-to-date varieties of carnations and the new owners, who will do business as Jensen & Dekema, will make a specialty of carnation cuttings and fancy blooms. The plant has been in charge of Mr. Dekema as grower. He, like Mr. Jensen, is a graduate of Peter Fisher's school of carnation culture and was with Mr. Jensen at Thompson's for a short time. The former proprietors were among those who entered the field a couple of years ago under the impression that cut flower growing was a quick road to wealth. They have found that the receipt of the commission man's check is not exactly like getting money from home, but have made a splendid opportunity for two young men brought up in the business.

Since leaving the Thompson place Mr. Jensen has made a western trip, visiting Denver, Salt Lake City, Ogden, San Francisco, Seattle, Spokane and St. Paul. At each place he visited the leading growers. He says that there is good stock everywhere but that Chicago has transportation facilities which make it the only place for a wholesale business.

Market for Bulbous Stock.

Last season it was very certain that the market for bulbous stock was unprofitable but better things were hoped for this spring because of the retirement of Frank Garland, the largest grower, from this field of activity. Very fine tulips are now coming in but the price is little if any better than last year; probably the only change in conditions is that last year there was a bad glut and this year the adjective may be omitted. Yet the visiting Dutchmen report business good; or are they only whistling to keep up their courage?

A Contraction of Credit.

Those recent bankruptcy proceedings, the Lutey case in Michigan and the Klingbiel case in Iowa, coupled with the unexpected Winandy matter, although the latter did not affect the wholesalers, has had the effect of causing a contraction of credits. Losses through business failures have been so few in recent years that credits were easy, but it's different now and even those who are somewhat new to the experience are being asked to pay up.

Iron Gutters in Favor.

George M. Garland reports orders for iron gutter to date aggregating 14,000 feet, of which 6,000 feet is for one order to replace wooden gutter only five years old. This is the Peter Reinberg job, Mr. Reinberg figuring that the space gained by the use of the iron gutter will quickly pay for the cost of rebuilding. Mr. Garland says inquiries in hand indicate that this will be his best season to date.

Various Notes.

Wednesday, Washington's birthday, was a legal holiday, but as the postoffice neglected to send out an announcement, it was generally overlooked until the one mail delivery of the day arrived. A good many orders failed of delivery until the next day.

Z. Wolniewicz, on School street, has been troubled by boys breaking his greenhouse glass. Hearing the glass crash one day this week he seized his gun and fired at the fleeing miscreants, with the result that it took the doctor an hour to pick the bird shot out of one of them.

Emil Buettner has not yet determined what he will do in regard to rebuilding this season. He will tear down from five to nine old houses and will put up eight new and larger ones.

On February 15 E. C. Amling obtained judgment for $124.50 against T. D. Mosconesotes.

N. J. and Henry Wietor are active in the management of the approaching bazaar of the new St. Henry's church at High Ridge, to which Henry Wietor donated $7,000 for the building fund.

E. F. Winterson Co. is getting in some Lilium speciosum rubrum which sell well, a leading retailer using them in some fine work the other day when he could not get orchids.

Ernest Weber will drop roses next year and plant his whole place to carnations, having already bought the necessary cuttings of George Reinberg.

George Muno is proud of a baby boy who arrived February 6.

A. L. Randall Co. reports a big out of town call for fancy mignonette, several recent orders calling for from 100 to 200 spikes.

J. A. Budlong is still cutting heavily of Brides and Maids. He has had a very successful season.

E. H. Hunt reports eastern violets coming in in extra good shape. Their supply department is again quite active.

J. A. Evans, of Richmond, was in town last week and among other orders he took was that of Bassett & Washburn for thirty ventilating machines for their new range.

The Garfield Park Floral Co., which is the principal local source of supply for flowering plants for Christmas and Easter, will enlarge its facilities this season by erecting several greenhouses.

The Butler Floral Co., in the Old Colony building, is opening a branch store in the First National Bank building, a very good location.

At the Florists' Club meeting tonight E. G. Routzahn is to deliver an address "How to Make Chicago Beautiful," with special reference to the florists' interests. He speaks for the Bureau of Civic Co-operation and will illustrate his remarks with the stereopticon. The committee has invited the club members to bring friends and ladies.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market demonstrates a livelier condition since Saturday and, while prices remain on the low level of the past week, the activity and increased demand leave little stock unsold. The milder weather also has helped to change the conditions, creating the usual street outlet for the surplus and establishing normal supply and demand. The intense cold remained with us until Saturday. Business that day was very satisfactory. Monday a rising temperature and snow, turning to rain in the evening, brought a continuance of Saturday's improvement. The tide has turned.

Carnations and violets do not appreciate in value, for the supply of each is excessive, but by means of severe cuts and concessions, the bulk of the shipments now are cleanly disposed of. Bulbous stock is very abundant. A great many Harrisii are with the wholesalers and as low as $5 per hundred was accepted for the week's surplus. The orchid shipments are lessening and prices hardening.

Various Notes.

MeManus is handling Crisis, the fine red carnation from J. L. Dillon, of Bloomsburg, Pa.

Fenrich is receiving an average of 1,000 bunches of sweet peas daily, of splendid quality. Mr. Fenrich has just recovered from a severe attack of grippe. Mr. Hurrell, of Summit, is the latest battler with the disease. Few of the wholesalers have escaped.

John Scott has finished serving his country as a juryman and is again devoting his energies to the interests of Scottii to meet the demand for which, new houses are to be constructed this spring.

Young & Nugent are handling large quantities of gardenias, samples of which were seen at the last club meeting.

N. Lceakes has started for an important visit to Greece, to be absent until the first of May. John A. Foley will have entire charge of his business interests until his return.

Herman Maenner, of Bayside, had an encounter with a trolley car last week that laid him on the shelf a few days.

The busy season down town and among the seedhouses is already in evidence. The early demand through catalogues is unprecedented. H. H. Berger & Co. announce a rapidly increasing trade since the incorporation of their business, the outlook exceeding anything at this date in their history. B. Suzuki is back from Japan, with interesting stories of the war. Boddington in the east and Bunyard in the west are meeting with great success, their seed business especially booming "far beyond expectations," as Mr. Begbie expresses it.

A. L. Miller, of Brooklyn, is having two houses 16x100 built this spring by Lord & Burnham Co. at his Jamaica place, where he has also thirteen acres devoted to the nursery business. His importations of European stock this season will be heavy. He is arranging for a large stock of his new dahlia, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, for which a demand is already in evidence.

W. C. Kriek, the inventor and manufacturer, is now well established in his new quarters at 1164 Greene avenue, Brooklyn. He numbers among his patrons all the great supply houses of the country. His new factory has all the modern improvements.

Bowling.

The Bowling Club has again changed its hour of practice and hereafter bowling will begin at 7 p. m. on Mondays. The match with Hoboken will be bowled on the Hoboken alleys Saturday, March 4. The storm and unsatisfactory hour kept the attendance low on Monday. The scores were:

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Otto Hiersekorn suffered the loss of $300 February 17 through fire which resulted from the explosion of a can of gasoline in his flower store.

BRISTOL, VT.—L. Merton Gage has discontinued his plant business and will devote all his time to his retail seed business and to the growing of gladioli for the trade.

PIPING.

I have two houses forty feet long, attached, without partition wall, both ridges seven feet high and board side walls four feet high. One house is ten and one-half feet wide, the other twelve and one-half feet. Along the end is a shed 10x30 feet which continues into another greenhouse 10x30, eight feet to ridge and side walls eight feet high. I want to heat with 2-inch flows under the ridges and 1¼-inch returns. How many pipes will it take with the weather conditions of New Jersey? G. W. H.

The two attached houses, if heated bv hot water at 180 degrees, with a 2-inch flow pipe under each ridge will require twenty 1¼-inch pipes arranged in coils under the benches of the houses. If steam at five pounds pressure is used and a 2-inch riser placed under each ridge, fifteen 1¼-inch pipes will be necessary under the benches. The side house 10x30 will require a 2-inch riser and eleven 1¼-inch returns if water is used and a 2-inch riser and nine returns if steam is used. L. C. C.

PIPING AND BOILER.

I have a greenhouse 16x32 feet, ten feet to the ridge, side walls and gables wood. I should like to heat this with a Wilks hot water boiler 20x30 and require 60 degrees in zero weather. The boiler has openings for 2-inch pipes. How many flows and how many returns will it take? Will this boiler be large enough for two such houses? It is rated at 250 to 300 feet of radiation. J. K.

Each of the houses 16x32 feet should have ten runs of 2-inch pipes, i. e., 320 feet of 2-inch pipe, properly arranged to provide heat during severe weather. If the piping is to be placed on the side walls or under the side benches it would be a good plan to run a 2-inch riser or flow pipe from the boiler to the far end of the house under each side bench and there divide it to return in four 2-inch returns. This will provide a coil of five pipes under each of the side benches, or ten pipes in all. Two houses this size will require a boiler capable of providing heat for 450 to 500 feet of radiation. A boiler with 250 to 300 feet would be sufficient for one of the houses and during mild weather should carry both. L. C. C.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

WESTERN nurserymen think prospects brighter than usual for this season.

IN the year 1904 the United States exported apples to the value of $6,712,557.

THE business of shipping forest seedlings has grown to be a large one in several sections of the south and west.

THE envelope bringing the catalogue of the Wm. H. Moon Co., Morrisville, Pa., advises that the contents is the "Horticultural Art Book."

IT develops that there are more plants of Crimson Rambler rose than were thought to be available by those who hoped for a stiffening in prices.

THERE will be no shortage in the ordinary varieties of peony next season, and some which are thought pretty good sorts here are to be had at low prices in France.

IN Georgia fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas is now required, whether the stock is home grown or imported with the certificate of a state which does not require fumigation.

IT does not look as though there could be any shortage in peachtrees this season, although there are reports of some very large planting operations by orchardists. Elberta still has a big lead in popularity.

J. H. HALE says that because of its carliness, combined with other good qualities, Hiley has been the best money-making peach he has grown. He has taken thousands of trees of other varieties and budded them over to Hiley.

NURSERYMEN who have built storage houses above ground have found that one air space generally necessitated artificial heat to keep the frost out, while two or three air spaces, with the same thickness of wall, proved impervious to frost.

WM. A. PETERSON returned to Chicago February 17 after two months spent in California, where he left his family. He was recalled by a condemnation suit of the Drainage Board, set for hearing this week. The canal people want a strip 300 feet wide through the nursery.

RIVER VIEW NURSERIES

California privet is in large supply all over the country, but is also in large demand.

George Thomas, nurseryman, Sheffield, Ill., will sell out and remove to the State of Washington.

Commenting on the opinion expressed at the National Council of Horticulture, at St. Louis last November, that wise publicity would be of great value to the interests there represented, it is worthy of note that the same idea has maintained for several years in the American Association of Nurserymen. A few years ago a standing committee on publicity was authorized, but it has never accomplished anything of value to the trade. The present chairman is Ralph T. Olcott, of Rochester.

THE SCHIZOPHRAGMA.

I was much interested in the illustration and note, in the issue of February 9, on Schizophragma hydrangeoides growing at the A. W. Blake estate at Brookline, Mass. I well remember planting this specimen, as referred to, at the base of an oak tree in the spring of 1893, the plant then being two years old and very small. During my stay on the place I watched that plant and coaxed it to grow but it never would make a good start. Credit is due Mr. Wild for the thoughtfulness to remove it to a location at the foot of the walnut, where conditions better suited its needs, and I am glad to see it in such a flourishing condition. It is quite rare in the eastern states. It will be noted that the plant is not so old as Mr. Wild thought. Samuel J. Trepess.

Now is the Time to Plant Lily Bulbs

For Forcing for Decoration Day.

WE HAVE IN COLD STORAGE the FOLLOWING JAPAN LONGIFLORUM, all in first-class condition which we offer at very low prices:

THE LILAC WEST.

"If one should ask the ordinary observer how many kinds there are," writes C. S. Harrison, "he would answer three, the common purple and white and the Persian. There are over 130 kinds now in cultivation, and the number is increasing by hybridizing. Why this great family of hardy ornamentals has been ignored and neglected all these years, it is hard to understand, for they are exactly what is needed to cheer up the great northwest. They are among the hardiest things we have, and there is hardly one in the large collection but what will thrive in Manitoba. The time of flowering reaches from early spring till about the first of July, and the variety of foliage is something wonderful, varying from the large corrugated leaves of Bretschneideri to the delicate foliage of Pekinensis and the feathery leaves of the cut-leaved Persian. We have secured a photograph of half a dozen kinds to show the rich variety. In color the blossoms range from snowy white to purple, and if you have a good collection you will have continuous bloom till the last of June. Vulgaris is the kind generally used in the west, but from my own experience at the York Experiment Station, I would recommend all the Persians, the two Rothomagensis, Bretschneideri, Josikæa, the Emodi, green and variegated; Villosa, Charles X, pyramidalis, Senator Volland, Glori d' Croncles, ligustrina, and the two tree lilacs."

BEST STRAWBERRIES.

Please give me a list of the best twelve varieties of strawberries for planting this spring. B. F. C.

Assuming that the subscriber wants the berries for home use, as no man would be likely to want twelve varieties for market, we would name: Climax, Heflin and Marshall for early, Kittie Rice, Margaret, Miller, Senator Dunlap and Wm. Belt for medium, and Klondike, President, Sample and Uncle Jim for late. M. C.

sidered venture into that field by the conviction that the future of this department of the trade would not warrant the investment necessary to get recognition for a new house.

THIS is fine weather for the onion set shipper and it pleases the buyer at the other end.

A BILL providing for the inspection of the sale of seeds is being actively opposed by Canadian seedsmen.

THERE is a brisk demand for gladioli in Holland and all sorts will clear nicely despite the very good crop last year.

THE Globe varieties of onion seed are thought scarce enough to warrant advanced prices, judging from late quotations.

THE agricultural appropriation bill, with its provision for free seed distribution in 1906, is held up by a dispute between the House and Senate.

THE Dutch bulb growers fear injury to crops by the partial uncovering of the fields by high winds before the time for thinning the winter cover had arrived.

THE total value of seeds imported in the year 1904 was $3,394,084 according to figures of the United States Department of Commerce. In the same period we exported seeds to the value of $2,257,085.

THE general magazines are not carrying so much space in seed advertisements as in past seasons. One house found, after considerable study of results, that requests for catalogues cost, from advertising in the monthlies of general circulation, about 50 cents each, to which was to be added cost of book and postage. First orders from names so obtained averaged about $1.25 each and only a fraction of the inquiries resulted in orders, evidence that the parties had written at the same time for catalogues from several houses, manifestly unprofitable all around. This house now gets its new names principally by a circular to customers offering to send a packet of sweet peas free in return for the addresses of ten neighbors who have gardens. The value of these names will probably be determined within the next ninety days.

Nutting & Sons.

This house is one of long standing. A. M. Flanagan who established the house was a traveler for a firm known as Warner & Warner, and he took into partnership Messrs. Chubb and Nutting. Mr. Chubb presently retired and the firm became known as Flanagan & Nutting. A separation took place in 1842. The present partner, W. J. Nutting, joined his father in 1852, and his brother, H. C. Nutting, a year later. The business was taken to the Barbican in 1855; it remaining there for twenty-five years, when it was transferred to 106 Southward street, the premises having previously been occupied by the London branch of the seed business of Peter Lawson & Sons, of Edinburgh.

Hurst & Sons.

This firm was founded in 1843 by William Hurst and William G. Mullen, who, for many years previously had been assistants in the house of Warner & Warner, Cornhill. In a few years Mr. McMullen withdrew, and set up in business in St. Martin's Lane, W. C. Then Mr. William Hurst joined his father, the business becoming known as Hurst & Son; and subsequently N. Sherwood, so well known in the seed trade, became the head of the firm, in the administration of which he is assisted by his sons, William and Edward Sherwood. The headquarters of the firm now are at 152 Houndsditch, where a very extensive business has been built up, says Richard Dean in the Horticultural Trade Journal.

TORONTO.

The carnation show held under the auspices of the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association and the Horticultural Association took place in St. George's hall on February 16. Although the exhibition was not as great a success in point of quantity as in former years, the quality was certainly up to the mark, if not ahead of other years. Especially might this be said of the American stock exhibited, which we reluctantly admit quite outclassed our Canadian product. The exhibit of the Chicago Carnation Co., which is at present defender of the Canadian challenge cup, was certainly fine. They put up a vase of Cardinal, a vase of Enchantress and a vase of Lady Bountiful. Lady Bountiful, scoring 95 points, captured the cup and thus the Chicago Carnation Co. won the cup for the second time. Another competitor for the cup was Palmer & Son, of Lancaster, N. Y., with Red Lawson. This shipment unfortunately arrived frozen and consequently was not in good condition to compete. C. W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens Co., exhibited Robert Craig, a good red which showed up fine and scored 92 points. J. E. Haines exhibited by J. E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa., also red, scored well and looked promising. E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, sent an exhibit of Lady Bountiful and Cardinal which unfortunately was delayed through a snow blockade and did not arrive until 6 o'clock, too late for judging. This stock, however, was scored and Lady Bountiful scored 95 and Cardinal 97 points. This would have captured the cup had it arrived in time.

For the best display of carnations John H. Dunlop, of this city, won first and the Chicago Carnation Co. second. For display of cut flowers, John H. Dunlop was first and Wm. Fendley, Brampton, second. For bank of plants, Manton Bros. were first and J. H. Dunlop second. It might be noted that outside of carnations the roses exhibited by Dunlop were of very fine quality, considering that at present roses are practically off crop with all growers, as the weather has been very severe. Fendley as usual showed some fine violets. His carnations were good flowers but weak in stem. A shipment of Carnation My Maryland from H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., did not arrive until two days after the show. Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, was judge and as usual his awards were according to merit.

Ontario has during the past week been visited by very severe weather and consequently the railroads were in many cases badly tied up and quantities of cut flowers are being refused by the express companies, as they cannot get them through in time. In this way shipping trade has been considerably hampered. City trade has been good and February has seen considerable improvement over January business.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The Monmouth County Horticultural Society had a very lively meeting on February 17. The ball committee reported over $50 surplus. The president, George H. Hale, had some very fine violets on exhibition. Several members of the society offered prizes for an essay on "Rose Culture under Glass." The assistant gardeners only can compete for these prizes. The papers must be sent in before March 3, to the secretary, H. A. Kettel, Fair Haven, N. J. Several other subjects will be taken up at subsequent meetings, and prizes given for same. The judges on these papers are: H. A. Kettel, N. Butterbach, Wm. Turner, Geo. H. Hale and W. W. Kennedy. Different committees appointed by the president are: Investigating committee, Wm. Turner, N. Butterbach, H. A. Kettel; executive committee, C. H. Walling, T. S. Barkuloo, H. Longstreet, John Yeomans and P. Hicks; exhibition committee, H. McCarron, W. W. Kennedy, H. A. Kettel and Wm. Turner. CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10 00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Carnation Victory This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

After six weeks of intense cold and snow this city is beginning to emerge into something like decent weather, but in spite of the inclemency of the weather, business has surpassed every other week with the exception of Christmas. St. Valentine's day at some of the stores was in excess, even, of Christmas. The supply of good stock is very short; in fact, of any stock, with the exception of bulbous stock, which has been increasing in quantity and quality. Roses have been very scarce, it being impossible at times to get even culls. Carnations have also been very short, the cold, cloudy weather with the glass covered with snow, over three weeks in some places, retarding the growth, making it almost impossible to fill local orders. Violets have been plentiful except upon St. Valentine's day, when the large supply was soon exhausted at an advance to three times the regular price.

Some large wedding decorations, with quite a number of small receptions, are keeping the stores pretty well cleaned up. Some fine tulips, daffodils, jonquils and Dutch hyacinths are to be seen, while Romans and narcissi are almost a glut, there being no call for them except for funeral work. Prices are steady for what good stock can be obtained and the indications point to very good business the coming week.

Various Notes.

Two of the largest weddings since the opening of the social season here were held the past week. One, the wedding of Miss Lewis, included the decorating of Grace church and the banquet hall of the Coates House and was beautifully arranged by Samuel Murray.

W. L. Rock had charge of the Currier-Dunlap wedding and it surpassed any previous event of that kind seen here for some time.

A visit to the greenhouses of Samuel Murray, which are in charge of that prince of good fellows, Wm. Sharp, is a pleasure long to be remembered. There are about 15,000 feet of glass. Longiflorum and Harrisii are the finest I have seen this year. One house is devoted entirely to hydrangeas. There are two houses full of Boston ferns, Piersoni and Adiantum Croweanum, while the rest of the houses are filling up rapidly with some fine bedding stock.

R. S. Brown & Son are sending in some fine carnations.

Chas. M. Wise is stocking up preparatory to the spring trade and reports business as improving at his place.

Ed. Ellsworth reports excellent business in the wholesale line and the entire force is kept busy getting out orders.

J. F. Noll, with Arthur Newell, visited Joplin the past week, inspecting a new arrival at his home there. It is a fourteen-pound boy. NARCISSUS.

MADISON, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held its regular meeting on February 8. The event of the evening was the reading of an essay on "The New Varieties of Chrysanthemums for 1905" by C. H. Totty. The paper was well received and a hearty vote of thanks accorded to Mr. Totty for his effort. It was supplemented by A. Herrington with a comparison of the European varieties and Australian as grown in America. Methods of seed sowing in Australia and New Zealand were explained and a fact stated new to many of us, that the flower buds in these places were taken in February instead of our usual time on account of the difference in geographical location.

Our next meeting promises to develop much excitement. F. W. Holt, of New York, has donated to the society, a pair of gum boots to be bowled for. After a short business session we are to adjourn to the alley and prove what we are made of. A committee composed of Messrs. Herrington, Totty and Duckham are to arrange the handicaps so that every member will have a show to win, and as most of us need the boots just now the rivalry will be keen. E. R.

SALES from the advertisement in the REVIEW have been very satisfactory.—W. H. Newman, Akron, N. Y.

PACIFIC COAST.

LOOMIS, CAL.—On February 11 Mitting & McGowan, the proprietors, sold the California Carnation Co. to Johnson & Taylor, of Sacramento, who will continue the business.

THE carnation fields of the Ocean Park Floral Co., Ocean Park, Cal., are located on the site of an old Indian village. During a recent visit Wm. A. Peterson, the Chicago nurseryman, who is a collector of Indian relics, picked up in the carnation fields 265 pounds of stone arrow heads, etc., which he sent home. Mr. Vawter, the proprietor, makes all visiting trade people welcome.

BUDDED ROSES.

Owing to the perfection with which roses are now being grown on various kinds of wild stock in California there is less stock grown from hard wood on its own roots each succeeding year. The public is gradually being educated up to the fact that it is possible to get big, strong plants one year from bud that are large enough to set out with immediate effect and they will accept nothing else. There was a time but a few years ago when each rose grower had a patch of roses grown on their own roots, and a sorry looking sight they were when compared with what is being offered today in the same varieties. I handled some stock this week, all of which was less than one year from bud. Paul Neyron, Niphetos, Perle des Jardins, Bride, Mme. Caroline Testout, Souvenir du President Carnot and Mrs. John Laing, none less than three feet high and heavy in proportion. This is the outcome of what we have learned in the scientific growing of budded stock. Certainly these plants were grown under favorable conditions and represent first quality. There were not less than fifty others of the most popular kinds that ranged in size from two feet and over and all from less than one year's growth of bud. The wild stock had been planted the year before, so that the stock and bud together were really two years old. Even with the extra trouble of budding the stock, however, they were far ahead of anything grown on their own roots for the same length of time. Not only for garden planting, but also for greenhouse forcing, are these roses in great demand, for the rule holds good for inside as well as outside, that to have big flowers and long stems you must have plants in proportion.

It was urged for many years, and justly so, that roses budded on wild stock were not desirable because of their suckering proclivities, but we have learned that wild stock can be disbudded,—that is, all the eyes taken out before it is planted except, of course, a couple on top, under which the variety wanted is inserted. This removed the greatest objection to budded stock and when, by further experimenting, we discovered what particular sorts grew especially well on certain wild stocks the plants then filled all requirements.

With some roses, however, it is profitable to grow them on their own roots, because they are easy to root, but with the majority of the tea roses it is not possible to root more than thirty per cent of the cuttings planted and of these usually one-half are too small the first season to sell for first-class stock. Many of our best varieties make poor, weak roots and there is nothing that will make as poor an impression on a buyer as to see big tops and poor roots.

With budded stock there is no difficulty in averaging seventy-five per cent salable stock from the cuttings planted of wild stock, afterwards budded, and good roots can be always guaranteed. Some of the climbing roses make very fair plants on their own roots the first season but there are many of our best sorts that cannot be rooted at all. We grow Marechal Niel, Cloth of Gold and Climbing Niphetos six to eight feet in one season when budded on hardy wild stock and on their own roots I have never been able to root over twenty-five per cent of the cuttings planted outside.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are having considerable rainy weather, which was preceded by several severe frosts. We had, in fact, the coldest weather of the season during the latter part of last week. Heliotropes, geraniums, callas, etc., had been blooming constantly outdoors all winter but all oudoor flowers except violets and bulbous stock are now out of business. This makes cheap flowers very scarce, especially in the line of white stock, and it will be several months before we shall have much to choose from. Roses and carnations are only in fair supply at present and the prices hold firm. A few late blooming narcissi are still in market and daffodils are plentiful. The supply of violets shortened somewhat early in the week but they are now very plentiful again. Freesia and valley are in good supply. Yellow acacia is being used in large quantities for decorating, as it is the only cheap flower to be had at this time. Smilax and maidenhair are both very scarce. A few good longiflorums are seen. They cost the retailers from $1.50 to $2 per dozen.

Various Notes.

The engagement of Fred Seulberger, of Oakland, to Miss MacDonald, also of that city, is announced. The wedding will take place in the early summer.

Leopold & Ephraim have had a very busy season. Several big decorations have added considerable to their month's receipts.

A. Mann, Jr., is devoting considerable of his time to the florists' supply portion of his business. He carries a large stock.

P. J. Meyer, of Burlingame, is cutting some extra good Prosperity and Enchantress carnations at present.

G.

AURORA, ILL.—The Aurora Greenhouse Co. has been awarded the contract for ornamental planting at the street railway's new pleasure park at Plainfield. Large quantities of bedding plants will be required.

Vegetable Forcing.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—Cucumbers, 35c to $1.40 doz.; leaf lettuce, 18c to 20c case; head lettuce, $2 to $5 bbl.

BOSTON, Feb. 21.—Cucumbers, $4 to $14 box; radishes, 25c bundle; tomatoes, 50c lb.; mint, 75c doz. bunches; hothouse spinach, $1 to $1.50 bushel; hothouse dandelions, $2 bushel; parsley, $1 bushel; mushrooms, 40c to 60c lb.; rhubarb, 4c to 5c lb.

VEGETABLE PLANTS.

For the proper care of vegetable plants two houses are necessary, as there is so much difference in the temperature required by the different subjects that they cannot possibly be all done satisfactorily in one house. They can be divided into two sections. The first should comprise such subjects as egg plant, tomatoes and peppers. These would require a minimum temperature of not less than 60 degrees. The second section, which would comprise lettuce, cabbage and cauliflower, would do better at a minimum temperature of 45 degrees. The raising of vegetable plants is often taken up as a side issue and too often they are crowded up into any odd corner, which crowding results in weakly, drawn-up plants that are no credit to the grower and prove very unsatisfactory to the purchaser. If a business is to be established in this line any odd corner is not good enough to produce first-class stock; such stock can only be grown where ample space is allowed, where sufficient light and air are given and where judicious care is taken of the plants.

Another important point is the gradual hardening off of the plants before time for setting out. For this purpose cold frames are a great convenience, but where these are not available they can be handled by leaving all possible air on, both night and day, for about eight days previous to setting outdoors in the pots or flats in which they are established. Some means should be provided for covering up should the nights be cold just after setting out, but for a few days, at least, before planting out they should be fully exposed to the weather both night and day. Where care is exercised in this respect the plants are not liable to feel the change and little or no check should result.

If the retail grower could dispose of the majority of his plants within a reasonable time after the planting season arrives, he would be relieved of a good deal of trouble. But, unfortunately, some customers are rather slow in getting down to business. And it is not only the extra trouble of taking care of the plants for these late comers that proves annoying to the grower, but the plants are apt to suffer, even with the best of care, if they have to be kept hanging on for any length of time. Any of the subjects are apt to become more or less stunted, but some suffer more than others. Cauliflower, for instance, if allowed to get stunted is almost sure to "button" after being planted out. A good deal of this trouble can sometimes be averted by the grower. If he has any means of reaching his customers he can often induce them to begin operations early and in this way get his plants out within a reasonable time, save himself a good deal of trouble and give his customer better satisfaction. BIG PUMPKINS.

One of the clothing merchants in my town has an annual pumpkin show in front of his store each fall in which he offers in goods some $75 in prizes for the biggest vegetable. No. 7 is as high up as I can get. Can you give me any suggestions as to how I can shove a pumpkin up from notch No. 7 to notch No. 1? It makes no difference whether the article is pumpkin or squash. Neither does color or shape count. Such being the case, what variety shall I plant and how shall I care for it? I have a sandy loam. Will bone flour or horn shavings or blood be of any help? I shall give the plant plenty of barn-yard manure. One market gardener told me the nicest tomato plants he ever grew were in soil scraped up from under the floor of a country slaughter house where blood had leached through. B.

The largest varieties of pumpkins I know are Jumbo and Mammoth King. Pumpkins are about the heaviest feeders in the vegetable kingdom. I have seen them grow on top of a manure pile without their showing signs of having too rich food. Of course the manure was pretty well rotted. They are what might be called a soft feeder and, although bone flour, etc., might help them a little, I would prefer the softer food in the shape of barn-yard manure or liquid fertilizer. Prepare your ground by giving plenty of barn-yard manure, say a couple of good barrow loads to each plant, but fix your soil so that the seeds will not come in contact with the manure, or it would cause them to rot. Leave only one plant in each hill and leave but one pumpkin on each plant. When once your pumpkin gets to swelling well check the growth a little by pinching out the points of the shoots, and about twice a week give the hills a good soaking of liquid manure. Wash from the barn-yard is as good as anything but if this is strong it should be diluted with water. It is better to give the liquid weak and often rather have it too strong.

RED SPORT (Of Maceo.)

Red Sport has proved the greatest money-maker we ever grew, producing more good blooms to the square foot of bench room than any other variety on the place. During the glut the first part of January we could only get four cents for fancy Lawson and sold every Red Sport we had at five cents. Every grower who was here in December was carried away with its possibilities, as a future supply of a "holly berry red" for Xmas. There is no pick in the blooms. They are all a uniform size and color. There are 40,000 or 50,000 buds showing in different stages of development at this time and there is not a split or off color bloom in the lot and every plant is the picture of health. We will plant 20,000 plants of Red Sport for next season's bloom and the cut is already engaged by two of Washington's leading retailers. Red Sport is an easy doer and everyone can grow it as successfully as we can. Price for Feb. 20th delivery—12 for $1.50; 25 for $2.50; 50 for $4.00 post-paid; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. We guarantee stock to arrive in good condition and be well rooted.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Notwithstanding the extraordinary cold, the past week has been a good one so far as business has been concerned. St. Valentine, that good saint who is credited with bringing hearts together, had much to do with the first of the week and brought many dollars to the pockets of the florists. Next year he will be given more consideration than he has heretofore in the way of special boxes for the arrangement of floral valentines.

Various Notes.

Geo. L. Huscroft, of Steubenville, has bought eleven acres of land on the main street, adjoining the cemetery, on which he expects to move his greenhouse plant in the near future.

Geo. Burke and his assistant, John Jones, are beginning to get things in shape, looking forward to the Easter show at Schenley park, which is one of the floral features of our city.

T. P. Langhans, who is a follower of Isaak Walton, entertained about thirty of his fisher friends last Thursday evening and the decorations were well worthy of mention. The parlor was arranged to represent a fishing camp. The floor was covered with a green rug, the furniture all being removed, the walls and ceiling covered with wild smilax, scrub oak with the old leaves, and Norway spruce. The tent stood at one end of the room, with the American flag over it. A campfire in the center of the room, with oars, nets, rods and lines, and all paraphernalia of a fisherman, completed the decorations. As we entered the room a quartette from the fishing club were lying around the fire, with only the light of the fire and a lantern, singing "You're as welcome as the flowers in May." After all had enjoyed the effect of this realistic night scene, the lights were turned up and tables and chairs produced, and progressive euchre and fishing stories filled in the time until supper, when all were compelled to pass through the tent singly before going out to the dining room. I am not saying what was in the tent, but sometimes you heard a sissing noise, and some staid longer than others. The tables were made of bare white pine boards and formed three sides of a square. We ate off tin plates and drank from tin cups all of the good things of the season, and after a few witty stories several made eloquent speeches.

Color is bright pink, with reverse of petals clear silvery pink, thus producing a combination that is exceedingly effective either in daylight or artificial light. Growth is very free and exceptionally vigorous and will prove satisfactory every month in the year. Delivery strictly in rotation, beginning April first. PRICES: Own Root—$25 per 100; $55 per 250; $100 per 500; $200 per 1000. Grafted—$30 per 100; $70 per 250; $130 per 500; $260 per 1000.

JOHN N. MAY, - - SUMMIT, NEW JERSEY.

The Market.

The flower business in this city has been fairly good in spite of the continuance of cold weather. Roses of all kinds are running rather scarce; consequently high prices prevail. Good tea roses are bringing $15 to $20 per hundred. Beauties are unusually scarce and bringing fancy prices, ordinary 18-inch to 20-inch stems $5 per dozen, long stems $9 to $12 per dozen. Azaleas, lilac and all other blooming plants are fine but on account of the cold weather they do not move. Tulips and jonquils go at $2 to $3 per hundred, violets at 50 cents.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club for February was well attended. Chairmen of the various convention committees all reported progress. The souvenir book for 1905 is in the hands of Vice-president J. R. Freeman, who brought a copy to the meeting for opinion. The club was very much pleased with the book, as well as the estimates for printing. A committee was also appointed to receive and entertain the executive committee of the S. A. F. when it meets here in March. Several other committees are resting on oars as they are powerless to go further with their work until after the executive committee meeting. All members are notified that the annual election of officers will take place at our next meeting.

Peter Bisset, of Twin Oaks, showed his new rose. This is the result of a cross between Liberty and Mme. Abel Chatenay. The color is intermediate between the two parents, on first opening the buds are a very deep pink, much darker than Bridesmaid, and gradually fade to the silvery pink of La France at its best. The originator says it is a free grower, sending up fine stems with good large flowers. F. H. K.

Des Moines, Ia.—An explosion of gasoline in the engine room at J. F. Marshall's on February 13 threatened the destruction of the establishment but the greenhouses were saved.

FOR COLD CLIMATE.

I am building a new greenhouse 22x40 feet with a glass partition in the center. I shall use the east half for roses and carnations. The two side benches are three feet wide and the two center benches are six feet wide. Please tell me how many pipes I need and how to arrange them to maintain 65 degrees in weather occasionally 40 to 45 below zero. Which is the best and the cheapest on fuel, hot water or steam? Which is the best kind of boiler to save fuel? I shall use hard coal. The boiler will be six to seven feet below the ground level. P. J. K.

Under the circumstances I judge that a hot water system would be preferable to any other. The house 22x40 feet can be piped with 2-inch pipe by supplying eighteen runs the length of the house. At least three flow pipes should be maintained to supply three manifolds containing five returns each. The piping can all be arranged under the benches. An expansion tank of at least thirty gallons capacity should be connected with the main return and located twelve or fifteen feet above the top of the boiler. A boiler with a capacity of about 1,000 feet radiation should be employed. The type of boiler which is most economical of fuel is of the return tubular from or a close approach to that type. There are several good boilers of this type on the market. L. C. C.

Highland Park, Mich.—A. A. Frey & Son have just installed a new boiler made by the Burns Boiler Co., West De Pere, Wis. They had a new house to heat with it.

Hinsdale, Mass.—The fern dealers are having a good deal of trouble with the earliest lots of hardy cut ferns put into storage. Many are a total loss and others sent to customers at the increased price now asked either come back or an allowance is demanded for bad ferns and the work of picking over.

The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder

MAMARONECK, N. Y.
I tried the 5 lb. trial package of The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder in two of my houses one night and the following night I gave a 60-foot house a thorough smoking. Result: I would like you to send me 100 lbs. of the Fumigating Kind. W. H. DANIELS.

MAYWOOD, ILL.
The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder is great stuff; it keeps one's houses clean as a sheet. I can heartily recommend it. ALBERT F. AMLING.

A FREE trial five-pound bag will cost you nothing more than the express charges on it. The trial bag will prove our assertion that it is the most effective, cleanest and quickest as well as the cheapest (10 cents per 100-foot house) article to fumigate with. All aphis killed in one night—our booklet tells of it; we mail one on request.

EXPANSION TANK.

I expect to build two houses 18x80 to be heated by water in 4-inch cast-iron pipes. Can I dispense with the expansion tanks at the far ends of the houses and have one large tank over the boiler on the main flow? Are eight runs of 4-inch pipes enough for a house for roses and six pipes enough for carnations under weather conditions in Kentucky? I have a No. 15 Hitchings boiler. J. J. C.

Yes, you can dispense with the open expansion tank at the far end of the house. Instead of a large tank connected with the main flow it would be better to connect the expansion tank with the main return near the boiler. A 1-inch pipe tapped into the main return near the boiler and carried eight or ten feet above into a 50-gallon tank should provide ample expansion for the system. Eight runs of 4-inch cast-iron pipe should be ample for the rose house if the boiler has capacity to maintain water at 180 degrees. Six runs under the same conditions should be ample for the carnation house. L. C. C.

TOO FEW PIPES.

We have a new and well built house 25x60 feet and thirteen feet to ridge heating with a Gorton No. 212½ boiler set in a pit and burning egg coal. On each side of the house there are five rows of 2-inch pipe, also the center aisle has two rows under benches, two rows each side of the walk. In the recent cold weather in New York we could only keep 45 degrees at night. What is wrong? M. O'C.

If the house you mention, 25x60 feet, contains fourteen runs of 2-inch pipe, or in all 840 feet, it lacks 120 feet, or two runs, of having sufficient piping to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees during cold weather with hot water at 180 degrees. It is not quite clear whether the house contains fourteen or sixteen runs of pipe. The boiler should have a capacity sufficient to supply about 800 feet of radiation, although the sixteen runs of 2-inch pipe will only provide about 600 feet of radiation. L. C. C.

TO-BAK-INE

FUMIGATING POWDER.

This powder contains a definite amount of nicotine and will be found uniform at all times. Slow burning. Sure death to Aphis.

TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING POWDER has kept down all signs of Aphis in carnation and rose houses. It leaves no odor on the flowers and has not in the slightest hurt either flower or foliage on the roses, as does burning tobacco stems.—WILLIAM SCOTT, Buffalo.

WE FIND TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING POWDER very satisfactory. We would like 100 lbs. shipped at once.—ARLIN & ARLIN, Clyde, Ohio.

MEMORIES OF THE HOLLYHOCK.

It was in the early seventies, says a writer in the Gardeners' Chronicle, that the dread hollyhock disease (Puccinia malvacearum) was devasting the collections of plants about the country. One of the features of the fungus is its rapid germination, and in 1873-4 it appeared to be widely diffused all over Europe, and especially in this country. Nowhere was its virulence more severely felt than in the fine collection then in the possession of William Chater, at Saffron Walden. So destructive was it that I believe the catalogue Chater issued in the autumn of 1874 was the last the veteran distributed. It is a remarkable catalogue, as it contains the names of 109 varieties raised by Chater, and a few by the Rev. Edward Hawke. I have a vivid recollection of how these two celebrated growers of the hollyhock used to pit their strength against each other at Bishop Auckland in the class for twelve spikes; and such spikes! Shall we ever see the like again?

In 1842 Chater was gardener to a Squire Stephenson, at Stepleburntished, and becoming enamored of the hollyhock he began both to grow it and to raise new varieties. The first hollyhock which it is believed he had in his garden was Napoleon, yellow-and-red; it was of French extraction and rather double. Mr. Chater carefully fertilized this with one of the improved varieties raised by C. Baron, and the first variety he obtained from seed was named Comet, a rosy scarlet flower. Finding the hollyhock rising in popularity, Mr. Chater started in business at Saffron Walden in the early forties, and in 1844 or thereabouts he issued his first catalogue.

Meanwhile Adam Paul, of Cheshunt, was commencing to improve the flower, and raised some fine varieties, but W. Chater distanced all his competitors as a producer of fine seedlings. I visited him at the time the fungus was most destructive, and it was pitiable to see how the stock suffered, fine varieties becoming wholly extinguished, to the great grief of the veteran. Young stock in frames and growing plants went down before the ravages of the puccinia, never to rise again. Happily for the hollyhock and those who admire it, the flower is being re-established in public favor. A few of Mr. Chater's raising have survived, and now his successors, Messrs. Webb & Brand, are producing varieties of excellent properties from seed.

It was high cultivation which produced fine hollyhocks in the past, and will do so again. Old garden soil trenched two feet deep, and with the addition of plenty of well-decomposed manure, is favorable to the production of strong growth and fine flowers. It was an old practice to set out the plants in the open in the autumn; but if the soil is one retentive of moisture, wet is likely to be injurious in winter; while the hollyhock is a moisture-loving plant in summer. Old tufts which have flowered are left in the ground to procure stock, and the practice is resorted to of removing the mould round the neck of the plant to the width of six inches, and filling up with sand level with the surface, and then the action of wet and also of any harmful insects is not so injurious. Plants of fine varieties propagated in summer are best wintered in a cold frame, and then planted out in March and April; it has been found that they will bloom as finely and as early as when planted out in autumn.

HOLLOW BLOCKS FOR WALLS.

I want to inquire if any of the readers of the Review have had experience with greenhouse walls built of hollow concrete blocks? There is a concern in my town which makes a popular patent building block, using sharp sand and Portland cement. The blocks have open spaces and when laid up make what may well be called a hollow wall. The makers claim it to be nonporous and hence frost and dampness proof. The blocks are 8x9x24 inches and the makers claim it is cheaper than any other kind of good wall. Posts for gutter supports need be only about thirty inches long, 1½-inch pipe set into the wall and made secure by cement. I intend remodeling my houses and making some additions and want to use the best material. If anyone has used such hollow blocks for walls I should be glad to have him give his experience. J. H. S.

GLAZING AND PIPING.

I am thinking of building another house this spring and would like to know which you would recommend, butted or lapped glass? In my houses the putty does not stay; it falls out like flour. The new house is to be 18x70 and about ten feet to the ridge, running north and south. How many runs of pipe will be needed to maintain 60 degrees under Massachusetts weather conditions? The hole in the heater is for a 4-inch pipe. R. S. H.

In a humid climate like Massachusetts, where the mercury reaches a low degree several times during the winter, I do not think it would be wise to use butted glass. It is almost impossible to make a tight roof with butted glass. If good putty is used and the work is done during warm weather and the sash bars kept well painted both outside and inside there should be no difficulty in maintaining a tight roof with lapped glass. With lapped glass, however, no lap should be more than one-eighth of an inch wide. If I read your question aright, that you wish to use 4-inch pipe, six runs arranged so as to place a loop under each of the three benches will be sufficient to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees provided the furnace heats the water to 180 degrees. I BOUGHT a good deal of stock through the REVIEW for my trade in 1904 and I want to continue the paper, as I find it very valuable.—NICHOLAS HIMMER, Meramec Highlands, Mo.

"Absolutely safe and reliable. Ask your friends."

With a CALDWELL TANK and TOWER

you can store water and use it at the exact moment to bring the best results for your early plants.

Our catalogue tells you what such a plant will cost.
